12. — and even make this city as Tophet.] A place of slaughter and burial for the inhabitants. Bp. Hall.

13. — upon whose roofs they have burned incense unto all the host of heaven.] The Jews having their houses with flat roofs (see Deut. xxii 8) there dedicated altars to the host of heaven, where they could have the fullest view of them: see 2 Kings xxiii 12, Zeph. i 5. W. Lowth.

14. — he stood in the court of the Lord's house.] The great court, which is called the "outer court," Ezek. xlvi 2.

15. — Shallum, her towns.] All the cities of Judah and Benjamin, which acknowledged Jerusalem for their metropolis, subordinate to her. Dr. Blayney.

Now Pashur the son of Immer the priest, &c.] Immer was the sixteenth in order of the four and twenty courses of the priests: see 1 Chron. xxiv 14: and this Dr. Blayney, by being head of his family, had a principal authority in all matters relating to the temple, and keeping good order there. He is therefore called "chief governor," or "a chief governor in the house of the Lord," see 1 Chron. xxiv 5. So Hilkiah, Zechariah, and Jehiel, are called "rulers of the house of God," 2 Chron. xxxv 8, because the first of them was chief priest, and the other two probably heads of their courses. W. Lowth.

2. — the stocks.] More properly "the house of correction." The original word occurs twice besides, chap. xxix 26, and 2 Chron. xvi 10, in both which places it is rendered simply a prison, and is mentioned as a punishment due to one inflicted on one, who assumed the character of a prophet without a proper call, or was presumed to have behaved unbecomingly as such. It is probable that Pashur, having caused Jeremiah to be beaten or scourged, ordered him into confinement afterwards, whence he released him the next day. Dr. Blayney.

— the high gate of Benjamin.] This gate was probably on the north side of the city, (Ezek. ix 2,) and so named from its situation towards the tribe of Benjamin. Dr. Wells.

5. — Magor-missabib.] See the margin. God's calling him by that name implies, that He would render him such as He called him. So when God called Abram by the new name of Abraham, He assigns the reason, "for a father of many nations have I made thee," Gen. xvii 5. Dr. Blayney.

5. — all the strength of this city, &c.] All its wealth, and all that the inhabitants have gotten by their industry. The word rendered "strength" is elsewhere translated "treasure," Prov. xi 6, Ezek. xxii 25. W. Lowth. Or, the word rendered "strength" means the men of war, who constitute the strength of a city or state. Dr. Blayney.

7 O Lord, thou hast deceived me &c.] The original word here may signify to "persuade or allure, and that by fair, as well as by indirect means. The passage alludes to that encouragement, which the Prophet received from God, either at his first appointment, chap. 1 7, 8, 17—19, or afterwards when he began to complain of hardships, chap. xv 19—21. The meaning therefore of the Prophet's words in this place is consistent with the most perfect piety and reverence towards God who, he says, had prevailed on him to undertake an honourable, though painful, employment, and had encouraged him to go on with it by assurances, which he acknowledges to have been in due good, ver. 11—19 notwithstanding the unmerited scorn and reproaches of his countrymen had often tempted him to wish that he could withdraw himself out of the way, ver. 8, 9 Dr Blayney

8 For since I spake, I cried out, I cried violence and spoil,] Or "I cried out of violence, and complained aloud of spoil. Since I began to prophesy, I have reason to complain of the hardships which I have undergone upon that account see chap. xi 19, &c., xv 15, xviii 18. This verse may also be thus explained. Since I began to prophesy as God commanded me, I have freely expostulated with my countrymen of the violence and oppression of which they have been guilty, see chap. vi 7 and therefore all the requital that I have had for the faithful discharge of my office has been contempt and ill usage W Louth

9 — was in mine heart as a burning fire.] What is here meant probably is that the conscience of the Prophet would not let him be easy in suppressing that which he knew it was his duty to speak out. In like manner St Paul says of himself, that "necessity was laid upon him so that woe would be to him if he preached not the Gospel the dispensation of which was committed unto him" 1 Cor. ix 16, 17. The Psalmist makes use of the like expression "the fire burned, to denote the inward agitation he felt, whilst he endeavoured to stifle the sentiments which laboured for utterance, Ps. xxix 3 Dr Blayney

If we follow the received translation as the expression is the same with Psalm xxxi 13, so the sense seems to be much the same in both places, namely, I from the slanderous reports raised about me, I had reason to apprehend some evil design against my life as well from treacherous friends as from open enemies W Louth

14 Cursed be the day &c.] What we here read is a lamentation written in a poetical strain, like the dirges which the mourning women used to sing, wherein strong poetical figures are used and all the circumstances brought in, that are proper to raise the passions, but which it would be extremely wrong to interpret in a strict and literal sense, and therefore the unprecations of the Prophet are not to be looked upon as so many expressions of indignation and malice, but rather of mourning and sorrow. Divested of this poetical heightening, all that the Prophet says amounts only to this, that the man, who had brought his father the tidings of his birth, had been in reality the messenger of all news instead of good, for that, as things had turned out with him, it would have been a kinder and more charitable thing to have strangled him in the womb, than to have assisted, hang together into the world, to lead a life of so much bitterness in the first years of his life W Louth Dr Blayney Compare Job iii 1 under the

CHAP XXI.

1 Jeremiah sendeth to Jeremiah to enquire the event of Nebuchadrezzar's war. 3 Jeremiah foretelleth a hard siege and miserable captivity. 8 He counselleth the people to fall to the Chaldeans, 11 and upbraiideth the king's house.

THE word which came unto Jeremiah from the LORD, when king Zedekiah sent unto him Pashur the son of Melchiah, and Zephaniah the son of Maaseiah the priest, saying,

2 Enquire, I pray thee, of the LORD for us, for Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon maketh war against us, if so be that the LORD will deal with us according to all his wondrous works, that he may go up from us.

3 ¶ Then said Jeremiah unto them, Thus shall ye say to Zedekiah

4 Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Behold, I will turn back the weapons of war that are in your hands, wherewith ye fight against the king of Babylon, and against the Chaldeans, which besiege you without the walls, and I will assemble them into the midst of this city.

5 And I myself will fight against you with an outstretched hand and with a strong arm, even in anger, and in fury, and in great wrath.

6 And I will smite the inhabitants of this city, both man and beast: they shall die of a great pestilence.

7 And afterward, saith the LORD, I will deliver Zedekiah king of Judah, and his servants, and the people, and such as are left in the city from the pestilence, from the sword, and from the famine, into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and into the hand of their enemies, and into the hand of those that seek their life: and he shall smite them with the edge of the sword, he shall not spare them, neither have pity, nor have mercy.

8 ¶ And unto this people thou shalt say, Thus saith the LORD, Behold, I set before you the way of life, and the way of death.

9 He that abideth in this city shall die by the sword, and by the famine, and by the pestilence: but he that goeth out, and falleth to the Chaldeans that besiege you, he shall live, and his life shall be unto him for a prey.

Chap XXI From the two first verses of this chapter we learn that it was delivered in answer to a message sent by king Zedekiah, when Nebuchadrezzar was coming to make war against him: it is about the ninth year of his reign. All the intermediate prophecies therefore of Jehoiakim's reign, and of the eight first years of Zedekiah's ought properly to precede this.

This chapter contains the first of those prophecies, which were delivered by Jeremiah subsequent to the revolt of Zedekiah, and he breaking out of the war thereupon; and which are continued on to the taking of Jerusalem, related in chap xxxix, in the following order chap xxi, xxxiv, xxxvii, xxxix, xliii, xxxviii, xxxix.

The message in this chapter has by some been confounded with that in chap xxxvii but they appear to be clearly distinct from each other. From the reply given to that in chap xxxvii, it is manifest, that the Chaldeans, who had been besieging Jerusalem or some time, had already raised the siege, and were gone to meet the Egyptian army, leaving the Jews in great hopes that they would never return again. But the terms of this message seem to imply, that the king of Babylon had but just commenced his hostilities against Judah, of which Zedekiah informs the Prophet, as a matter that might not have come to his certain knowledge, and which was necessary to intercede with God, that He would divert the extraordinary interposition, as He had been in favour of His people, ver 1, 2. The answer therefore contains no notice of any siege or operations past, but simply foretells the future, which it is declared should and unfortunately, Pharaoh would take an active part against the inhabitants of Judah, and would deliver both their city, and also the king and his servants into the hands of their merciless enemies, ver 3-7. It is further shewn, that the only resource of the people for safety was to surrender to the Chaldeans, ver 8-10. And for the king's house, they are warned to prevent the effects of God's indignation by doing justice and right, and not to trust to their strong hold, which would stand them in no stead when God was bent on their destruction, ver 11 to the end. The time of this transaction therefore I conceive to be in the ninth year of Zedekiah, previous to the siege of Jerusalem, which began in the tenth month of that year. Dr Blayney

Ver 2 — [Nebuchadrezzar] Dr Kennicott has observed, that in the printed copies the name of the king of Babylon is thus spelt in twenty-six other places of this book, and in ten places Nebuchadrezzar. There is a great variation in the manuscripts. Dr Blayney

But his sons and his great men were slain by the command of Nebuchadrezzar, see 2 Kings xxv 7, 8. It is common with all writers to express that indefinitely, which is true of the greater part of the persons concerned. W Lenth

9 — he that goeth out, — shall live.] God had declared His purpose of giving up the Jews and the neighbouring countries to the dominion of the Chaldeans, chap xxv 9, xxvii 6. So they who would comply with his declared will, should preserve their lives, the rest should be destroyed, as fighting against God. W Lenth

14 — I will kindle a fire in the forest thereof. The word forest is often metaphorically taken for a city in the prophetic writings because its stately buildings, or its principal inhabitants, resemble tall cedars standing in their several ranks See chap xvii 7 Is. xxxvii 24, Ezek xx 46, Zech xi 1 W Lenth

The Prophet in this chapter declares, that if the people would submit themselves to the Chaldeans, and obey the voice of God, they should be spared, but if not, they should perish. Thus God gave proofs of His goodness, at the same time that He exercised His justice. This shows very plainly, that the pardon of sinners is not so determined, but that they may prevent it. God is always inclined to pardon and spare them, even when He chastises them, and if at last He overwhelms them with His judgments, it is because He is forced to it by their impenitence Ostersald

Chap XXII The prophecy which follows to chap xxiii ver 9, was evidently delivered in the reign of Jehoiakim, for it speaks of his immediate predecessor as already gone into captivity, and foretells the death of Jehoiakim himself. It is likewise probable, that it followed immediately after what is said, in the 19th and 20th chapters, to have passed in the temple precincts, from whence, as from higher ground, the Prophet is ordered to "go down to the house of the king of Judah." Compare chap xxxvi. 12

In the six following verses, with which the prophecy concludes, the people are comforted with gracious promises of future blessings, of their return from captivity, and of happier times under better governors, of the glorious establishment of the Messianic kingdom, and, it may be, of the subsequent restoration of all the dispersed Israelites to dwell once more in their own land Dr Blayney

Ver 3 Thus saith the Lord Execute ye judgment &c Kings and magistrates are God's vicegerents, their principal business is to 'execute judgment' and justice in the earth. If they pervert or neglect this, they abuse the authority they have received of God, they rebel against their own legitimate Sovereign, and violate the great end and design of their office, at the same time that they sap and weaken by degrees the foundation of their own power Wogan

4 — then shall there enter in by the gates of this house under the note on chap xvii 25. Instead of "the gates of this house" the text there reads, "the gates of this city" and the context shews, that the prophecy is directed, not only to the king, but in particular, but likewise to the whole city of Jerusalem, the part of which was called the city of David, and the whole upon as a royal city, and the place of their king's residence. apt emblem of the reigning family, advanced to the highest rank and dignity in the state. (Gilead was the richest and most fertile part of the country.) Science we are taught, that the greater privileges any church or state enjoys, the sorer will prove its punishment, if it abuses the favour and goodness of God. Wogan

7 — they shall cut down thy choice cedars. The Prophet, having compared the king's palace or the city of Jerusalem to Lebanon (ver 6,) here pursues the metaphor, and threatens to destroy the houses and inhabitants by the Chaldean army: see the note on chap. xxi. 14. W. Lowth

8 And many nations shall pass by this city, &c. They who had heard that this city had been called the city of God, and the place of His especial residence, would be astonished to find it the scene of His judgments and vengeance. Thus was fulfilled that threatening of Moses, that God would make the Jews "an astonishment" to other nations, Deut. xxviii. 37. See likewise 1 Kings ix. 8. W. Lowth

10 Weep ye not for the dead, &c. "Weep not for the dead," that is, for the good Josiah, who, though dead, was happy, and in peace, but weep rather for his wicked son Shallum, or Jehoahaz, who, after a very short and impious reign, was carried captive into Egypt, and was never to return or see his native country any more. Wogan

11 — Shallum the son of Josiah. The son of Josiah, who immediately succeeded his father on the throne, was Jehoahaz, whom Pharaoh-necho deposed after a reign of three months, and carried captive to Egypt, where he died, 2 Kings xxiii. 30—34. It is also probable, that, before he ascended the throne, his name was Shallum, which he changed for Jehoahaz, as his brothers Jehoiakim and Mattaniah also assumed the names of Jehoahaz, and Zedekiah on the like occasion, 2 Kings xxiii. 34, xxiv. 18. Dr Blayney

13 Woe unto him that buildeth his house by unrighteousness, &c. The Prophet proceeds to denounce God's judgments against Jehoiakim, who succeeded Shallum, but taking no warning by his brothers fall, nor forsaking the sins that had caused it, becomes also a monument of Divine vengeance, and a fearful example to warn others. Wogan

14 — large chambers. Several modern travellers give accounts of the large and lofty halls, and of different contrivances for letting in fresh air into the eastern houses, and Sir J. Chardin speaks of the great size of the eastern windows. Harmer

— it is cieled with cedar, &c. In houses of better fashion in Barbary, the chambers are hung with velvet or damask from the middle of the wall downwards, the rest is adorned with the most ingenious wreathings and devices in stucco and fret-work. The ceiling is generally of wainscot, either very artfully painted, or else thrown into a variety of panels with gilded mouldings, and scrolls of the Koran intermixed. The Prophet Jeremiah exclaims against some of the eastern houses, that were "cieled with cedar, and painted with vermilion." Dr Shaw At Aleppo, the walls and ceilings of the state apartments are adorned with flowers, fruits, or other fancy ornaments, painted in lively colours, intermixed with gilding, and richly varnished. Dr Russell

15 Shalt thou reign, because thou closest thyself in cedar? &c. Dost thou think to reign ever the more happily and securely, because thou hast closed up thyself in cedar? Thy father, good king Josiah, lived in much content and happiness, by doing justice and right unto his subjects, and prospered in so doing. Bp Hall

— did not thy father eat and drink. That is, did not he live in a state suitable to his character? But at the same time governing with impartial justice and equity, he enjoyed in consequence thereof that solid and true felicity, which nothing but the practice of virtue and religion, emphatically called "the knowledge of God," can bestow. W. Lowth, Dr Blayney.

18 — They shall not lament for him, &c. The Prophet repeats part of the funeral dirge, which the public mourners used at such solemnities, see the note on chap. ix. 17, xx. 14, and compare 1 Kings xli. 30, signifying that Jehoiakim should not be buried with those solemn lamentations, with which the memory of his predecessors, particularly that of his father, had been honoured. see 2 Chron. xxxv. 25. *W. 26 And I will cast thee out, and thy mother that bare thee,] See this fulfilled in 2 Kings xxiv 15

28 Is this man Coniah a despised broken idol?] An interrogation by way of admiration The meaning is, Would any one have thought that this man, who was invested with royal dignity should come to be no better than a broken image of royalty divested of all power and authority, and an object of scorn and reproach? Nothing can be more contemptible than a broken idol which can be put to no further use, and is no longer an object of worship, but of derision W Lowth

30 — Write ye this man childless,] Not that Jeconiah died absolutely childless Other parts of Scripture positively assert him to have had children, 1 Chron iii 17, 18, Matt i 12 And both verse 28, and the subsequent part of this verse, imply that he either had, or should have, seed But the historians and chroniclers of the times are called upon and directed to set him down "childless," because he should have no child to succeed him on the throne Dr Blayney

It is no improper reflexion which may be drawn from the denunciations contained in this chapter, and from the subsequent accomplishment of them, that if the crimes here threatened with such special judgments, such as oppression and violence, fraud and extortion, covetousness and injustice, have destroyed the thrones and families of the mightiest princes, how shall sinners and oppressors of inferior quality expect to escape the punishments denounced against all such violations of the Divine law? Luke 3:4 ture saith the LORD

WOE be unto the pastors that destroy and scatter the sheep of my pas-

2 Therefore thus saith the LORD God of Israel against the pastors that feed my people, Ye have scattered my flock, and driven them away, and have not visited them: behold, I will visit upon you the evil of your doings, saith the LORD.

3 And I will gather the remnant of my flock out of all countries whither I have driven them, and will bring them again to their folds, and they shall be fruitful and increase.

Chap XXIII ver 2 — the pastors that feed my people. ] That undertake the care of My people, though they do not faithfully execute their trust. W Lomth

— have not visited them. behold, I will visit upon you &c. ] In Scripture language, to "visit" any one is to take such notice of him, and treat him in such a manner, as his condition requires. The day of God's visitation therefore when wicked persons or nations are the subject is the day of His vengeance, Is x 3, that "the Lord hath visited and redeemed His people," is the highest expression of His love, Luke 1:68. In this passage of Jeremiah these different senses of the word are found together in a beautiful opposition. Abp Secker "To visit, in scriptural language signifies to send good or evil judicially." Dr Johnson

3 And I will gather the remnant &c. ] In that happy time of restoration I will gather the remnant of Mine elect people out of all countries, both them of Judah and of Israel, into the bosom of My Church, where they shall be fruitful of all good works. Bp Hall

4 And I will set up shepherds over them which shall feed them. ] I will set over them holy, conscientious, able pastors, which shall feed them with the bread of life. Bp Hall

5 Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, &c. ] It hath been universally agreed by Christian, and allowed by several of the most eminent Jewish, interpreters, that this is a prophecy of the coming of Christ, and the glorious state of God's Church consequent thereupon. Nor is it possible to think of any other person or event, to which the characters here mentioned agree, whilst they all evidently conspire to point out the Messiah and His kingdom. Dean Stanhope

— I will raise unto David a righteous Branch. ] It is an usual figure, for the head of a family, and the descendants from him, to be represented by the root or body of a tree, and the branches growing out of that tree. God therefore having frequently declared, that the Messiah should be born of the house and lineage of David, the Prophet, here and in chap xxxiii 15, with allusion to this figure, mentions it as an act of Divine power and mercy, that "God would raise unto David a righteous Branch." Dean Stanhope The Messiah is often called "the Branch," to denote His descent from the stock of David. see Isai iv 2; Zech iii 8, vi 12 and compare Isaiah xi 1. W Lomth

— and a King shall reign and prosper. ] The Messiah was, continually from the time of David, foretold under this character, and, as such, He was expected by the Jews. Accordingly the New Testament abounds in affirmations concerning the regal character of Jesus, in conformity with which, though His kingly authority be not so visibly and powerfully exerted, as it shall one day be, yet we are not left under any reasonable doubt, whether our blessed Lord be the promised Messiah. The amazing vengeance taken on His murderers, in destroying their city and their constitution, and the no less wonderful success of His Gospel, propagated and preserved in opposition to all its enemies, are instances of His unlimited "power in heaven and in earth," Matt xviii 18. The enlightening of Jews and Gentiles, by bringing such multitudes of the one, and so many nations of the other, to

4 And I will set up shepherds over them which shall feed them: and they shall fear no more, nor be dismayed, neither shall they be lacking, saith the LORD.

5 ¶ Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign, and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth.

6 In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely: and this is his name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS.

the acknowledgment of the truth, are a partial completion of the prophecies, though there be still a nobler in reserve when the fulness of both shall come in. He reigns now actually in the hearts of men, and subdues the most formidable of our enemies by the holiness of His law, and the mighty operations of His grace. His dominion and conquest indeed will be much more absolute, when the time shall come for every enemy to be utterly destroyed. In the mean time we may be well assured, that what remains shall certainly come to pass, because nothing has hitherto failed of what was reasonable and expedient to be done, as an evidence of Christ's regal authority. Dean Stanhope

— and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. ] This character is elsewhere given of the kingdom of Christ, see Ps lxxii 2, Is xi 5, xxxii 1. His laws being the most perfect rule of righteousness, and He Himself the most impartial Rewarder of every man according to his works, Rev xxi 12. W Lomth

6 In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely. ] The laws which Christ has enacted are so holy, so wise, so good, that, if duly observed, the effect of them must be such exact justice, such uninterrupted order and peace, such gentleness and good-will, and universal charity, as would make even an heaven upon earth. Thus would the true Judah, the Israel of God, they that believe and practise His blessed doctrine, dwell in profound safety. Dean Stanhope

Or we may understand this prophecy to be in part fulfilled in all true believers, the mystical Israel, and that it will probably receive its utmost completion when the Jewish nation shall be restored. A blessing foretold by most of the ancient Prophets, who generally join Judah and Israel together as equally sharers in the blessings, and forming no more two, but one kingdom. See note on chap iii. 18. W Lomth

— and this is his name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS. ] He shall really be what the title imports, (see the note on Is vii 14.) He shall be "JEHOVAH," or the true God, and "our Righteousness" or the means of our justification. compare Is xlv 24, 25, 1 Cor i 30. The title of Jehovah is elsewhere given to the Messiah by the Prophets, see Is xl 10, xlviii 17, Hos i 7, Zech ii 10 11, Mal iii 1, and being that name which denotes the essence and immutability of God, and acknowledged by the Jews as incommunicable to any creature, intimates to us the Divinity of Christ. By the personal union of this to the human nature, and by the invaluable merit which His sufferings thence derived, He expiated the sins of the whole world, and so became "our Righteousness." W Lomth, Dean Stanhope

We seldom find the kingdom of Christ mentioned, but Righteousness is immediately mentioned as the first fruits of it. Righteousness left the earth at the fall of Adam, and returned again to visit and to bless it, at the birth of Christ. He was conceived without stain, lived without sin, and died without guilt. He conversed in the world, yet contracted none of its pollution. His bitterest enemies, Jews and Gentiles, joined to attest His uprightness. See Matt xvii 19; Luke xxiii 4, Matt xxvii 4, Luke xxii 47. The kingdom which He came to establish was a kingdom of righteousness. He called men from the way of sin by His sermons, He allureth them from its pleasures by His example, He cleansed them from its guilt by His blood, and rescued them from its power by His Spirit. Thus did Jesus of Nazareth answer His title of "the Just One," and evince Himself to be the true Melchisedek, or "king of Righteousness." Bp Horne

7, 8 [Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the Lord, &c.] This wonderful work of God's, in restoring the Jewish nation after their dispersions all the world over, together with the bringing in of the fulness of the Gentiles, which will be also effected by these means, will so far exceed the miracles which He wrought in their deliverance out of Egypt, that this latter will not deserve to be compared or mentioned with the former. W Lenth

Meanwhile, the deliverance of Israel after the flesh is infinitely surpassed by the rescue of Israel after the Spirit from a tyranny and bondage, with which the Egyptian is not worthy of being named. And the remembrance of the former is in great measure swallowed up and defaced by the abolition of those ceremonial rites and festivals, in the place of which have succeeded the two Christian sacraments, and our seasons of public thanksgiving, as commemorations and perpetual monuments of this latter and better redemption. Dean Stanhope

9 [Mine heart within me is broken because of the prophets.] The following head of prophecy, though probably delivered at the same time with the foregoing one, treats of a subject entirely different. Jeremiah testifies the horror he felt within him on contemplating the wickedness of the priests and prophets of Judah, and the vengeance which God was about to execute upon them for the corruption which had been diffused through the whole land, by the influence of their evil doctrines and example, ver 9—15. He exhorts the people in the name of God, not to listen to the words of the prophets, who prophesied of peace when evil was determined, and would infallibly take place, as would in time appear, and charges those prophets with speaking of themselves, and not from the Divine commission, ver 16—23. God asserts His omniscience and omniscience, and reproveth the audaciousness of the false prophets, who affected to place their own idle dreams on a level with the all-powerful and efficacious word of 10 — for because of swearing the land mourneth.] However slightly some may think of taking God's name in vain, it is a notorious fact, that all manner of crimes grow common and barefaced along with it: and therefore, in proportion as that increases among any people, they gradually open for destruction. Accordingly we find the Prophet here declaring expressly, that, "because of swearing the land mourneth." And Hosea puts that down in the first place, as the leading sin of those many, for which "the Lord had a controversy with the children of Israel. By swearing, and lying, and killing, and stealing, and committing adultery, they break out, and blood toucheth blood. Therefore shall the land mourn, and every one that dwelleth therein shall languish, Hos. iv 1, 2, 3. Ahp Secker

13, 14 — I have seen folly in the prophets of Samaria, &c.] He compares the sins of the prophets of Samaria and of those of Jerusalem together, and pronounces the latter to be more enormous, because the prophets of Jerusalem pronounced their false prophecies in the name of the true God, and made Him responsible for all their impostures: the wickedness of their lives also reflected dishonour upon His name and religion. In these words are set forth three Divine perfections, to expose the folly of those wicked men who thought, or who acted as if they thought, that they could sin securely, and that God had no knowledge, and took no notice, of their ways God therefore, by the mouth of His Prophet, declares that He is present in all places "Do not I fill heaven and earth? saith the Lord. He declares, that no transactions can escape His inspection "Can any hide himself in secret places, that I shall not see him? saith the Lord." These two perfections are mentioned expressly A third is plainly implied, namely, His irresistible power For if a sinner, who thinks to conceal himself from his Maker, is not only mistaken, but pursues his own ruin, the reason is, because God, who is present every-where, and who beholds every thing, hath also a power

Ahab intended to cast the same slur on the prophet Micah, when he represented him as one that "never prophesied good concerning him, but evil." 1 Kings xxii 8 Dr Blayney The Jews quibbled on the word, which in the original has different senses. We cannot be mistaken in placing this chapter at the very beginning of Zedekiah's reign, within the first year at least, since the vision is dated from after the carrying away of Jeconiah and the people with him into captivity, as from an event which happened but a little before

Under the type of good and bad figs, God representeth to Jeremiah the different manner in which He should deal with the people that were carried away captive, and with those that were left behind, shewing His favour and kindness to the former in their restoration and reestablishment, but pursuing the latter with unrelenting judgments unto utter destruction. And it is reasonable to presume, that the king of Babylon would be solicitous to carry off all these, with intent not only to employ them in his own service, but to prevent the Jews, who were left behind, from furnishing themselves with arms in case of a revolt. 2 The which Jeremiah the prophet spake them in the land of their captivity, and likewise contains a promise of restoring them and their posterity to their own country, chap. xxxix 10 W Louth

7 And I will give them an heart to know me, &c.] Compare chap. xxix 12, 13 To these first captives chiefly belong those blessings, which are promised to the Jews upon their return from captivity, such as were the knowledge and fear of God, and grace to live in obedience to His commandments compare chap. xxix 22, xxxi 33, xxxii 58, 39 These were accomplished in the times after the captivity, when the Jews adhered constantly to their religion, and were very careful not to fall into idolatry W Louth

Chap. XXV This chapter seems to come next in succession to chap. xxii, xxiii It is dated in the fourth year of Jehoiakim, and most probably belonged to the earliest part of that year For the defeat of the Egyptians at Carchemish, and the subsequent taking of Jerusalem, are both placed in the same year But from ver. 9, I think it may be concluded, that Nebuchadnezzar had but just entered upon his expedition, and had not yet carried into execution any of those designs, for which God there says He would <sup>g</sup>send and take<sup>h</sup> him

The Prophet reproveth the Jews for their disregard of the Divine calls to repentance, ver. 1—7 He foretelleth their subjugation, together with that of the neighbouring nations, to the king of Babylon for seventy years, and the fall of the Babylonian empire at that period, ver. 8—14. The same is foretold under the symbol of the cup of God's wrath, with which Jeremiah is sent, perhaps in a vision, unto all the nations, which are enumerated at large, to make them drink of it to their utter subversion, ver. 15—29 And the like prophecy is the third time repeated in a strain of sublime and poetick imagery, ver. 30 to the end, Dr Blayney

7 Yet ye have not hearkened unto me, saith the Lord, that ye might provoke me to anger with the works of your hands to your own hurt

8 ¶ Therefore thus saith the Lord of hosts, Because ye have not heard my words,

9 Behold, I will send and take all the families of the north, saith the Lord, and Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, my servant, and will bring them against this

Ver. 1 — that was the first year of Nebuchadnezzar] That is, according to the Jewish mode of computing his reign from the time of his being associated with his father in the empire, before he set out on his Syrian expedition But the Babylonians do not reckon his reign to have begun till two years after, upon his father's death Dr Blayney Daniel, writing in Chaldee, follows the computation in use among the Chaldeans, Dan. ii 1 W Louth

3 From the thirteenth year of Josiah — unto this day, that is the three and twentieth year,] For Jeremiah prophesied nineteen years under Josiah, who reigned thirty-one years, and this was the beginning of Jehoiakim's fourth year W Louth

4 — all his servants the prophets,] There were several Prophets contemporary with Jeremiah, two of whom are mentioned in Scripture, the prophet Zephaniah, and Urijah the son of Shemaiah, concerning whom see chap. xxvi 20 W Louth

9 — Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, my servant,] Kings and princes are the great instruments of Providence with respect to human affairs Some of them God raises up to be executioners of His judgments upon sinful people, such was he of whom God saith, Hos. xii 11, "I gave thee a king in Mine anger" Such was Nebuchadnezzar here spoken of, whom God calls His "servant," because he "wrought for Him," as God speaks concerning him, Ezek. xlii 20, that is, he executed God's judgments upon Tyre, God making use of his ambition and desire of conquest, and prospering his arms, in order to the punishment of the neighbouring countries for their sins see a like instance in the king of Assyria, whom God calls "the rod of His anger, Is. x. 5" W Louth

* Almighty God so orders the devices of men by His overruling providence, as to make them subservient to His everlasting counsels for "all things serve Him" Ps. cxix. 91 Happy, thrice

happy they, that do Him voluntary service, that can say with David, and in his sense "Behold, O Lord, how that I am Thy servant, Ps cxvi 16 that have devoted themselves faithfully, and accordingly exert their endeavours to do Him true and laudable service, by obeying His revealed will But certainly, whether they will or not though they think of nothing less, they shall serve Him to the furthering and accomplishing of His secret will As we find "My servant David often, as His servant in one respect, so we sometimes meet with "My servant Nebuchadnezzar, as His servant in the other Bp Sanderson

— perpetual desolations ] It is a common observation, that the Hebrew word, rendered "perpetual," does not always signify eternity or perpetuity in a strict sense Here the sense of the word is to be restrained to the period of seventy years, mentioned ver 11 See the note on chap xxii 40 W Lowth

10 — the sound of the minstrels, and the light of the candle ] In the East the people grind their corn at break of day, and on going out in a morning, one hears every where the noise of the mill, accompanied with the voice and songs of those that grind Sir J Chardin. There is an affecting contrast in the text. Gloomny shall be the silence of the morning melancholy the shadows of the evening no cheerful noise to amuse the one, no enlivening ray to brighten the darkness of the other Desolation shall every where reign Harmen

— the light of the candle ] Jeremiah here makes the taking away of the light of the candle and a total desolation the same thing The houses of Egypt at this time are never without lights Mallet assures us, they burn lamps, not only all the night long, but in all inhabited apartments in a house and that the poor would rather retrench part of their food than neglect it Harmen

11 — shall serve the king of Babylon ] That is, Nebuchadnezzar and his successors The word "king" is elsewhere used collectively for a succession of kings in the same family or kingdom See the note on Is xxiii 16 W Lowth

— seventy years ] This period of the servitude of the "nations" must be computed from the defeat of the Egyptians at Archimish in the ninth year that this prophecy was given, when Nebuchadnezzar reduced the neighbouring nations of Syria and Palestine as well as Jerusalem, under his subjection At the end of seventy years (see the notes on 2 Kings xxiv. 1, 2 Chron xxxvi 21 Jer li 1) on the accession of Cyrus, an end was put to the Babylonish monarchy, Babylon itself became a subject and dependent province, and began to experience those Divine visitations, which terminated at length in what is so justly called in the next verse "perpetual desolations." Dr Blayney

12 — I will punish the king of Babylon, &c. ] God often punishes the persons whom He makes instruments of His vengeance

Before CHRIST about 606 13 And I will bring upon that land all my words which I have pronounced against it, even all that is written in this book, which Jeremiah hath prophesied against all the nations

14 For many nations and great kings shall serve themselves of them also and I will recompense them according to their deeds, and according to the works of their own hands Chap 27 7

15 For thus saith the Lord God of Israel unto me, Take the wine cup of this fury at my hand, and cause all the nations, to whom I send thee, to drink it Isa 51 17 Psal 73 8 Job 21 20

16 And they shall drink, and be moved, and be mad, because of the sword that I will send among them

17 Then took I the cup at the Lord's hand, and made all the nations to drink, unto whom the Lord had sent me

ance upon others, for those very things which they did by His appointment, because their intent was purely to carry on their own ambitious and cruel purposes, and not to fulfil God's will to advance His glory So that the evil they did was altogether their own, and the good that was produced out of it was to be ascribed to God See a remarkable passage to this purpose, relating to Sennacherib, Is x 3—16 W Lowth

— and will make it perpetual desolations ] See the notes on chap 1 9, &c

13 — all that is written in this book, ] Those prophecies are meant which are to be found all together from chap xvi to li inclusively, and which the Greek version has introduced in this place W Lowth, Dr Blayney

14 For many nations and great kings shall serve themselves of them also ] Or, "shall exact service of them," or "make use of their service" Dr Blayney Those proud and imperious Chaldees, which held My people in servitude for many years, will give to be a prey to other great kings and nations, and they shall share their dominions among them Bp Hull

15 — Take the wine cup of this fury at my hand, ] Those circumstances which constitute the good and evil of human life are often represented in Scripture as the ingredients of a cup, which God, as Master of a feast, mixes up, and distributes to the several guests as He thinks fit See Matt xx' 22, xxvi 39 Accordingly by this image of "the cup of the wine of God's wrath," we are to understand those dreadful and afflictive judgments which an incensed God was about to inflict on the objects of His displeasure And Jeremiah the Prophet, who announced them, is considered as acting the part of a cupbearer, carrying the cup round to those who were appointed to drink of it the effects of which were to appear in the intoxication, that is, the terror and astonishment, the confusion and desolation, which should prevail amongst them See Bp Lowth's note on Is li 21, and compare Rev xiv 10, xvi 19 Dr Blayney

— cause all the nations, — to drink it ] This must be either a vision, or perhaps only a course of figurative expressions, signifying that Jeremiah was to foretell, that these nations should drink of the cup of God's anger, just as he is said, in chap 1 10, to be set over nations, to root out, &c, when the meaning was only to foretell that they should be rooted out. Abp Secker See the note on chap xiii. 4.

16 — be moved, and be mad, ] That astonishment, and those unsettled counsels and resolutions, which are here mentioned as the effects of God's judgments, are elsewhere compared to drunkenness see chap li 57, Lament. iv. 21; Is. xix 14, Nahum iii 11; Heb ii. 16 W Lowth

17. Then took I the cup &c ] The Prophet either did this in vision, or else he actually did what is figuratively designed, that is he publicly denounced the judgments of God severally against the nations. It is most likely that this narrative was either written by the Prophet himself, or dictated by him to Baruch, who wrote for him, after the destruction of Jerusalem, when a compilation was made of all his prophecies: this supposition will account for the words, "as it is this day," found at the close of the 18th verse. Dr Blayney

20 And all the mingled people,] Probably a mixture of several nations who dwelt either upon the coasts of the Mediterranean or upon those of the Red sea. W Lomth Or, the words may be joined with the preceding, and may denote all the foreigners resident in Egypt, who had by intermarriages formed connexions with the Egyptians. In Exod xii 38, we read of "a mixed multitude" distinct from the children of Israel, that went up with them out of Egypt. Dr Blayney

— all the kings of the land of Uz.] This was the country of Job concerning its situation see the note on Job 1

The kings mentioned here and in the following verses were petty princes of several clans or colonies. See the note on chap xii 20. W Lomth

— the remnant of Ashdod,] Ashdod, which had been greatly injured by two sieges, in which it was taken, the one by Tartan, the Assyrian general, mentioned Is xx 1, the other by Psammetichus, king of Egypt, who, as Herodotus relates, retook it after the longest siege that had ever been known in those times. Dr Blayney

22 — the kings of the isles which are beyond the sea,] Or rather, the region by the sea side, as in the margin meaning the people upon the coast of the Mediterranean sea. The word "island" in the Hebrew signifies any region or country. See the note on Is xx 6. W Lomth See also the note on Gen x 5

23 Dedan, and Tema and Buz,] Dedan was descended from Abraham by Keturah, Gen xxv 3. It was probably he that founded the city Dedan, which however in process of time seems to have been annexed to Edom. See chap xlix 6. Ezek xxv 13. Tema was one of the sons of Ishmael, Gen xxi 15, and a city or district called after him was situate near the mountains which separate Arabia from Chaldea. Buz was the brother of Huz, Gen xxii 21, and settled most probably in his neighbourhood. Filhu, the most discreet of Job's friends, was a Buzite, Job xxxii 2. Dr Blayney

— all that are in the utmost corners,] Probably the inhabitants of the peninsula of Arabia. Dr Blayney See the note on chap x 26

24 — the mingled people that dwell in the desert,] Meaning such as inhabited the great desert country lying between Mesopotamia and Palestine. These may have been called "mingled" either from their manner of inhabiting the desert promiscuously, and in common without any fixed property or abode but settling for a time where they found pasture, and then removing with their flocks to another place or else more probably from their being made up of people of different descents. Dr Blayney

25 — Zimri.] A people of Arabia, descended from Zimran, Abraham's son by Keturah, Gen xxv 2. W Lomth

— Elam, and — the Medes,] See the note on chap xlix 34. The Medes and Persians were commonly confederates, and partakers of the same good or ill fortune. W Lomth

26 — all the kings of the north far and near,] By the kings of the north that were "near," the kings of Syria were probably meant, see chap xlix 2. Those that are "far off" may mean the Hyrcanians and Bactrians, who are reckoned by Xenophon among those, that were subjected or oppressed by the king of Babylon, and perhaps others besides of the neighbouring nations, that were compelled to submit to the Babylonish yoke. All these lay to the north of Judea and at a great distance. Dr Blayney

— all the kingdoms of the world, &c.] This must be understood with a limitation to that part of the continent which the Jews had any correspondence or acquaintance with, just as "all the world" stands for the whole Roman empire, Luke ii 1. The ambition of a prince like Nebuchadnezzar who aimed at universal monarchy could not help occasioning great distress and confusion, both among those who felt, and among those who dreaded, the power of his arms. Dr Blayney

— and the king of Sheshach, shall drink after them.] Sheshach means Babylon, as appears from chap li 41. Dr Blayney It is thought that Babylon was so called from one of its idols, named Shach which was worshipped there, and to which a festival was kept for five days together, and that the term is used by way of reproach. It is said that during this festival Cyrus took Babylon. See chap li 41. Burder

28 And it shall be, if they refuse to take the cup &c.] If they either do not believe thy threatenings, or else disregard them as thinking themselves sufficiently provided against hostile invasion, you shall let them know, that the judgments denounced against them are God's irreversible decree. W Lomth

29 For, lo, I begin to bring evil on the city &c.] Judgment often begins at the house of God, for the correction of God's people, and for a warning to others; but the heaviest strokes of it are

8 ¶ Now it came to pass, when Jeremiah had made an end of speaking all that the Lord had commanded him to speak unto all the people, that the priests and the prophets and all the people took him, saying, Thou shalt surely die.

9 Why hast thou prophesied in the name of the Lord, saying, This house shall be like Shiloh, and this city shall be desolate without an inhabitant? And all the people were gathered against Jeremiah in the house of the Lord.

10 ¶ When the princes of Judah heard these things, then they came up from the king's house unto the house of the Lord, and sat down in the entry of the new gate of the Lord's house.

11 Then spake the priests and the prophets unto the princes and to all the people, saying, † This man is worthy to die, for he hath prophesied against this city, as ye have heard with your ears.

12 ¶ Then spake Jeremiah unto all the princes and to all the people, saying, The Lord sent me to prophesy against this house and against this city all the words that ye have heard.

13 Therefore now amend your ways and your doings, and obey the voice of the Lord your God, and the Lord will repent him of the evil that he hath pronounced against you.

14 As for me, behold, I am in your hand: do with me as seemeth good and meet unto you.

15 But know ye for certain, that if ye put me to death, ye shall surely bring innocent blood upon yourselves, and upon this city, and upon the inhabitants thereof: for of a truth the Lord hath sent me unto you to speak all these words in your ears.

16 ¶ Then said the princes and all the people unto the priests and to the prophets, This man is not worthy to die: for he hath spoken to us in the name of the Lord our God.

17 Then rose up certain of the elders of the land, and spake to all the assembly of the people, saying,

18 Micah the Morasthite prophesied in the days of Hezekiah king of Judah, and spake to all the people of Judah, saying, Thus saith the Lord of hosts, Zion shall be plowed like a field, and Jerusalem shall become heaps, and the mountain of the house as the high places of a forest.

19 Did Hezekiah king of Judah and all Judah put him at all to death? did he not fear the Lord, and besought the Lord, and the Lord repented him of the evil which he had pronounced against them? Thus might we procure great evil against our souls.

20 And there was also a man that prophesied in the name of the Lord, Urijah the son of Shemaiah of Kijath-jeaun, who

— in the house of the Lord ] That is, in the court before the house of the Lord, ver 2, compare ch vii 10. The outer courts being holy ground, and dedicated to God's worship, are called by the name of the temple. So the treasury, where Christ preached, is called "the temple," John viii 20, though it stood in the outer court of the temple. St. Paul is said to have entered "into the temple," that is, into the court before the temple, and the Jews to have laid hold on him there, Acts xxi 26, 27. W Louth

10 — the princes of Judah ] These are the same who are called the elders of the land, ver 17. The king's counsellors, or chief officers of state, who were likewise members of the great Sanhedrim. It is uncertain when the great council, called the Sanhedrim, was instituted. Selden and most other writers from the Jewish authors, date the rise of it from Moses's appointing the seventy elders, Numb xi 16. After several intermissions of the authority, which was sometimes laid aside by the calamities or corruption of the times or else superseded by that sovereign power which was invested in the judges and kings, Jehoshaphat, when he set about a general reformation, restored this ancient tribunal see 2 Chron xix 8. This being the supreme court of the nation, the persons that sat in it are called here the "princes of Judah," compare chap xxxix 2, xxxiv 19, and "the elders of the land," ver 17 of this chapter, and the "elders of the people," chap xix 1, and by the Evangelists, see Matt xxvii 1, Luke xxii 66, and "the senate of the children of Israel," Acts v 21.

The same are probably meant by the "seventy men of the ancients of the house of Israel," mentioned Ezek viii 11. The word Sanhedrim is without doubt of Greek original, derived from a word, which in the Greek Testament often signifies this great council, and from thence is adopted into the Jewish language, by Rabbinical writers, as many other Greek words are, but the council may still have been of much more ancient date, and expressed in the Old Testament by "rulers, princes, or elders, or the senate of the people." W Louth

— sat down in the entry of the new gate &c ] They sat down in that new gate of the temple, which king Jotham had built, to appease the tumult and to hear the cause of Jeremiah. Bp Hall

14 As for me, behold, I am in your hand &c ] Compare chap xxxviii 5. It was the proper business of the Sanhedrim to pass sentence upon prophets; and, if they found them guilty of making false pretences to prophecy, to put them to death, the punishment which the law had provided in that case, Deut. xviii 20. W Louth

18 — Zion shall be plowed like a field, &c ] See the note on Mk iii 12.

20 And there was also a man that prophesied &c ] According to the opinion of many commentators, the words that follow may be ascribed to an opposite party, who, by a contrary precedent to the foregoing, urged the condemnation of Jeremiah. But it is more probable that the elders concluded their speeches, ver 19, and that the writer of the narrative goes on to observe in his own person, that, notwithstanding the precedent of Micah, there had been a later precedent in the present reign, which might have operated very unfavourably to Jeremiah, but for the influence

23 — cast his dead body into the graves of the common people ] Or, the sons of the people, as in the margin by whom are meant the populace of the lowest order, who are buried in a public place of burial, having no distinct sepulchre to themselves, as all persons of rank and character, and especially of so honourable an order as that of the Prophets, used to have. But the king's design was to brand his memory as far as he could by such an ignominious treatment of his remains Dr Blayney

21 Nevertheless the hand of Ahikam &c ] Both he and his father Shaphan were chief ministers under Josiah, 2 Kings xxii 12, 14. And the brothers of Ahikam, Gemariah, Elishah, and Jaazaniah, were considerable men in those days with Ahikam and members of the great council chap xxix 3 Ezek viii 11. So Ahikam made use of his interest with them to deliver Jeremiah from the danger that threatened him W Lenth

Chap XXVII It is evident (see the note on ver 1) that the prophecies contained both in this and the following chapter, belong to the fourth year of Zedekiah's reign. About this time ambassadors came to Zedekiah from the kings of Edom, Moab, and other neighbouring nations, to solicit him, as it should seem, to join with them in a confederacy against the king of Babylon. On this occasion Jeremiah is ordered to put bands and yokes about his neck, and to read them afterwards to the before-mentioned kings, declaring the sovereignty of Nebuchadnezzar and his successors to be of Divine appointment, and promising peace and protection to those who submitted quietly, but menacing evil in case of resistance, ver 1—11. A like admonition is delivered to Zedekiah, advising him not to expose himself and his people to certain ruin by listening to the suggestions of false prophets, and revolting from the service of the king of Babylon, ver 12—15. The priests and all the people are also warned not to give credit to the false prophets, who taught them to expect a speedy restoration of the vessels which had been carried away to Babylon together with Jehoiachin. Instead of which it is foretold, that the remaining vessels in the house of God and in the king's house at Jerusalem, should be carried after the other, and should not be brought back till the appointed time of Judah's captivity was at an end, ver 16 to the end Dr Blayney

IN the beginning of the reign of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah came this word unto Jeremiah from the Lord, saying,

2 Thus saith the Lord to me, Make thee bonds and yokes, and put them upon thy neck,

3 And send them to the king of Edom, and to the king of Moab, and to the king of the Ammonites, and to the king of Tyrus, and to the king of Zidon, by the hand of the messengers which come to Jerusalem unto Zedekiah king of Judah,

Ver 1 — Jehoiakim ] There is a difficulty in the date of this prophecy, because it plainly relates to the times of Zedekiah ver 3, 12, 16. The least forced way of solving the difficulty is to say, that Jehoiakim is crept into the text instead of Zedekiah by the negligence of the scribes, who might have their eyes upon the beginning of the last chapter or section. This emendation is confirmed by comparing this verse with the 9d, 12th, and 20th of this chapter, and with the beginning of the next W Lenth Dr Blayney

2 — Make thee bonds and yokes, &c ] The Prophets foretold things by actions as well as by words. So Isaiah went naked and barefoot, Isa xx 3. Ezekiel prophesied in like manner by signs, chap iv 1, &c, xii 3, xxiv 17—19. W Lenth. And even in the New Testament we have a similar instance in the case of Agabus, Acts xxi 11. Dr Waterland. See note on Gen xxii 25.

St Jerome is of opinion, that the second term signifies waulen forks, or collars, such as criminals were sometimes forced to wear. This fork was fastened on their neck, and their arms were bound to it. Slaves were often treated in this manner. Thus Jeremiah, laden with this sort of yoke, represented in a very lively manner the servitude of the nations under Nebuchadnezzar (Calmet). 3 And send them to the king of Edom, &c ] Jeremiah probably made several yokes, and put one of them upon his own neck when he delivered his errand, and his so delivering his prophecy was sending the yokes to the princes mentioned, for we cannot reasonably suppose, that the ambassadors took the yokes at his hands, and carried them to their respective masters. Included as they were by the blandishments of their diviners, (ver 9) it is not to be supposed that they would have either chosen, or dared to cry to their masters the yokes presented to them by Jeremiah. God revealed His design to the Prophet in such figurative, metaphorical language, and the Prophet reported the same as he had received it: these affecting images making the message more awful and solemn in the delivery, and giving it the advantage of a deeper and more durable impression. Dr Waterland

— the messengers which come to Jerusalem unto Zedekiah ] Ambassadors, who came from the kings before mentioned, either to congratulate Zedekiah on his accession to the throne, or to engage him in a confederacy against the king of Babylon. W Lenth.

Chap XXIX According to the proper arrangement, this chapter appears to follow the 24th, being the second of those which were delivered in the early part of Zedekiah's reign. See the note at the beginning of chap xxiv

Some embarrassment and incoherence are to be perceived in particular parts of this chapter, which are removed by transposing ver 15, and placing it immediately before ver 21, where it stands in the version of the Septuagint. By this emendation a due order and connexion is restored, both in the place from whence the verse is removed, and in that to which it is restored.

This chapter contains the substance of two letters written at different times, as is evident from comparing ver 28 with ver 4, 5, although the title at the beginning announces only one, and there is no mark of distinction to be found afterwards. The distinction however is certainly to be made at the end of ver 20. For in the first letter the Prophet exhorts the captives to accommodate themselves to their present circumstances, under an assurance that their captivity would last to the end of seventy years, after which period, and not before, God would visit and restore them. And, to prevent their listening to any false suggestions that might flatter them with hopes of a speedy return, he informs them of what would happen to their brethren that were left behind at Jerusalem, for whom a harder fate was reserved, than for those that had been carried away. After this, finding, as it should seem, upon the return of the messengers, the little credit his first message had met with, he sends a second to the same persons, denouncing the Divine judgments against three of their false prophets, by whose influence chiefly the people had been prevented from hearkening to his good advice. Dr Blayney

Ver 1 — to the prophets. Ezekiel and Daniel were then in captivity, Daniel in Babylon, and Ezekiel in Mesopotamia, on the river Chébar. Ezekiel did not begin prophesying till the fifth year of the captivity of Jeconiah, but Daniel was already acknowledged as a Prophet of the Lord. There were probably other Prophets also in that country, to whom Jeremiah addresses this letter, nor is it at all singular, that one Prophet should advise and instruct others. David received instructions from Nathan and St Peter informs us, that the Prophets applied themselves to the study of the writings of the more ancient Prophets. Daniel read

5 Build ye houses, and dwell in them. Establish yourselves in Babylon, as in a place where ye shall abide a long time. I look upon it as your country. The Lord, meaning to point out to the Jews, that in a short time they should be carried away from their own land, told Jeremiah not to marry, nor to form any settlement in the land, chap xvi 2. Jonadab, the son of Rechab, commanded his posterity not to build houses, nor to cultivate fields, but to dwell all their life in tents, in order to denote a more complete estrangement from the things of the earth. On the contrary, to prove to the Jews of the captivity, that their banishment should be of long duration, they are told to build houses to acquire possessions, to form marriages, in a word, to establish themselves at Babylon. Calmel

The original word is used for persons that dream, chap xxvii 9, and should be taken in the same sense here. These dreamers might be said to be made, or encouraged, to dream by the easy credit given to their impostures, and the reputation and respect they thereby acquired. Dr Blayney

the same year it began to be put in execution seventy years from which time will bring us down to the first year of Cyrus when he made proclamation for the restoration of the Jew, and the rebuilding of the temple at Jerusalem (See the note on chap. xxv. 11) This computation of the seventy years captivity appears the truest and most agreeable to Scripture but if we fix the commencement of the seventy years at the time when Jerusalem was burnt and destroyed their conclusion will fall about the time when Darius issued his decree for rebuilding the temple, after the work had been suspended. Or if we fix their commencement at the time when Nebuzar-adan carried away the last remnant of the people, and completed the desolation of the land, their conclusion will fall about the time when the temple was finished and dedicated, and the first passover was solemnized in it. So that, as De la Prieux says, "taking it which way you will and at what stage you please, the prophecy of Jeremiah will be fully and exactly accomplished concerning this matter. It may be said to have been accomplished at three different times, and in three different manners and therefore, possibly, all might have been intended though the first without doubt, was the principal object of the prophecy. Bp Newton

I will visit you. There were but few of these captives, in comparison who returned in person to their own country see 17ia iii 12. So this promise was chiefly fulfilled in their posterity and it is common in Scripture to speak of blessings bestowed upon the children, as if they had been actually made good

16 Know that thus saith the Lord &c.] The many and grievous calamities which were to fall upon those who were left in their own land, are here noticed by the Prophet as affording a fresh argument to those of the captivity for composing themselves to that quietness and peace which he recommended, considering the comparatively easier lot which Providence had assigned to them. Dr Blayney the stead of Jehoiada the priest, that ye should be officers in the house of the Lord, for every man that is mad, and maketh himself a prophet, that thou shouldest put him in prison, and in the stocks.

27 Now therefore why hast thou not reproved Jeremiah of Anathoth, which maketh himself a prophet to you?

28 For therefore he sent unto us in Babylon, saying, This captivity is long: build ye houses, and dwell in them, and plant gardens, and eat the fruit of them.

29 And Zephaniah the priest read this letter in the ears of Jeremiah the prophet.

30 ¶ Then came the word of the Lord unto Jeremiah, saying,

31 Send to all them of the captivity, saying, Thus saith the Lord concerning Shemaiah the Nebelamite, Because that Shemaiah hath prophesied unto you, and I sent him not, and he caused you to trust in a lie.

32 Therefore thus saith the Lord, Behold, I will punish Shemaiah the Nebelamite, and his seed: he shall not have a man to dwell among this people, neither shall he behold the good that I will do for my people, saith the Lord, because he hath taught rebellion against the Lord.

second priest, when Jerusalem was taken, chap. lii. 24 Who then was Jehoiada? perhaps he was one that had been superseded in his office of second priest for being remiss in his duty; and therefore Zephaniah may have been reminded of him by way of intimation, that, as they had been both appointed for the same purposes, so Zephaniah might expect the same as his predecessor, if he copied the example of his negligence. The second priest officiated as substitute of the high priest, in case of absence or indisposition, and perhaps was always invested with subordinate authority. Dr. Blayney.

THE word that came to Jeremiah from the Lord, saying,

2 Thus speaketh the Lord God of Israel, saying, Write thee all the words that I have spoken unto thee in a book.

3 For, lo, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will bring again the captivity of my people Israel and Judah, saith the Lord, and I will cause them to return to the land that I gave to their fathers, and they shall possess it.

4 ¶ And these are the words that the Lord spake concerning Israel and concerning Judah.

5 For thus saith the Lord, We have heard a voice of trembling, of fear, and not of peace.

6 Ask ye now, and see whether a man doth travail with child? wherefore do I see every man with his hands on his loins, as a woman in travail, and all faces are turned into paleness?

7 Alas for that day is great, so that none is like it: it is even the time of Jacob's trouble, but he shall be saved out of it.

8 For it shall come to pass in that day, saith the Lord of hosts, that I will break his yoke from off thy neck, and will burst thy bonds, and strangers shall no more serve themselves of him.

9 But they shall serve the Lord their God, and David their king, whom I will raise up unto them.

diately after the preceding one, in which the restoration of the people from the Babylonish captivity is in direct terms foretold. From hence the transition is natural and easy to the more glorious and general restoration, that was to take place in a more distant period, and was designed for the ultimate object of the national hopes and expectations.

Both events are frequently thus connected together in the prophetical writings, and perhaps with this design, that when that, which was nearest at hand, should be accomplished, it might afford the strongest and most satisfactory kind of evidence, that the latter, how remote soever its period, would in like manner be brought about by the interposition of Providence in its due season. Dr. Blayney.

Ver 6 Ask ye now, and see whether a man &c. ] All men seem to carry that concern in their looks, and discover such an uneasiness in their behaviour, under the apprehension of approaching evils, as women do when the time of their travail draweth near. Compare chap. vi. 24, and Nahum ii. 10 W. Lowth.

8. — I will break his yoke from off thy neck. ] Rather, "I will break his yoke from off his neck, and will burst his bonds" for the yoke and the bonds of Jacob are spoken of, there being no other person spoken of in the sentence, nor is Jacob directly addressed till afterwards in ver 10. Dr. Blayney.

11 — though I make a full end of all nations, — yet will I not make a full end of thee ] We have here ocular proof of prophecy accomplished in an instance without a parallel. It was repeatedly foretold, both in the Old and New Testament, that, for the rejection and murder of their Messiah, the Jews should be dispersed into all countries, yet that they should not be swallowed up and lost among their conquerors, but should still subsist, to latest times, a distinct people. By Jeremiah God declared, "He would make an end of the nations," their oppressors, "but He would not make an end of thee." It cannot be said this prediction was written since the event and certainly an occurrence more singular, or improbable, could not have been predicted. In the course of human affairs, who hath heard such a thing? Yet, so it is. The mighty monarchies of Assyria, Persia, Greece, and Rome, are vanished like the shadows of the evening, or the phantoms of the night. Their places know them no more. Nothing remains of them but their names whilst this little despised people, strangely secure, without a friend or protector, amidst the wreck of empires, oppressed, persecuted, harassed always, by edicts and executioners, by murders and massacres, hath outlived the very ruins of them all. "Except ye see signs and wonders, ye will not believe." Behold then a sign and a wonder: the accomplishment of prophecy in a standing miracle. Contemplate the sight as it deserves, and be not faithless, but believing. Bp. Horne. See the note on Deut xxx 1.

— and will not leave thee altogether unpunished ] Some render this clause "and will not utterly destroy thee." This sense both suits very well with the present passage, and also agrees with the scope of those two texts in the Pentateuch, where we first find it Exod xxxiv 7, and Numb xiv 18, much better than the common translation.

The sense, here given by our translators, agrees very well with the context of some other places, where the phrase is used: as particularly, chap xxv 29 xlix 12 Nahum i. 3 W. Lenth.

17 — because they called thee an Outcast, &c. ] Because they have insulted upon thy misery, and despised thee, as an outcast and forlorn people, saying, This is that goodly hill of Zion, once the pride, now the scorn of the world. Bp. Hall

18 — the city shall be builded upon her own heap, &c. ] Or "hill," as in the margin, as that part of Jerusalem particularly was, which was called mount Zion. There was generally a castle or citadel in the middle of the ancient cities on a rising ground, for greater strength and security. See Josh xi. 13 W. Lenth

By "the city" Jerusalem is commonly understood, and by "the palace," either the temple or the king's house. Probably they are designed not for any particular city or palace, but for the cities and palaces of Jacob in general. Names in the singular number are often thus used. Dr. Blayney.

21. — their nobles shall be of themselves, ] On "his prince shall be of his own race" the meaning is plain, that they should not be governed by foreigners, but by those of their own nation and family. Dr. Blayney.

The Hebrew word is in the singular number, and literally signifies their "mighty one," a title given to God Himself, Ps. xciii. 4, and to a mighty angel, Is. x. 34, probably the Word, or Son of God. The sense is, they shall no more be governed by strangers, but shall have a ruler of their own nation, such was Zoro- babel's figure in Christ. W. Lenth

24 — in the latter days. The latter or "last days," may signify in general the time to come; and it perhaps it is to be understood, Gen xlii 1; Deut ix 30; xxix 29; but it commonly signifies the times under the Gospel, as being the last dispensation, and such as should continue to the end of the world. W. Lenth

Chap XXXI. ver. 2. — in the wilderness; Though God, on the passage of the Israelites from Egypt, cut off many of them by the sword for their iniquities, some by the Amalekites, Exod. xvii 6, some by the hands of their brethren, Exod. xxxii 28; yet the survivors found grace, and were conducted by Him into the land of rest. God here parallels His future gracious purposes with His former merciful providences. Poole.

3 The Lord hath appeared of old unto me, &c. These words are spoken in the person of the Jewish nation. W. Lenth. They acknowledge God's mercies in former times, that the Lord had indeed appeared of old unto her, but that now she seemed to be forgotten and despised. W. Lenth.

4 Again, I will build thee, &c. O Jerusalem, thou shalt be built again, and shalt have again mirth and mirth within thy walls. O My Church, thou shalt be happily restored, and filled with true spiritual joy. Sp. Hall

— thou shalt again be adorned with tabrets. That it was usual for the women of Israel to go forth with tabrets and dancing in times of public rejoicing under the Law, see Exod. xv 20, Judg. xi 34, 1 Sam. xviii 6. These times are now to be renewed. Dr Blayney

4 Again I will build thee, and thou shalt be built, O virgin of Israel: thou shalt again be adorned with thy tabrets, and shalt go forth in the dances of them that make merry.

5 Thou shalt yet plant vines upon the mountains of Samaria the planters shall plant, and shall eat them as common things.

6 For there shall be a day, that the watchmen upon the mount Ephraim shall cry, Arise ye, and let us go up to Zion unto the Lord our God.

7 For thus saith the Lord; Sing with gladness for Jacob, and shout among the chief of the nations: publish ye, praise ye, and say, O Lord, save thy people, the remnant of Israel.

8 Behold, I will bring them from the north country, and gather them from the coasts of the earth, and with them the blind and the lame, the woman with child, and her that travaileth with child together: a great company shall return thither.

9 They shall come with weeping, and with supplications will I lead them; I will cause them to walk by the rivers of waters in a straight way, wherein they shall not stumble: for I am a father to Israel, and Ephraim is my firstborn.

5 — plant vines upon the mountains of Samaria.] The mountains of Samaria were productive of good wines, as we see in the history of Abimelech, Judg. ix. 27, and in the reproofs which the Prophets frequently address to the men of Ephraim, for being too much addicted to wine, Is xxviii 1, Hos x. 1, &c. Josephus and later travellers confirm the fact. Calmet — shall eat them as common things.] After they have planted them, they shall eat the fruits thereof, according to the promise contained in the parallel texts, Is lxv 21, Amos ix 14 whereas God had threatened them as a curse, that when they had planted their vines, another should eat of the fruit, Deut. xxviii 30. The original verb, translated, "eat them as common things," alludes to that law, that forbade the fruit of any young trees to be eaten till the fifth year of their bearing, when the fruit was lawful or "common for every one to eat" see the margin of the Bible upon Deut xx 6; xxviii. 30. W. Lenth.

7. — the chief of the nations.] This term appears to be synonymous with Jacob or Israel, who, being the peculiar people of God, was thereby exalted to a preeminence above other nations. The privileges of primogeniture are asserted to belong to him, ver. 9, which is equivalent to calling him "the chief or head of the nations," the firstborn being commonly entitled to the rank of chief, or head, among many brethren, Rom viii 29. Dr. Blayney

8. — the blind and the lame, &c.] God will conduct them with all imaginable tenderness, and furnish the most feasible and indulgent with suitable accommodations. W. Lenth.

9. They shall come with weeping, &c.] Supposing, that the Jews at the time of their general restoration shall have then joy tempered with tears of repentance for their former miscarriages. The same thing is more fully expressed, Jerk xii 10, where God promises to "pour upon them the spirit of grace and of supplications." W. Lenth.

13 Then shall the virgin rejoice in the dance, both young men and old together, for I will turn their mourning into joy, and will comfort them, and make them rejoice from their sorrow.

11 — ransomed him from the hand of him that was stronger than he. From those, who had by force and power conquered him, and detained him captive. See Is xix 24, 25. An emblem of that redemption which Christ will obtain for us by vanquishing the devil, called the "strong man in Scripture." See Matt xii 29, Luke xi 21, 22. 11 Louth

12 Therefore they shall come and sing &c. There shall they come and sing in the great congregation and most exultant as in bullocks, and shall meet cheerfully together, to enjoy the holy things of God, His word and sacraments, and their soul shall be refreshed as a new watered garden in a drought, and they shall have no more cause of dejection and hopeless sorrow. Sp Hall Spiritual blessings are elsewhere described under the emblem of fruitfulness and plenty, and the grace of God is often compared to waters that refresh and enrich a dry ground. See Is iv 2, lviii 11, xlii 3. W. Louth

— for wheat, and for wine, &c. The land of Canaan is every where described, as "a land flowing with milk and honey," a land of wheat, vines, and milk. The Prophets therefore, to give an idea of their new state, represent it as another Canaan, such as Canaan was painted to the Jews, at their coming out of Egypt. Sp Chandler

15 — A voice was heard in Ramah, &c. Ramah was a city of Benjamin, near which Rachel, the mother of Joseph and Benjamin, was buried, who is here in a beautiful figure of poetry, represented as come forth out of her grave, and lamenting bitterly for the loss of her children, none of whom presented themselves to her view, being all either slain or gone into exile. The Evangelist applies these words to Herod's massacre of the infants at Bethlehem, and in its environs, Matt. ii 17, 18. Dr Blayney

— because they were not. An expression denoting those who were dead, Gen xli 13; Lam v 7. This was literally the case, according to St. Matthew's application of the text, but only metaphorically so in the sense first intended, being spoken of those, who were removed into a foreign country, and far ever deprived of the conversation of their relations, as if they were naturally dead. 11 Louth

16 — for thy work shall be rewarded. That is, thou shalt not bring forth children in vain, nor shalt thou be deprived of that satisfaction in seeing the welfare of thy children, which is the parent's reward for her care and attention in bringing them into the world, and providing for their support and education. They shall come again from the land of the enemy. Dr Blayney

was heard in Ramah, lamentation, and bitter weeping; Rachel weeping for her children refused to be comforted for her children, because they were not.

16 Thus saith the Lord, Refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from tears: for thy work shall be rewarded, saith the Lord, and they shall come again from the land of the enemy.

17 And there is hope in thine end, saith the Lord, that thy children shall come again to their own border.

18 ¶ I have surely heard Ephraim bemoaning himself thus; Thou hast chastised me, and I was chastised, as a bullock unaccustomed to the yoke: turn thou me, and I shall be turned; for thou art the Lord my God.

19 Surely after that I was turned, I repented, and after that I was instructed, I smote upon my thigh: I was ashamed, yea, even confounded, because I did bear the reproach of my youth.

20 Is Ephraim my dear son? is he a

The words of the Prophet, or rather those of the Almighty in this consolatory address to Rachel, were in the fullest import made good to her. Within seventy years it came to pass, that the posterity of Benjamin returned, with Judah, into the land of promise and inhabited Jerusalem, Bethlehem, and other bordering cities promiscuously with the royal tribe. "Her work was rewarded, her patient expectation, in faith and hope, of the promises made her, failed not of its fruit in the appointed season." Her children came again from the land of the enemy to their own border, as the Lord had foretold by His Prophet; they returned, and came to Zion with songs, joy was upon their heads, and in their hearts, "and sorrow and sighing flew away." Sp Horn

18 I have surely heard Ephraim &c. I have heard those of the ten tribes bemoaning themselves, after their captivity, thus: Thou hast afflicted me O Lord, and I am humbled, I was as a wild young bullock, unaccustomed to the yoke, but now Thou hast caused me to stoop unto it. Sp Hall

— turn thou me, and I shall be turned. Do Thou turn my heart by Thy prevailing grace, and then I shall be effectually reformed, compare Lam. v 21. Sometimes the Scripture ascribes the whole work of man's conversion to God, because His grace is the first and principal cause of it. But yet to make it effectual, man's concurrence is necessary, as appears from these words (ch up li 9) of this prophecy, where God saith, "We would have healed Babylon, but she is not healed; that is, God did what was requisite on His part for her conversion, but she refused to comply with His call. To the same purpose He speaks to Jerusalem; Jerk. xiv 13, "I have purged thee, and thou wast not purged." W. Louth

19 — I smote upon my thigh. Smiting upon the thigh was an indication of extreme astonishment and sorrow. See 1 zek xxi 12. So also it is represented by many heathen authors. Calme

— because I did bear the reproach of my youth. The burden of my former sins lay heavy upon my mind, and I began to think, that all the calamities and reproaches which I have undergone were the due result of my offences. The Prophet, representing the whole nation as a single person, speaks of their former sins, as if they were the sinners of their younger years. W. Louth

20 — Is Ephraim my dear son? &c. Rather this sense is, "Is not Ephraim my dear son? Is he not a pleasant child?" That is, is he not one that I have set my affections upon, as a parent does upon a child in whom he delights? God proceeds to say, Ever since I have so severely reprimanded and chastised him, I have still retained for him a fatherly kindness, I am moved with compassion towards him, and will in due time pardon and receive him into favour W Louth

21 Set thee up waymarks, &c. These words are a call to Israel to prepare for their return. The "waymarks" and "high heap," are stone pillars and tall poles set up in the roads at certain distances for the traveller's direction, and extremely necessary for those who have to pass wild and spacious deserts. Dr. Blagney

22 How long wilt thou go about, &c. According to the first Evangelical promise concerning "the seed of the woman," followed this prediction of the Prophet, "The Lord hath created a new thing in the earth, A woman shall compass a man." That new creation of a man is therefore "new," and therefore "a creation," because wrought in a woman only, without a man, compassing a man. This interpretation is ancient, literal, and clear. The words import a miraculous conception; and the ancient Jews acknowledged this sense, and applied it determinately to the Messiah. This prophecy is illustrated by that of Isaiah, chap. vii. 14. Bp. Pearson

24 — husbandmen, and they that go forth with flocks. These words are descriptive of the circumstances, in which the ancestors of the Jews were placed upon their first introduction into the land of Canaan, when every citizen was literally a "husbandman," and a shepherd, or "keeper of flocks," in consequence of the want of land, which he was forbidden to alienate. Dr. Blagney They denote the state of the people after their return, that they should live industriously and peaceably. See chap. xxxiv. 14. Perrin

27 Behold, the days come, &c. Under the captivity the land lay "desolate, without man, and without beast," chap. xxxiii. 9. but now it shall be inhabited and replenished with man.

29 In those days they shall say no more, The fathers have eaten a sour grape, &c. God hath often declared, that "He will visit the sin of the fathers upon the children," and particularly threatened to execute judgment upon the present generation for the idolatry and other sins of their forefathers. See chap. xv. 4. This gave occasion to the proverb mentioned in this verse, which they that were in captivity applied to their own case; as if the miseries they endured were chiefly owing to their fathers' sins. See Lam.

v 7; Ezek. xviii. 2. But when this judgment should be removed then there would be no further occasion to use this proverb, as Ezekiel speaks in the before-mentioned place W Louth

30 But every one shall die for his own iniquity, These national judgments ceasing, every one should suffer only for his own faults. This prophecy will be remarkably verified, when God shall cause to visit upon the Jewish nation that imprecation, which they laid upon themselves for the death of Christ, "His blood be on us, and on our children," Matt. xxvii. 25. W Louth

"Every one shall die for his own iniquity" see also 1 zek xviii 20. Yet Jeremiah elsewhere complains, "Our fathers have sinned, and are not, and we have borne their iniquities, Lam v 7 To reconcile such places of Scripture, which seem to be at variance with each other, let it be observed, that, where the Scripture ascribes one man's punishment to another man's sin, it points us to God's wisdom and providence, who for good and just ends sometimes makes choice of these occasions, rather than others, to inflict upon men those punishments, which their own sins have otherwise abundantly deserved. On the contrary, where the Scripture attributes all punishments to the personal sins of the sufferers, it points us to God's justice, which looks strict to the desert, and does not upon any occasion whatsoever inflict punishments, but where there are personal sins to deserve them: so that every man, who is punished in any manner or upon any occasion, may join in David's confession, "Against thee have I sinned, and done evil in thy sight, that Thou mightest be justified in thy saying, and clear when Thou art judged, Ps li 4 Bp. Sanderson

31 — I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel Behold the days of the Messiah are coming, wherein I will make a new covenant with My Church Bp. Hall

To what time or person the promises, made here by Jeremiah, and by Ezekiel, chap. xxxiv. 23, 26, xxxvi. 26, related, might be uncertain before Malachi prophesied, though they have internal marks which point to the Messiah, But Malachi, by his prophecy concerning "the Messenger of the covenant," chap. iii. 1, put it out of all doubt. This was to say in other words, that Messiah should be the declarer, the publisher, the mediator of that better covenant, as Moses was of the old covenant; and that a law should be given by Him. Bp. Chandler

32 Not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers Not according to the form of the legal covenant Bp. Hall

I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt, which my covenant they brake. [Although I was an husband unto them, saith the Lord]

33 But this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel: After those days, saith the Lord, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be my people.

34 And they shall teach no more every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord: for I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more.

35 ¶ Thus saith the Lord, which giveth the sun for a light by day, and the ordinances of the moon and of the stars for a light by night, which divideth the sea when the waves thereof roar; The Lord of hosts is his name.

36 If those ordinances depart from before me, saith the Lord, then the seed of old covenant, as opposed to the new, signifies that system of laws and ordinances which were the condition of the covenant made with the Jews on mount Sinai. In this sense the word "law" is usually taken in the New Testament, when it is opposed to the "Gospel." See Acts iv 5; Rom iii. 19; Gal iii. 17. W. Lenth

— although I was an husband unto them,] See the note on chap 11 2

33 — I will put my law in their inward parts, &c.] Though all people have some natural sense of their duty left them, yet generally it is so little, that it does not excite them to the practice of their duty. Hence it is, that God promises, in the new covenant, to quicken and actuate it, saying, "I will put My law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts;" that is, He will write His law in our hearts, as He did at first, by giving us so quick and strong a sense of our duty to Him, as shall excite and stir us up to the sincere performance of it. This He does, by expounding to us our duty in the Old and New Testament, and by His Holy Spirit cooperating with the means of grace, which for that purpose He hath settled in His Church. Bp. Beveridge

— and will be their God, &c.] Together with the promise of giving us such a measure of His grace and Holy Spirit, to influence and direct our hearts, that we shall be inclined of our own accord to do whatever He commands; God further promises, that then "He will be our God," to bless, preserve, and keep us, and we shall be His people, "His peculiar people, zealous of good works, of all such works as He hath set us to do; which that we may, He will give us a right knowledge of Himself and His holy will, so that we shall all know Him, from the least to the greatest, and all that He requires of us. And then the promise in the last place, that we being thus qualified by Him for it, He will forgive us all our sins, that He will look upon us no longer as guilty, but as just and righteous persons, and therefore fit to live with Him in glory "for whom He justifieth, shall He also glorify." Rom viii 30. Bp. Beveridge

34. And they shall teach no more every man his neighbour, &c.] This passage is to be understood of that greater degree of light which the Gospel of Christ would bring into the world; not only a fuller discovery of Divine truth than the Gentiles were able by natural reason to acquire, but a clearer knowledge of God and

Israel also shall cease from being a nation before me for ever.

37 Thus saith the Lord, If heaven above can be measured, and the foundations of the earth searched out beneath, I will also cast off all the seed of Israel for all that they have done, saith the Lord.

38 ¶ Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that the city shall be built to the Lord from the tower of Hananeel unto the gate of the corner.

39 And the measuring line shall yet go forth over against it upon the hill Garb, and shall compass about to Goath.

40 And the whole valley of the dead bodies, and of the ashes, and all the fields unto the brook of Kidron, unto the corner of the horse gate toward the east, shall be holy unto the Lord, it shall not be plucked up, nor thrown down any more for ever

34. — and the ordinances of the moon &c.] Who hath ordained a day, constant, and regular motion of the moon and stars for a light by night? Bp. Hall

36. If those ordinances depart from before me, &c.] If that course which I have set in nature for the motions of the heavens may be altered, then may it be possible for My Church to 'ail upon earth. Bp. Hall

God preserved a remnant of the seed of Israel, that were led captive, and restored them to their own country and government. He preserved another remnant at the beginning of the Gospel, called "the saved," Luke xiii 23, Acts ii 47, who, by embracing the faith of Christ, escaped those terrible judgments that were inflicted on the main body of the nation. And Providence still continues them in a distinct body from all other people in the world, in order to their conversion in God's due time. W. Lenth

38 — the days come, — that the city shall be built.] The days shall come that this city of Jerusalem, which yet stands in her full glory, shall, after the rising and destruction of it, be fully built up again, in all the whole compass of it, from the one end to the other, and, which is thereby typified, My evangelical Church shall be built upon the ruins of the Jewish, in a complete form, and be wholly consecrated to the Lord. Bp. Hall

This prophecy might in some sense be fulfilled in the rebuilding of the city after the captivity, but the mystical sense of the words probably relates to a more perfect state of the Church, which is elsewhere called "the city of God," and the "new Jerusalem," and whose dimensions are figuratively described, Ezek xlii. 30, &c.; Rev xxi. 10, &c. W. Lenth

God confirmeth the captivity for their sins, 36 and promisceth a gracious return.

THE word that came to Jeremiah from the Lord in the tenth year of Zedekiah king of Judah, which was the eighteenth year of Nebuchadnezzar.

2 For then the king of Babylon's army besieged Jerusalem and Jeremiah the prophet was shut up in the court of the prison, which was in the king of Judah's house.

3 For Zedekiah king of Judah had shut him up, saying, Wherefore dost thou prophesy, and say, Thus saith the Lord, 'Behold, I will give this city into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall take it,

4 And Zedekiah king of Judah shall not escape out of the hand of the Chaldeans, but shall surely be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon, and shall speak with him mouth to mouth, and his eyes shall behold his eyes,

5 And he shall lead Zedekiah to Babylon, and there shall he be until I visit him, saith the Lord though ye fight with the Chaldeans, ye shall not prosper.

6 ¶ And Jeremiah said, The word of the Lord came unto me, saying,

7 Behold, Hanameel the son of Shallum thine uncle shall come unto thee, saying, Buy thee my field that is in Anathoth for the right of redemption is thine to buy

8 So Hanameel mine uncle's son came to me in the court of the prison according to the word of the Lord and said unto me, Buy my field, I pray thee, that is in Anathoth, which is in the country of Benjamin for the right of inheritance is thine, and the redemption is thine, buy it for thyself. Then I knew that this was the word of the Lord.

9 And I bought the field of Hanameel my uncle's son, that was in Anathoth, and weighed him the money, even seventeen shekels of silver.

10 And I subscribed the evidence, and sealed it, and took witnesses, and weighed him the money in the balances.

11 So I took the evidence of the purchase, both that which was sealed according to the law and custom, and that which was open.

12 And I gave the evidence of the purchase unto Baruch the son of Neriah, the son of Maaseiah, in the sight of Hanameel mine uncle's son, and in the presence of the witnesses that subscribed the book of the purchase, before all the Jews that sat in the court of the prison.

13 ¶ And I charged Baruch before them, saying,

14 Thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel; Take these evidences, this evidence of the purchase, both which is sealed, and this evidence which is open; and put them in an earthen vessel, that they may continue many days.

15 For thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel; Houses and fields and vineyards shall be possessed again in this land.

16 ¶ Now when I had delivered the evidence of the purchase unto Baruch the son of Neriah, I prayed unto the Lord, saying,

17 Ah Lord God! behold, thou hast made the heaven and the earth by thy great power and stretched out arm, and there is nothing too hard for thee

V. 9 For Zedekiah — had shut him up, saying, Wherefore dost thou prophesy, &c.] This refers to the prophecy recorded, chap. xxxiv 2, &c. the particulars there mentioned being in order of time before the occurrences related in this chapter. W. Lowth.

5 — there shall he be until I visit him,] There shall he be until the time that I put an end to his captivity by death. Bp. Hall. Or, till I visit him in his posterity, whom I will restore to their own country. So God tells Jacob, "I will go down with thee into Egypt; and I will also surely bring thee up again." Gen. xlviii 4, which promise was made good to his posterity. W. Lowth.

7 Behold, Hanameel — shall come unto thee, saying, &c.] See Exod. iv 14, and the last note there.

9 — seventeen shekels of silver.] Not much above forty shillings in our money, a small price for a field, or piece of ground. But the quantity of land is uncertain and the circumstances of the time must have greatly lessened its value; the field being then in the enemy's possession, and the purchaser knowing that neither he nor his heirs should enter on it till after seventy years. W. Lowth, Dr. Blayney.

11 — both that which was sealed — and that which was open.] The open or unsealed writing was probably either a copy of the sealed deed, or else a certificate of the witnesses, in whose presence the deed of purchase was signed and sealed. W. Lowth.

Sir J. Chardin thinks this ancient story is illustrated by the modern management in the conveyance of Eastern property. "After a contract is made, the deed is kept by the party himself, not the notary. and a copy of it is made, signed by the notary alone, which is shewn upon proper occasions, whereas the other is never exhibited." According to this account, the two writings mentioned in the text were to the same effect the one being sealed up with solemnity, not to be used on common occasions, the other being open, to be perused at pleasure, upon all occasions. The sealed one answered to a record with us, the other a writing for common use. Hammer.

12 And I gave the evidence of the purchase unto Baruch.] Baruch was a scribe by profession, and it may be supposed, that the attendance of such an one, skilled in the forms of the law, was necessary on those occasions, both to draw up the writings, and to officiate in the capacity of a notary publick with us. And to his custody, as being a publick officer, the custody of the title-deeds was intrusted. Dr. Blayney.

14 — put them in an earthen vessel, &c.] Lay up these evidences sure in an earthen vessel, where they may be kept from rotting, for a long time, as those, whereof I shall have most certain use hereafter: for this land shall be in due time repossessed. Bp. Hall.

<sup>¶ Numb 16 2</sup> 27 Behold, I am the Lord, the God of all flesh: is there any thing too hard for me?

<sup>Before CHRIST about 590.</sup> 28 Therefore thus saith the Lord; Behold, I will give this city into the hand of the Chaldeans, and into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and he shall take it:

29 And the Chaldeans, that fight against this city, shall come and set fire on this city, and burn it with the houses, upon whose roofs they have offered incense unto Baal, and poured out drink offerings unto other gods, to provoke me to anger

30 For the children of Israel and the children of Judah, have only done evil before me from their youth: for the children of Israel have only provoked me to anger with the work of their hands, saith the Lord.

31 For this city hath been to me as a provocation of mine anger and of my fury from the day that they built it even unto this day, that I should remove it from before my face,

32 Because of all the evil of the children of Israel and of the children of Judah, which they have done to provoke me to anger, they, their kings, their princes, their priests, and their prophets, and the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem

33 And they have turned unto me the back, and not the face: though I taught them, rising up early and teaching them, yet they have not hearkened to receive instruction.

34 But they set their abominations in the house, which is called by my name, to defile it

35 And they built the high places of Baal, which are in the valley of the son of Hinnom, to cause their sons and their daughters to pass through the fire unto Molech, which I commanded them not, neither came it into my mind, that they should do this abomination, to cause Judah to sin

[1 Behold the mounts.] The ramparts raised against the walls, for the siege of Jerusalem for placing engines of shot, (as in the margin) in order to assault and take the city. Compare chap xxxiii. 1. ¶ Lowth The "mount," as used by the Greeks, is that described by Archbishop Potter. It was raised so high, as to equal if not exceed, the top of the besieged walls. The sides were filled in with bricks or stones, or secured with strong rafters to hinder it from falling, the fore part only, being by degrees to be advanced near the walls, remained bare. The pile itself consisted of all sorts of materials, as earth, timber, boughs, stones, &c. into the middle were cast only wickets and twigs of trees to fetch and as it were, cement, the other parts. Movable towers of wood were usually placed upon the mount. They were formed of several stories which were able to carry, not soldiers only, but all sorts of portable engines. Hence we may perceive in what sense the mounts came unto, or approached, "the city," as in the text and how a "mount" or "bank" might even "stand in the ditch," or "trench," 2 Sam. xx. 15. as likewise of what use "trees" were in constructing them, Jer. vi. 6. and how they might be said to "throw down the houses," chap. xxxii. 1. ¶ Parkhurst

35 — to cause their sons and their daughters to pass through the fire unto Molech. The words "through the fire" are not in the Hebrew but in other places which speak of the same thing, the words are expressed at full length, see Deut. xxi. 20, 2 Kings xxiii. 10. Elsewhere the same thing is expressed by "burning their sons and their daughters in the fire, and offering them for burnt offerings" see chap. vii. 31, xix. 5, Deut. xii. 31. The idolatrous Jews are often upbraided with the practice of this inhuman rite, see Ps. cvi. 37, Is. lvi. 5. And the phrase of "making children pass through" the fire is certainly taken in this sense, 1 Zek. xiv. 20, 21; and xxii. 27, where it is explained by "slaying them," "consuming them," and "giving them to be devoured."

42 For thus saith the LORD, Like as I

Some critics are of opinion, that the exposition is taken in a mild sense in other texts, particularly 2 Kings xvi 3 and that it only denotes holding the children over the fire, or making them pass through the flame by way of lustration or dedication to some idol. To confirm this interpretation they observe, that the Hebrew verb used in the text signifies to dedicate or consecrate, see 1 and xiv 12 W Lenth

The fact in all probability was, that the more tenderhearted parents were content simply to dedicate their children, waving them perhaps over the fire that was burning before the idol, without doing them any corporal hurt, whilst the gloomy superstition of others prompted them to go greater lengths, and to perpetrate the most inhuman barbarities under the notion of religious worship. Both however were guilty of actions highly offensive to God and provoking His resentment Dr Blayney

36 And now therefore thus saith the Lord, In this and the following verses God gives an answer to the doubt proposed by the Prophet in ver 25 Or the words may be thus translated,

But now notwithstanding (all this), thus saith the Lord See the note on chap xvi 14 W Lenth

37 — and I will cause them to dwell safely ] St Jerome observes, that this promise, taken in its full extent, was not made good to those that returned from captivity because they were frequently infested with wars, as well by the kings of Syria and Egypt, as by the rest of their neighbours as appears from the history of the Maccabees and were finally subdued and destroyed by the Romans W Lenth

40 And I will make an everlasting covenant with them, ] The Jewish covenant, with respect to the ceremonial ordinances contained in it, is sometimes called an everlasting covenant see Gen xvii 13, Lev xxiv 8, Is xxiv 5, because those ordinances were to last till the age of the Messiah, called the "age," or "the world to come," Heb ii 5, vi 5 But when this expression is

Chap XXXIII This chapter contains a prophecy, which, though applicable in some parts to the restoration of the Jews from Babylon, cannot however be so understood upon the whole

God reveals His gracious purpose of healing the wounds of Jerusalem, restoring the captivity of Judah forgiving their sins, and distinguishing them with such blessings, as to strike the astonished nations with fear and trembling ver 1—9 He foretells that the land, whose desolation they deplored, should again flourish with multitudes, both of men and cattle, ver 10—14 He confirms His former promise of establishing a kingdom of righteousness in a branch of the house of David, and rendering it perpetual, together with the priesthood of the sons of Levi, ver 11—18 He declares His covenant in this respect with David and the Levites to be as sure as the covenant of day and night, ver 19—22 And, to remove the reproach of having cast off those families, whom He had once distinguished by His choice He renews His protestations of infallibly restoring the seed of Jacob and of appointing the seed of David to rule over them for ever, ver 23 to the end Dr Blayney

Chap XXXIV This chapter contains two distinct prophecies The first of which is dated at the time when Nebuchadnezzar was laying on the siege of Jerusalem and of the cities of Judah and Azekah, most probably towards the latter end of the ninth year of Zedekiah, the siege having been begun in the tenth month of that year The second prophecy was delivered some time afterwards when the Chaldeans had broken up the siege and were marched off to meet the Egyptian army, which made a show of coming to the relief of Jerusalem In Blayney

Ver 1 — all the cities thereof See ver 7 he he cities of Judah which were subject to Jerusalem, is their metropolis called elsewhere the daughters of Judah by way of distinction from the mother city Compare chap xlv 2 h 13 In Blayney

2 — Thus saith the Lord Behold I will give this city &c This prophecy was fulfilled in all its parts I will give the city into the hand of the king of Babylon and he shall burn it with fire so says the Prophet the history relates They that is the force of the king of Babylon burnt the house of God and brake down the wall of Jerusalem and burnt all the palaces thereof with fire 2 Chron xxxvi 19 Thou shalt not escape out of his hand but shalt surely be taken, and delivered into his hand so says the Prophet, the history relates The men of war fled by night and the king went the way toward the plain and the army of the Chaldeans pursued after the king and overtook him in the plains of Jericho, and all his army were scattered from him so they took the king and brought him up to the king,

16 — and this is the name wherewith she shall be called &c The simplest interpretation of the original words is 'He that shall call her, that is to be His peculiar people,' is the Lord our righteousness In Blayney

17 — David shall never want a man &c So long as Israel remained a kingdom those of the line of David ruled over it when that failed Christ came in the flesh who ruleth, and shall rule, over the Israel of God for ever In Blayney In a spiritual sense the kingdom of Christ, the Son of David has been for some time established over those whom the Apostle calls 'the Israel of God,' Gal vi 16 and the children of Abraham Gal iii 7 summing thereby all true believers whether of the Jews or of the Gentiles And in the Church of Christ there hath been a constant and uninterrupted succession of persons appointed to perform the public offices of religion in the room of, although not taken out of the family of the priest the Levites And the perpetuity of this kingdom and this priesthood is, in the opinion of many learned expositors looked upon as a full and authentic completion of the intention of the prophecy In Blayney These promises can only respect the eternal priesthood of Jesus, exercised by Himself and His ministers in the Christian Church In Blayney

18 — to offer burnt offerings &c It is not necessary to suppose that the same sacrifices shall continue to be offered in the Christian Church, which are prescribed by the Mosaic law, but, as that law is abrogated, we may fairly understand those sacrifices figuratively to denote the offices of a more spiritual worship substituted in their stead In Blayney See the notes on Isa xix 19, 20

24 — The two families which the Lord hath chosen Some suppose the two kingdoms of Israel and Judah to be intended others the royal and sacerdotal families of David and Levi In Blayney

6 Then Jeremiah the prophet spake all these words unto Zedekiah king of Judah in Jerusalem, of Babylon to Babel, 2 Kings xxv 1-6 The Prophet goes on 'Thine eyes shall behold the eyes of the king of Babylon, and he shall speak with thee mouth to mouth' No pleasant circumstance this to Zedekiah, who had provoked the king of Babylon by revolting from him. The history says 'The king of Babylon gave judgment upon Zedekiah, or as it is more literally rendered from the Hebrew, "spake judgment with him at Babel" The Prophet concludes this part with, "and thou shalt go to Babylon" the history says 'The king of Babylon bound him in chains and carried him to Babylon, and put him in prison till the day of his death Jer li 11 "Thou shalt not die by the sword" He did not die by the sword, he did not fall in battle "But thou shalt die in peace" He did die in peace he expired neither on the rack nor on the scaffold, was neither strangled, nor poisoned, no unusual fate of captive kings! he died peacefully in his bed, though that bed was in a prison "And with the burnings of thy fathers shall they burn odours for thee" It cannot be proved from history, that this part of the prophecy was accomplished though the probability is, that it was so, the probability is grounded on the two reasons Daniel, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego to say nothing of other Jews, were men of great authority in the court of the king of Babylon before and after the commencement of the imprisonment of Zedekiah and Daniel continued in power till the subversion of the kingdom of Babylon by Cyrus Now it seems very probable, that Daniel and the other Jews would have both inclination to request, and influence enough with the king of Babylon to obtain, permission to bury their deceased prince Zedekiah after the manner of his fathers But if there had been no Jews at Babylon of consequence enough to make such a request still it is probable that the king of Babylon would have ordered the Jews to bury and lament their departed prince after the manner of their country Monarchs like other men are conscious of the instability of human condition and when the pomp of war has ceased when the insolence of conquest is abated, and the fury of resentment is subsided they seldom fail to reverence royalty even in its ruins, and grant without reluctance proper obsequies to the remains of captive king by Watson

5 — so shall they burn odours for thee ] It was a custom among the Jews, at the funeral of their kings to prepare a bed of spices 1 Chron xvi 14 of which they made a perfume by burning them, and therein to deposit the body of the deceased prince Compare 2 Chron xxi 19 W Lowth

8 — to proclaim liberty unto them, ] By the law of Moses (1 xod xxi 2, Dent xv 12) the Israelites were not allowed to detain their brethren of the Hebrew race in perpetual bondage but were required to let them go free after having served six years This law had, it seems fallen into disuse but king Zedekiah, upon the approach of the Chaldean army, whether from religious motives, or a political view to employ the men, who were set free in the service of the war engaged the people to act conformably to the law and they released their brethren accordingly But no sooner were their fears abated by the retreat of the Chaldeans, than, in defiance of every principle of religion, honour, and humanity they imposed the yoke of servitude anew upon those unhappy persons ver 11 Dr Blayney

14 At the end of seven years ] The seventh year was the year of release Dent xv 9, consequently servants were to continue in service but six years, and at the beginning of the seventh were to be let go free, see ver 12 For this reason some critics render the phrase here, "within the term of seven years" And the words mean no more, as appears by a like form of speech, Dent xiv 28, where it is said "At the end of three years thou shalt bring forth all the tithe of thine increase the same year" which is to be explained by what is said chap xxvi 12, where every third year is called "the year of tithing" So Christ is said to rise again after three days, Mark viii 31 which is elsewhere explained by his rising the "third day" W Lowth

1 By the obedience of the Rechabites, 12 Jeremiah con-demneth the disobedience of the Jews 18 God blesseth the Rechabites for their obedience

<sup>about 600</sup> THE word which came unto Jeremiah from the LORD in the days of Jehorakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, saying,

2 Go unto the house of the Rechabites, and speak unto them, and bring them into the house of the LORD, into one of the chambers, and give them wine to drink

3 Then I took Jazani the son of Jeremiah, the son of Habaziah, and his brethren, and all his sons, and the whole house of the Rechabites, fidelity and firm adherence to the injunction of their ancestor might be rendered more conspicuous, and might excite the Jews to emulate their virtue. God tempts us in His justice in order to prove the sincerity of our obedience, and in His goodness in order to promote our own profit and the benefit of others

— the house of the Rechabites ] The Rechabites as may be collected from ver 7, were not of the children of Israel but strangers of another race, who dwelt amongst them. From 1 Chron ii 55, they appear to have been Kenites, a people originally settled in that part of Arabia Petraea which was called the land of Midian and most probably the descendants of Jethro, who is called a Kenite and said to have severed himself from the rest of his countrymen and to have dwelt amongst the people of Israel. Compare Numb x 29—32, with Judg i 16, iv 11. At what time Rechab lived who gave his name to the family, is not certain nor whether he was the immediate father, or more remote ancestor, of Jonadab, for the word son often denotes nothing more than a lineal descendant. But it is most likely, that the Jonadab here spoken of was the same person of whom mention is made 2 Kings x 15 (see the note there). The institutions he left with his posterity bespeak a principal concern for the purity of their morals, which he might rightly suppose would be less liable to be corrupted, whilst they adhered to the simplicity of their ancient usages, than if they adopted the refinements of modern luxury. He therefore enjoined them, not only to abstain from the use of wine but to live as the patriarchs did of old, and as many of their countrymen, the Sennite, Arabs, continue to do at this day, without any fixed habitations or possessions far from the society of cities, in the open country, feeding their flocks, and maintaining themselves by the product of them

Dr Blayney

— I proclaim a liberty for you — to the sword, &c ] I give full liberty to the sword, and to the pestilence, and to the famine, to seize upon you. <sup>Dr Hull</sup>

15 — when they cut the calf in twain, ] See the note on Gen xi 10

As Zedekiah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, on finding themselves besieged, set at liberty their Hebrew servants and pretended they would observe the law of God, but afterwards imagining they had nothing to fear, changed their minds and made slaves again of their brethren thus sinners pretend to humble themselves and seem disposed to repentance while they are threatened and the danger is near but as soon as their fears are over they break their promises, and return to their sins. Jeremiah's reproaches and threatenings of the Jews for their impious and unjust proceeding shew, that a repentance and a reformation, which is but of short duration instead of pacifying God only provokes Him the more and that those, who violate His covenant and their own promises, shall not escape the punishments which their hypocrisy and infidelity deserve. <sup>Ostervald</sup>

Chap XXXV All the intermediate prophecies from chap xvi, belong clearly to the reign of Zedekiah, and consequently are posterior to this chapter and the next, which are dated in the reign of Jehoiakim, together with chap xlv, which is closely connected with the latter of these two chapters. The Rechabites appear to have retired within the walls of Jerusalem, upon the hostile approach of Nebuchadnezzar and his army, in the fourth year of Jehoiakim. <sup>Dr Blayney</sup>

Ver 2 Go unto the house of the Rechabites, — and give them wine to drink ] Here God truth the Rechabites, as He also tried Abraham Gen xxi 1. There appear to be two reasons why He made this trial of their obedience the one was, for their own greater advantage and improvement, the other was, that their

4 And I brought them into the house of the LORD, into the chamber of the sons of Hinn, the son of Igdaliah, a man of God, which was by the chamber of the princes, which was above the chamber of Maaseiah the son of Shallum, the keeper of the door.

5 And I set before the sons of the house of the Rechabites pots full of wine, and cups, and I said unto them, Drink ye wine.

6 But they said, We will drink no wine: for Jonadab the son of Rechab our father commanded us, saying, Ye shall drink no wine, neither ye, nor your sons for ever.

7 Neither shall ye build house, nor sow seed, nor plant vineyard, nor have any, but all your days ye shall dwell in tents, that ye may live many days in the land where ye be strangers.

8 Thus have we obeyed the voice of Jonadab the son of Rechab our father in all that he hath charged us, to drink no wine all our days, we, our wives, our sons, nor our daughters.

9 Nor to build houses for us to dwell in: neither have we vineyard, nor field, nor seed.

10 But we have dwelt in tents, and have obeyed, and done according to all that Jonadab our father commanded us.

11 But it came to pass, when Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon came up into the land, that we said, Come, and let us go to Jerusalem for fear of the army of the Chaldeans, and for fear of the army of the Syrians: so we dwell at Jerusalem.

12 ¶ Then came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah, saying,

13 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Go and tell the men of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, Will ye not receive instruction to hearken to my words? saith the LORD.

14 The words of Jonadab the son of Rechab, that he commanded his sons not to drink wine, are performed, for unto this day they drink none, but obey their father's commandment notwithstanding I have spoken unto you, rising early and speaking, but ye hearkened not unto me.

15 I have sent also unto you all my servants the prophets, rising up early and sending them, saying, Return ye now every man from his evil way, and amend your doings, and go not after other gods to serve them, and ye shall dwell in the land which I have given to you and to your fathers: but ye have not inclined your ear, nor hearkened unto me.

16 Because the sons of Jonadab the son of Rechab have performed the commandment of their father, which he commanded them, but this people hath not hearkened unto me.

17 Therefore thus saith the LORD God of hosts, the God of Israel, Behold, I will bring upon Judah and upon all the inhabitants of Jerusalem all the evil that I have pronounced against them: because I have spoken unto them, but they have not heard, and I have called unto them, but they have not answered.

18 ¶ And Jeremiah said unto the house of the Rechabites, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Because ye have obeyed the commandment of Jonadab your father, and kept all his precepts, and done according unto all that he hath commanded you.

19 Therefore thus saith the LORD of 11 — and dwell at Jerusalem.] Upon the Chaldean invasion we retired to Jerusalem, where, during the siege of the place, we were forced to continue. In such a case they did not think themselves obliged to a strict observance of the injunctions of Jonadab, because all human law admits of an equitable construction, and may be superseded in cases of necessity, or when the observance of them is attended with such great inconveniences, as the law gives himself if he could have foreseen, would probably have made ground of exception. H. Jortin

15 I have sent also unto you all my servants the prophets &c.] God here explains why he had commissioned the Prophet to bring the Rechabites to the temple, and commanded him to set wine before them, and invite them to drink it: namely, that by their refusing to comply with the invitation, in obedience to their father Jonadab, He might convince the Jews of their disobedience to His commands, though those commands were more obligatory than the commands of Jonadab. For, 1st, Jonadab was but a earthly parent, and so had no absolute universal sovereignty over his children: but God was the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel. 2dly, Jonadab's commands were not for the performance of any moral duty, but the doing of a thing which they might do or leave undone; God required of them what was but their moral duty, and for which there was the highest reason. 3dly, Jonadab's commands had no promise annexed. God's precept had a promise annexed, yet they had not yielded Him that obedience which the sons of Jonadab had yielded him. He was the Father, but where was His honour? Poole

AN D it came to pass in the fourth year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, that this word came unto Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

2 Take thee a roll of a book, and write therein all the words that I have spoken unto thee against Israel, and against Judah, and against all the nations, from the day I spake unto thee, from the days of Josiah, even unto this day

3 It may be that the house of Judah will hearken all the evil which I purpose to do unto them, that they may return every man from his evil way, that I may forgive their iniquity and their sin

4 Then Jeremiah called Baruch the son of Neriah and Baruch wrote from the mouth of Jeremiah all the words of the LORD, which he had spoken unto him, upon a roll of a book

5 And Jeremiah commanded Baruch, saying, I am shut up, I cannot go into the house of the LORD

6 Therefore go thou, and read in the roll, which thou hast written from my mouth, the words of the LORD in the ears of the people in the LORD's house upon the fasting day and also thou shalt read them in the ears of all Judah that come out of their cities

8 And Baruch the son of Neriah did according to all that Jeremiah the prophet commanded him, reading in the book the words of the LORD in the LORD's house

19 — Jonadab the son of Rechab shall not want a man to stand before me for ever ] When the main body of the Jewish nation were dispersed in their several captivities some of the family of the Rechabites still remain to attend upon My service and enjoy the privileges of worshipping in My temple at Jerusalem for to stand in the presence of a prince implies an attendance in some degree upon his person and service, 1 Kings x 8 and therefore to stand before God must denote at least the privilege of attending His courts and worshipping Him among the train of His chosen servants and followers Some branches of this family returned from the captivity as appears from 1 Chron ii 55

The expression for ever is not always to be taken in a strict sense but often means only a long continuance, and is used comparatively with respect to a shorter duration See the notes on chap xxv 9 xxxv 10 W Lenth

Of so great price in the sight of God is the virtue of filial duty and obedience, that it seldom fails of its reward even in this world The law which enjoined it had a promise of long life annexed thereto Exod xx 12 and it is distinguished by the Apostle as the first commandment with promise Eph vi 2 And by this history of the Rechabites we may learn that the surest way to entail a blessing on our children and to perpetuate our names and families in a numerous and virtuous issue, is to reverence and obey our own parents Hogan

Shaphan the scribe, in the higher court, at the entry of the new gate of the Lord's house, in the ears of all the people

11 ¶ When Michaiah the son of Gemariah, the son of Shaphan, had heard out of the book all the words of the Lord,

12 Then he went down into the king's house, into the scribe's chamber and, lo, all the princes sat there, even Elishama the scribe, and Delaiah the son of Shemaiah, and Elnathan the son of Achbor, and Gemariah the son of Shaphan, and Zedekiah the son of Hananiah, and all the princes

13 Then Michaiah declared unto them all the words that he had heard, when Baruch read the book in the ears of the people

14 Therefore all the princes sent Jehudi the son of Nethaniah, the son of Shelemiah, the son of Cushi, unto Baruch, saying, Take in thine hand the roll wherein thou hast read in the ears of the people, and come So Baruch the son of Neriah took the roll in his hand, and came unto them

15 And they said unto him, Sit down now, and read it in our ears So Baruch read it in their ears

16 Now it came to pass, when they had heard all the words, they were afraid both one and other, and said unto Baruch, We will surely tell the king of all these words

17 And they asked Baruch, saying, Tell us now, How didst thou write all these words at his mouth?

22 Now the king sat in the winterhouse in the ninth month and there was a fire on the hearth burning before him

23 And it came to pass, that when Jehudi had read three or four leaves, he cut it with the penknife, and cast it into the fire that was on the hearth, until all the roll was consumed in the fire that was on the hearth

24 Yet they were not afraid, nor rent their garments, neither the king, nor any of his servants that heard all these words

25 Nevertheless Elnathan and Delaiah and Gemariah had made intercession to the king that he would not burn the roll but he would not hear them

30 Therefore thus saith the Lord of Jehoiakim king of Judah, He shall have none to sit upon the throne of David; and his dead body shall be cast out in the day to the heat, and in the night to the frost

31 And I will punish him and his seed and his servants for their iniquity, and I will bring upon them, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and upon the men of Judah, all the evil that I have pronounced against them, but they hearkened not

When Jeremiah and Baruch wrote the second roll, they were directed by God to add to it several things, which were not in the former, aggravations, no doubt, of Jehoiakim's punishment for his impious burning of the first roll. And very just it was that his doom should be aggravated. For, if every abuse of temporal blessings shall be imputed, as certainly it shall, to wicked men, to augment their reckoning at the last day, much less shall spiritual wantonness and intemperance be overlooked and escape such imputation. Reading

1* — for they had made that the prison.] There is nothing extraordinary in making the dwellinghouse of a great man a prison according to either the ancient or modern manners of the East. See Gen. xxxix. 20. Even in the royal palace itself we find there was a prison, chap. xxvii. 2. Sir John Chardin says, "The Eastern prisons are not publick buildings erected for that purpose but a part of the house in which their criminal judges dwell. As the governor and provost of a town, or the captain of the watch, imprison such as are accused in their own houses they set apart a canton of it for that purpose, when they are put into these offices and choose for the jailor the most proper person they can find of their domesticks." Jonathan's house probably became a prison in consequence of his being made a royal scribe, or, as we would term him, secretary of state. Dr Bluney Harmer.

— thou shalt be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon. It is a proof of the firmness and integrity of the Prophet, that he should thus predict the captivity and afflictions of his sovereign especially at a moment when he had incurred the perilous suspicion of favouring the cause of the enemy. Richards

20 — lest I do thee] A discretionary power is given to the I expect to treat his prisoners just as he pleases. If he receives here for he will treat the accused well but if he has a greater regard for those who have imprisoned a man, it will treat the prisoner with the greatest inhumanity. This account of Eastern imprisonment gives great force to the supplication of Jeremiah that he might not be removed to the house of Jonathan the scribe, lest he should die there. Sir J Chardin, Harmer

21 — into the court of the prison,] Not belonging to the house of Jonathan the scribe, where the dungeon was, but the court of the prison in the king's house, mentioned chap xxxii 2. Dr Blayney.

21 — the bakers' street ] In ancient times an oven in the East was designed to serve only a single family. "The bakers' street" was perhaps a temporary regulation to supply the wants of the soldiers assembled for the defence of Jerusalem, as at Algiers, according to Dr Shaw, besides money, the soldiers received their number of loaves every day. If so, it was natural for the king to order Jeremiah a piece or cake of bread from thence every day after the same manner. Harmer

It is here to be noticed, that God protected Jeremiah and softened the heart of Zedekiah towards him, so that he not only saved him from the dungeon, but fed him likewise, while the siege lasted and the famine prevailed in Jerusalem. Thus Providence sets bounds to the malice of the wicked, delivers the righteous and causes good men to meet with comfort and assistance in the worst of times. Osteval

Ver 5 — for the king is not he that can do any thing against you] The king evidently speaks this in disgust with the princes for endeavouring to frustrate his clemency. The advice of Jeremiah clearly proves, that the destruction of Zedekiah was not so determined, but that he might have prevented it. ## CHAP XXXIX.

1 Jerusalem is taken. 4 Zedekiah is made blind, and sent to Babylon. 8 The city ruined. 9 The people captivated. 11 Nebuchadrezzar's charge for the good usage of Jeremiah. 15 God's promise to Ebed-melech.

IN the ninth year of Zedekiah king of Judah, in the tenth month, came Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon and all his army against Jerusalem, and they besieged it.

2 And in the eleventh year of Zedekiah, in the fourth month, the ninth day of the month, the city was broken up.

3 And all the princes of the king of Babylon came in, and sat in the middle gate, even Nergal-sharezer, Samgar-nebo, Sarsechim, Rab-saris, Nergal-sharezer, Rab-mag, with all the residue of the princes of the king of Babylon.

4 ¶ And it came to pass, that when Zedekiah the king of Judah saw them, and all the men of war, then they fled, and went forth out of the city by night, by the way of the king's garden, by the gate betwixt the two walls: and he went out the way of the plain.

22 And behold all the women &c.] Thou, that art afraid of the insultings of men that are thy subjects, shalt fall under the insultings and taunts of the women. Pool.

28 — until the day that Jerusalem was taken.] The behaviour of Zedekiah in this transaction is memorable. That prince had a regard for Jeremiah, and even wished to follow his advice: he was moved with what the Prophet had told him, and almost determined to do as he advised: but his fear of the rulers of the people prevented him. Thus do sinners act. When God speaks to them, they are sometimes affected, there are still some remains of good in them, which press them to their duty, but they are hindered from following the dictates of their conscience by a false shame, by the fear of men, and by other the like motives, so that they let slip the favourable opportunity, and, after long struggling and resistance, they take the worst side and perish. This was the cause of Zedekiah's ruin. The Scripture remarks, that he humbled not himself when Jeremiah spake unto him in the name of God, and notwithstanding the solicitations of the Prophet, and the conviction of his own conscience, resolved not to yield to the Chaldeans. The warnings contained in this chapter are the last that God gave him: and as he neglected to improve them, it was afterwards too late to do so, and he drew upon himself and upon his subjects the utmost miseries, as we find related in the following chapter. Ostrwald.

Chap XXXIX ver 2 — the city was broken up.] Such breaches were made in the walls, that the army of the Chaldeans entered. W. Lowth.

3 — in the middle gate.] See the note on Isa xxi 1. The middle gate, or "the gate of the centre," seems to have been a gate of communication in the middle of the valley between the two parts of the city, sometimes called "the higher" and "the lower city." The Chaldeans entered the city on the north side by a breach in the walls, and immediately rushing forward, and posting themselves in this gate, in the very heart or entrance of the city, they thereby became masters at will of the whole. Zedekiah with his troops, perceiving this, fled out at the opposite gate on the south side. Dr Blayney.

— Nergal-sharezer, &c.] As Nergal-sharezer occurs twice the next word seems to be an addition to the name by way of distinguishing the person. Probably "Samgar," "Rab-saris," and "Rab-mag," were all titles of office, as we find "Rab-tebachim," which we render "captains of the guard," ver 11, or it might be, "commander in chief of the forces," was the title of Nebuzaradan. Dr Blayney.

4 — by the gate betwixt the two walls:] We find mention made of two walls, one external to the other, 2 Chron xxxii 5. Probably between these two walls might have been a private passage through which the king and his followers might escape from the besiegers, who surrounded the city, and undoubtedly kept a strict watch at the principal gates. Dr Blayney.

— where he gave judgment upon him.] Or, 'proceeded judicially against him.' The Hebrew phrase is literally, 'discovered judgments with him,' and implies all the several steps of a judicial process — the arraignment, trial, conviction, and condemnation. Zedekiah had sworn allegiance to the king of Babylon, and was therefore liable to be tried and condemned as a rebel and traitor. See 2 Chron xxxvi 12, Ezek xlviii 16, 18. Dr Blayney

Among capital punishments in Abyssinia may be reckoned the plucking out of the eyes: this is generally inflicted upon rebels: it does not often prove fatal, though performed in the coarsest manner with an iron forceps, or pincers. Xenophon tells us, this was one of the punishments used by Cyrus and Ammianus Marcellinus mentions, that Sapor king of Persia banished Arsaces, whom he had taken prisoner, to a certain castle, after having pulled out his eyes. Brue

9 — the remnant of the people that remained in the city, and those that fell away.] Compare 2 Kings xxv 11. He carried away the fugitives or deserters, that went over to the Chaldeans during the siege, as well as those whom he found in the city, when it was taken. W Louth

1 Jeremiah, being set free by Nebuzai-adan, goeth to Gedaliah. 7 The dispersed Jews repair unto him. 14 Johanan revealing Ishmael's conspiracy is not believed.

11 Now Nebuchadnezzar — gave charge &c.] He was informed that the Prophet had exhorted both king and people to submit to his authority: see chap xxviii 11, xxviii 17, 18. had his advice been listened to it would have prevented the expensive labour of so long a siege, and the bloodshed which attended it. W Louth

11 — committed him unto Gedaliah.] After he had first been carried out of Jerusalem with the rest of the captives, as far as Ramah. See chap xli 1—5. W Louth

It is to be observed that Jeremiah was saved at the taking of Jerusalem: and that Ibed-melech, who had saved the life of Jeremiah, was also himself spared, as God had promised: because he had put his trust in Him. These two are instances of the protection, which God vouchsafes to good men in times of calamity. What happened to Ibed-melech shews in particular that those, who protect the innocent, and undertake the defence of the oppressed servants of God, receive the reward of their zeal and piety. Ostwald

Ibed-melech is here again called the Ethiopian, ver 16, to the reproach of the Jews, that a stranger should shew more kindness to a Prophet of the Lord, than any of that nation to whom he was specially sent. Pool

from Ramah, when he had taken him being bound in chains among all that were carried away captive of Jerusalem and Judah, which were carried away captive unto Babylon

2 And the captain of the guard took Jeremiah, and said unto him, The LORD thy God hath pronounced this evil upon this place

3 Now the LORD hath brought it, and done according as he hath said because ye have sinned against the LORD, and have not obeyed his voice, therefore this thing is come upon you

4 And now, behold, I loose thee this day from the chains which were upon thine hand If it seem good unto thee to come with me into Babylon, come, and I will look well unto thee but if it seem ill unto thee to come with me into Babylon, forbear behold, all the land is before thee whither it seemeth good and convenient for thee to go, thither go

5 Now while he was not yet gone back, he said, Go back also to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan, whom the king of Babylon hath made governor over the cities of Judah, and dwell with him among the people or go wheresoever it seemeth convenient unto thee to go So the captain of the guard gave him victuals and a reward, and let him go

6 Then went Jeremiah unto Gedaliah the son of Ahikam to Mizpah, and dwelt with him among the people that were left in the land

7 ¶ Now when all the captains of the forces which were in the fields, even they and their men, heard that the king of Babylon had made Gedaliah the son of Ahikam governor in the land, and had committed unto him men, and women, and children, and of the poor of the land, of them that were not carried away captive to Babylon,

8 Then they came to Gedaliah to Mizpah, even Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and Johanan and Jonathan the sons of Kareah, and Seraiah the son of Tanhumeth, and the sons of Ephai the Netophathite, and Jezaniah the son of Maachathite, they and their men

9 And Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan sware unto them and to their men, saying, Fear not to serve the Chaldeans dwell in the land, and serve the king of Babylon, and it shall be well with you

10 As for me, behold, I will dwell at Mizpah, to serve the Chaldeans, which will come unto us but ye, gather ye wine, and summer fruits, and oil, and put them in your vessels, and dwell in your cities that ye have taken

11 Likewise when all the Jews that were in Moab, and among the Ammonites, and in Edom, and that were in all the countries, heard that the king of Babylon had left a remnant of Judah, and that he had set over them Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan,

12 Even all the Jews returned out of all places whither they were driven, and came to the land of Judah, to Gedaliah, unto Mizpah, and gathered wine and summer fruits very much

13 ¶ Moreover Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were in the fields, came to Gedaliah to Mizpah,

14 And said unto him, Dost thou certainly know that Baalis the king of the Ammonites hath sent Ishmael the son of Nethaniah to slay thee? But Gedaliah the son of Ahikam believed them not

1 Ishmael, treacherously killing Gedaliah and others, purposing with the residue to flee unto the Ammonites
11 Johanan recovereth the captives, and sendeth to flee into Egypt

NOW it came to pass in the seventh month, that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah the son of Elishama, of the seed royal, and the princes of the king, even ten men with him, came unto Gedaliah the son of Ahikam to Mizpah, and there they did eat bread together in Mizpah

2 Then arose Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and the ten men that were with him, and smote Gedaliah the son of Ahikam the son of Shaphan with the sword, and slew him, whom the king of Babylon had made governor over the land

3 Ishmael also slew all the Jews that were with him, even with Gedaliah, at Mizpah, and the Chaldeans that were found there, and the men of war

4 And it came to pass the second day after he had slain Gedaliah, and no man knew it,

5 That there came certain from Shechem, from Shiloh, and from Samaria, even fourscore men, having their beards shaven, and then clothes rent, and having cut themselves, with offerings and incense in their hand, to bring them to the house of the Lord

6 And Ishmael the son of Nethaniah went forth from Mizpah to meet them, weeping all along as he went and it came to pass, as he met them, he said unto them, Come to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam

7 And it was so, when they came into the midst of the city, that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah slew them, and cast them into the midst of the pit, he, and the men that were with him.

8 But ten men were found among them that said unto Ishmael, Slay us not for we have treasures in the field, of wheat, and of barley, and of oil, and of honey. So he forbore, and slew them not among their brethren

9 Now the pit wherein Ishmael had cast all the dead bodies of the men, whom he had slain because of Gedaliah, was it which Asa the king had made for fear of Baasha king of Israel and Ishmael the son of Nethaniah filled it with them that were slain

10 Then Ishmael carried away captive all the residue of the people that were in Mizpah, even the king's daughters, and all the people that remained in Mizpah, whom Nebuzai-adan the captain of the guard had

3 Ishmael also slew all the Jews that were with him]. That is, all those that joined in opposing Ishmael, and assisting Gedaliah in several of the commotions, as well as the greatest part of the people were still left alive, as appears from the sequel of the story, ch. 10, 11. W. Lowth

6 — having their beards shaven, &c.]. These were tokens of great mourning, by which these persons expressed their grief for the destruction of the city and temple. Such expressions of sorrow were forbidden to be used at funeral obsequies, see Levit xix 27, 28 but might be lawfully used upon other mournful occasions. W. Lowth. See the note on 2 Sam x 4

— to bring them to the house of the Lord]. Though the temple was destroyed, it may be presumed that the people continued to offer up sacrifices and offerings on the spot where it stood, as long as they continued in the land, for we find this began to be their practice soon after their return, before the temple was rebuilt see Izra iii 2, 3, &c. Dr Blayney

6 — weeping all along as he went]. Counterfeiting a mutual sorrow with them, and expressing it very passionately all the way Rp. Hall

8 — Slay us not for we have treasures in the field,]. Intimating that they would make him master of what they possessed, if he would spare their lives. W. Lowth

— of wheat, &c.]. In Barbary, when the grain is winnowed, they lodge it in subterraneous repositories two or three hundred of which are sometimes together, the smallest holding four hundred bushels. Dr Shaw. These are very common in other parts of the East as, near Aleppo. Dr Russell in Turkey. See I Chardin in the Holy Land, I. Bruyn, and Raunolf and in many places the people bury in them, not their corn only but their wine, See I Chardin and other effects that are not portable. Hist of the Principal States of Barbary. The treasure in the field which Jeremiah speaks of, were doubtless hid up in the same kind of repositories. Harmer

— of oil,]. The modern Greeks keep their oil in large earthen jars, sunk in the ground, in the areas before their houses. Dr Chandler. The ancient Jews appear to have had the same custom of burying their oil in the earth this being a time of danger, it is to be supposed that they chose the most unlikely places, where such concealment would be least suspected. Harmer

9 Now the pit — was it which Asa the king had made]. The word, rendered “pit,” signifies a basin, cistern, or reservoir, a large pit for receiving rain water, which Asa, who built and fortified Mizpah at the time he was at war with Baasha king of Israel, (1 Kings xv 22,) caused to be made in the midst of the city, in order that the people might not be in want of so necessary an article in case of a siege. Reservoirs of this kind were much in use in Palestine, as St Jerome tells us in his commentary upon Amos iv 7, 8. Each private family seems to have had one of these pits or reservoirs for its own use. “Drink ye every one the waters of his own cistern,” his pit or reservoir, says Rabshakeh to the people of Jerusalem, Is xxxvi 16. Dr Blayney

11 ¶ But when Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were with him, heard of all the evil that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah had done, 12 Then they took all the men, and went to fight with Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and found him by the great waters that are in Gibeon.

13 ¶ It came to pass, that when all the people which were with Ishmael saw Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were with him, then they were glad.

14 So all the people that Ishmael had carried away captive from Mizpah cast about and returned, and went unto Johanan the son of Kareah.

15 But Ishmael the son of Nethaniah escaped from Johanan with eight men, and went to the Ammonites.

16 Then took Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were with him, all the remnant of the people whom he had recovered from Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, from Mizpah, after that he had slain Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, even mighty men of war, and the women, and the children, and the eunuchs, whom he had brought again from Gibeon.

17 And they departed, and dwelt in the habitation of Chimham, which is by Beth-lehem, to go to enter into Egypt.

18 Because of the Chaldeans: for they were afraid of them, because Ishmael the son of Nethaniah had slain Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, whom the king of Babylon made governor in the land.

9 — in the brickkiln, which is at the entry of Pharaoh's house.] The bricks, in those hot and dry countries, are in general only dried in the sun not burnt. There must therefore be many places for making bricks, where there are no kilns, and such a place probably the word, here translated "brickkiln," signifies. The smoke of the brickkiln would not have agreed well with the Egyptian cleanliness, or the magnificence of a royal palace.

a bricked area. Parkhurst

He does here, no doubt with design to inculcate this necessary and important lesson, that in all that is performed here below, both the plan is His, and the power of carrying it into execution, whatever other instruments He may choose to employ as the subordinate ministers of His providence. The other verbs which follow, are to be referred to Nebuchadnezzar, as acting under the Divine commission and authority. Dr. Blayney

D. Halcyon

Chap. XIIIV ver 1. — [Migdol &c.] Migdol is mentioned, Exod. xiv. 2, as situate near the Red sea. But I do not take this to be the place intended. "Migdol" properly signifies a tower, and may in all probability have been given as a name to different cities in Egypt, where there was a distinguished object of that kind. The city of Magdulus is mentioned by Herodotus, Hell. i. 105, and others, and placed by Antoninus at the entrance of Egypt from Palestine, about twelve miles from Pelusium. This was too far distant from the Red sea to be in the route of the Israelites, but its distance from Judea favours the supposition of its being the "Migdol" here spoken of. For then, as Bochart observes, we shall find the four places mentioned exactly in the order of their respective distances from that country; first Migdol or Magdulus, secondly Taphnes, Daphne, thirdly, Noph or Memphis, and lastly, the district of Pathros, or Thebais. 3 Because of their wickedness, which they have committed to provoke me to anger, in that they went to burn incense, and to serve other gods, whom they knew not, neither they, ye, nor your fathers.

4 Howbeit I sent unto you all my servants the prophets, rising early and sending them, saying, Oh, do not this abominable thing that I hate.

5 But they hearkened not, nor inclined their ear to turn from their wickedness, to burn no incense unto other gods.

6 Wherefore my fury and mine anger was poured forth, and was kindled in the cities of Judah and in the streets of Jerusalem; and they are wasted and desolate, as at this day.

7 Therefore now thus saith the Lord, the God of hosts, the God of Israel, Wherefore commit ye this great evil against your souls, to cut off from you man and woman, child and suckling, † out of Judah, to leave you none to remain;

11 No that none of the remnant of Judah, &c.] It is evident from ver 29, that some Jews were to escape the general destruction in Egypt, and to return into their own country, although but a few, and the same thing is implied in the latter sentence of the verse. But the former part of the verse excludes out of the number of those who escaped every individual of those that were called properly "the remnant of Judah" those that had set their faces to enter Egypt, to sojourn there, in opposition to the express command of God, upon a presumption that they knew better than God how to consult their own preservation. The few then who were destined to escape, and to return back to the land of Judah, walked in my law, nor in my statutes, that I set before you and before your fathers.

11 ¶ Therefore thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel, Behold, I will set my face against you for evil, and to cut off all Judah.

12 And I will take the remnant of Judah, that have set their faces to go into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, and they shall all be consumed, and fall in the land of Egypt, they shall even be consumed by the sword and, by the famine they shall die, from the least even unto the greatest, by the sword and by the famine. and they shall be an execration, and an astonishment, and a curse, and a reproach.

13 For I will punish them that dwell in the land of Egypt, as I have punished Jerusalem, by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence.

14 So that none of the remnant of Judah, which are gone into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, shall escape or remain, that they should return into the land of Judah, to the which they have a desire to return to dwell there for none shall return but such as shall escape.

15 ¶ Then all the men which knew that their wives had burned incense unto other gods, and all the women that stood by, a great multitude, even all the people that dwelt in the land of Egypt, in Pathros, answered Jeremiah, saying,

16 As for the word that thou hast spoken unto us in the name of the Lord, we will not hearken unto thee.

17 But we will certainly do whatsoever thing goeth forth out of our own mouth, to burn incense unto the † queen of heaven, and to pour out drink offerings unto her, as we have done, we, and our fathers, our kings, and our princes, in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem for, then had we plenty of † victuals, and were well, and saw no evil.

21 The incense that ye burned in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem, ye, and your fathers, your kings, and your princes, and the people of the land, did not the Lord remember them, and came it not into his mind?

22 So that the Lord could no longer bear, because of the evil of your doings, and because of the abominations which ye have committed, therefore is your land a desolation, and an astonishment, and a curse, without an inhabitant, as at this day.

23 Because ye have burned incense, and because ye have sinned against the Lord, and have not obeyed the voice of the Lord, nor walked in his law, nor in his statutes, nor in his testimonies, therefore this evil is happened unto you, as at this day.

24 Moreover Jeremiah said unto all the people, and to all the women, Hear the word of the Lord, all Judah that are in the land of Egypt.

fulfilled with your hands, saying, We will surely perform our vows that we have vowed, to burn incense to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink offerings unto her: ye will surely accomplish your vows, and surely perform your vows.

26 Therefore hear ye the word of the Lord, all Judah that dwell in the land of Egypt, Behold, I have sworn by my great name, saith the Lord, that my name shall no more be named in the mouth of any man of Judah in all the land of Egypt, saying, The Lord God liveth.

27 Behold, I will watch over them for evil, and not for good: and all the men of Judah that are in the land of Egypt shall be consumed by the sword and by the famine, until there be an end of them.

1 Baruch being distressed, Jeremiah instructeth and comforteth him.

God declares, He will not receive any such polluted worship at their hands, (compare Ezek xx 39,) nor suffer His name any longer to be profaned by such hypocrites, but will consume them by a sudden and general destruction, or will deliver them up to repentance and utter apostasy. W Lenth

30 — I will give Pharaoh-hophra — into the hand of his enemies, &c. ¶ Pharaoh was a common name to all the kings of Egypt. As the predecessor of this king was called Pharaoh-nechoh, by way of distinction, 2 Kings xxiii 29, so this king was called Pharaoh-hophra, or Apries, as Herodotus calls him. W Lenth Ezekiel represents him as an arrogant impious prince, as the great dragon or crocodile, "that lieth in the midst of his rivers, which hath said, My river is mine own, and I have made it for myself," Ezek xxix. 8 and agreeably to this, Herodotus informs us that Apries proudly and wickedly boasted of "having established his kingdom so surely, that it was not in the power of any god to dispossess him of it." However, Jeremiah here foretold, that he should be taken and slain by his enemies, and accordingly he was taken and strangled by Amasis, who was by Nebuchadnezzar constituted king in his room. Bp Newton

Chap. XLV. This chapter, though placed at a considerable distance from chap. xxxvi, is simply an appendage to it. Baruch, as we learn, had been employed by Jeremiah to write for him.

— without our men? ¶ By the law of Moses, the men had an independent power of binding themselves by any religious vow or obligation: but the vows of the women were not binding, without the knowledge and consent of their fathers and husbands, but, if the father or husband knew of the vow, and did not signify his dissent at the time, his consent was presumed, and the vow stood firm and irrevocable, Numb xxx 1—16. This appeal therefore to the concurrence of their men must be considered as coming from the female part of the assembly only, who thereby appear to declare that, since they were thus authorised by those, who alone had a legal right to control them, they should not submit to any other restraint upon their inclination. Dr Blayney

3 Thou didst say, Woe is me now! for the Lord hath added grief to my sorrow; I fainted in my sighing, and I find no rest.

4 ¶ Thus shalt thou say unto him, The Lord saith thus, Behold, that which I have built will I break down, and that which I have planted I will pluck up, even this whole land.

5 And seekest thou great things for thyself? seek them not for, behold, I will bring evil upon all flesh, saith the Lord: but thy life will I give unto thee for a prey in all places whither thou goest.

[chap XLVI ver 1 The word of the Lord &c ] This verse is a general title to the collection of prophecies, contained in this and the five following chapters. The nations spoken of are the same as those of which an enumeration is made, chap xiv 19—26. These prophecies were not delivered all at the same time. To some the date is annexed in others it is left uncertain. Dr Blayney

The difference of style between the following prophecies and the preceding is remarkable. Abp Secker

2 Against Egypt, ] In this chapter are two distinct prophecies concerning Egypt. The first appears to have been delivered at the time that the Egyptian army lay along the banks of the Euphrates, waiting to oppose the entrance of Nebuchadnezzar into Syria, in the fourth year of the reign of Jehoiakim king of Judah. The two armies came to an engagement near the city of Carchemish, the same which Pharaoh-necho was going against when he was opposed by king Josiah, 2 Chron. xxxv, 20, (see the note there.) The event of the battle proved very unfortunate to the Egyptians, who were routed with a prodigious slaughter, as is here foretold by the Prophet in a very animated style, and with great poetick energy and liveliness of colouring. In the third and fourth verses, the mighty preparations of the Egyptians for war are described, which occasions the Prophet, who foresees the defeat, to express his astonishment at an event so contrary to what might have been expected, but he accounts for it by ascribing it to the disposition of the Almighty, who had spread terror all around, and had decreed that neither swiftness nor strength should avail the owners, so as to save them from the impending overthrow, ver 3, 6. In the verses that follow next, the king of Egypt is represented as beginning his march with all the ostentation and insolence of presumed success. He is compared to a mighty river, the Nile or the Euphrates, when it swells above its banks, and threatens to overwhelm the country with ruin and desolation, ver 7, 8. He is heard calling aloud to the nations of which his army is composed giving them the signal for action, and rousing them to deeds of desperate valour, ver 9. But all in vain, the time is come for God to avenge Himself of His ancient foes, they are doomed to slaughter, to fall a bloody sacrifice on the plains of the north, ver 10. The whole concludes with an apostrophe to the daughter of Egypt, whose wound is pronounced incurable, and her disgrace universally known, inasmuch as the number of her warriors have served only to augment the general disorder, and more effectually to destroy each other. Dr Blayney

5. — for fear was round about, saith the Lord ] These words ought rather to be connected with the following, which being spoken imperatively, can only be understood as coming from the mouth of God. "Fear seems to be put for danger. So that the words taken all together imply, that from the danger which surrounded them on all sides, it was the Divine decree, that neither the swift should escape by flight, nor the strong be able to extricate himself by any exertions of valour. Dr Blayney

9 — [the Ethiopians, — the Libyans, — the Lydians.] The original words are Cush, Phut, and Lud and the three nations were allies of Egypt as they are also represented, Ezek xxx 5 By the first are probably to be understood in this place chiefly the Arabians, who bordered on Egypt near the Red sea, and who are closely connected with the Egyptians, Is xx 3, 4, 5 As these lay to the east, so by Phut the Libyans were most probably intended, who lay west of Egypt Bochart supposes the Ludim (or Lydians) to be Ethiopians and that the Ethiopians were famous for the use of the bow, we may learn from Herodotus, who says that they had bows four cubits long Dr Blayney

10 [For this is the day of the Lord God of hosts.] "The day of the Lord" often signifies the day of His vengeance see Is xiii 6, Joel i 15, ii 1 Amos v 18, Zeph i 14 15 whence it signifies in the New Testament the day of judgment of which all other days of vengeance are the earnest and forerunners W Lenth

20 Egypt is like a very fair heifer, but destruction cometh, it cometh out of the north

For this early transaction we have the testimonies of Megasthenes and Berosus, two heathen historians, who lived about 300 years before Christ, one of whom affirms expressly, that Nebuchadnezzar conquered the greatest part of Africa, and the other affirms it in effect, by saying, that when Nebuchadnezzar heard of the death of his father, having settled his affairs in Egypt, and committed the captains, whom he took in Egypt, to the care of some of his friends to bring them after him, he hastened directly to Babylon Josephus, who may presume, had good authorities and was supported by earlier historians, when he asserted, that Nebuchadnezzar, having subdued Coele-Syria, waged war against the Ammonites and Moabites and having conquered them, he invaded Egypt, and slew the king who then reigned and appointed another Ep Nintome

16 — [and they said, Arise, &c.] The words of the allies of the Egyptians see ver 9, 21 W Lenth

18 — [Surely as Tabor is among the mountains, &c.] Some think the expression compares Nebuchadnezzar, a lofty and aspiring conqueror, to Tabor and Carmel, two of the highest mountains of Judea Others understand it thus, He will as surely come as that part of Judea which is joined to Tabor is enclosed with mountains, and as Carmel is encompassed by the sea see 1 Kings xvm 42, 43 W Lenth

19 [O thou daughter dwelling in Egypt.] Compare chap. xlviii 18 Countries and cities are usually compared to women, such representations being very common, particularly as medals W Lenth

20 [Egypt is like a very fair heifer.] In the foregoing verse the Prophet compared Egypt to a delicate young woman, here he resembles her to a beautiful and well favoured heifer compare chap. l 11 In which comparison, as Grotius not improbably conjectures, there is an allusion to their god Apis, who was a bull remarkable for his beauty, and the fine spots or marks he had about him W Lenth

6 O thou sword of the Lord, &c.] Personification, conducted with dignity and propriety, may be justly esteemed one of the greatest efforts of the creative powers of a warm and lively imagination Of this figure many illustrious examples may be produced from the Jewish writers, among whom every part and object of nature is animated and endowed with sense, with passion, and with language To say that the lightning obeyed the commands of God would of itself be sufficiently sublime but in the book of Job this idea is expressed with far greater energy and life, "Canst thou send lightnings, that they may go, and say unto thee Here we are" Job xxviii 34. How animated, how emphatical is this unexpected answer, "Here we are!" When Jehovah is represented as descending to punish the earth in His just anger it is added, "Before him went the pestilence," Hab. iii 5 When the Babylonian tyrant is destroyed, "the fir trees rejoice at his fall and the cedars of Lebanon, saying, Since thou art laid down the feller is come up against us," Is. xiv 8 And at the captivity of Jerusalem, the very ramparts and the walls lament, they languish together, Lam ii 8 So also it is impossible to read the oracles of the Prophet in the text without emotion at the period "O thou sword of the Lord how long will it be ere thou be quiet put up thyself into thy scabbard rest, and be still" Who in without amazement and delight behold joy, and anguish, and revenge thus returned to the trees of the forest, to walls, and warlike instruments Dr Jos Hartop Concerning the "sword of the Lord," figuratively denoting His vengeance, compare Deut xxxii 11, I xxxiv 5, and see also Ezek xvi 16

Chap XLVIII ver 1 Against Moab] The following prophecies concerning the Moabites, Ammonites, Idumites and other neighbouring nations, are supposed to have been fulfilled about the same time with that concerning the Philistines in the preceding chapter, namely, during the siege of Tyre

Many passages and expressions will be found in this chapter which Jeremiah hath borrowed from a prophecy of Isaiah, chap. xv, and xvi, concerning a like calamity which befell Moab, in all probability when Shalmaneser king of Assyria seized upon their cities and fortresses, and ravaged their country, on his march through it to invade the kingdom of Israel By comparing the parallel places much light may be mutually thrown upon them Dr Blayney

10 Cursed be he that doeth the work of the Lord deceitfully ] God executes His judgments upon sinners by the ministry of men, and those oftentimes as great sinners as those that suffer He had declared by Jeremiah His purpose of making the Chaldeans His instruments in punishing the Jews and the neighbouring countries see chap xxv 9 Their success answered the prediction and Nebuchadnezzar seems to have looked upon Jeremiah as a Prophet, and had a particular regard to his character see chap xxxix 11 Being thus assured that he had a commission from God he might confidently proceed in his conquests, and it would have been a fault to have shewn mercy to those whom he had good reason to believe that God had marked out for destruction Such an unreasonable act of forbearance is highly blamed in Saul, 1 Sam xv 11 and in Ahab 1 Kings xx 12 God's judgments are often denounced in the form of imprecation see Deut xxiii 15 Judges v 23 Gal i 8, 1 Cor xvi 22, 2 Tim iv 14 W Lenth

1 The judgment of the Ammonites 6 Their restoration 7 The judgment of Idom 23 of Damascus, 28 of Kedar 30 of Hazor, 31 and of Ham 39 The restoration of Ham

CONCERNING ¶ the Ammonites, thus saith the LORD, Hath Israel no sons? hath he no hen? why then doth ¶ their king inherit? Gird, and his people dwell in his cities?

2 Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will cause an alarm of war to be heard in<sup>b</sup> Rabbah of the Ammonites, and it shall be a desolate heap, and her daughters shall be burned with fire: then shall Israel be hen unto them that were his hens, saith the LORD

shall begin there shall reach to all the utmost parts of the dominion of Moab and shall light upon the heads of those insolent undertakers that were the cause of these wars and tumults Bp Hall

The midst of Sihon means the city of Sihon, or Heshbon see Numb xxi 25 The Prophet fully applies to the present case the words of an ancient poem, made on Sihon's conquests over Moab, and recited by Moses as above B Tenth

4 Yet will I bring again the captivity of Moab &c ¶ The Moabite were afterwards restored to their country as appears from 100

Chap XLIX ver 1 Concerning the Ammonites ¶ The downfall of the Ammonites foretold by other Prophets See the margin It is uncertain when this Prophecy was delivered for the probable time of its completion see the note on chap xlviii 1 Dr Blayney

¶ why then doth their king inherit Gird ¶ It is probable from hence that when the king of Assyria carried away captives the widows and their brethren, who dwelt beyond Jordan, 2 Kings xv 29, 1 Chron v 26, the Ammonites, either by the consent or connivance of the Assyrian conqueror took possession of their ancient country, to which they had no pretensions of right, so long as any of the ancient owners or their posterity were in being The word, rendered ¶ their king might be rendered, according to most of the ancient versions, more properly ¶ Melcom, (see the margin) as the proper name of the chief deity of the Ammonites, who is so called, 1 Kings xi 5 See below ver 3, and the note here As Jehovah is said to have given His people Israel the land, they possessed so the idolatrous nations considered their acquisitions as obtained by the favour of their respective idols See Judg xi 24 Dr Blayney

¶ her daughters shall be burned with fire ¶ That is, the miller cities, which are reckoned as so many daughters to their mother city Compare Ps xlviii 11 xcvi 8 B Tenth

¶ then shall Israel be hen &c ¶ This is understood to have been fulfilled when Judas Maccabeus defeated the Ammonites, and took their towns, 1 Mac v 6 &c Jephthah speaks in like manner, chap ii 9 Dr Blayney ¶ Howl, O Heshbon, for Ai is spoiled ¶ When Ai, (not the place mentioned Josh viii, but a city of the Ammonites,) is decry, ye daughters of Rabbah, gird you with sackcloth, lament, and run to and fro by the hedges, for ¶ their king shall go into captivity, and his ¶ priests and his princes together

¶ Wherefore gloriest thou in the valleys, ¶ thy flowing valley, O buck hind, dimester ¶ that trusted in her treasures, saying, Who shall come unto me?

5 Behold, I will bring a fear upon thee, saith the Lord God of hosts, from all those that be about thee, and ye shall be driven out every man right forth, and none shall gather up him that wandereth

6 And afterward I will bring again the captivity of the children of Ammon, saith the LORD

7 ¶ Concerning Idom, thus saith the Lord of hosts, ¶ Is wisdom no more in Teman? is counsel perished from the prudent? is then wisdom vanished?

8 Flee ye, ¶ turn back, dwell deep, O inhabitants of Dedan, for I will bring the calamity of Esau upon him, the time that I will visit him

stroyed then is it time for Heshbon the chief city of the Moabites, to lament her danger B Tenth

¶ run to and fro by the hedges ¶ Like persons distracted seeking a place of concealment Poole

¶ for their king shall go into captivity ¶ Rather "Melcom shall go &c" Compare chap xlviii 7 and see the note on chap xlviii 1 B Tenth Dr Blayney

7 Concerning Idom ¶ The destruction of Idom, or Idumea is likewise foretold by Ezekiel chap xxv 12—14 xxxv 1 &c, Joel iii 19, Amos i 11, 12 and by Obadiah Dr Blayney

¶ Is wisdom no more in Teman? ¶ The Eastern part of the world, by which is chiefly meant Arabia and the adjacent countries, was famous for the study of wisdom see 1 King iv 30 The Idomites appear to have put in their claim to this distinction B Tenth

8 ¶ dwell deep, ¶ When the Arabs have drawn upon themselves such a general resentment of the more fixed inhabitants of those countries, that they think themselves unable to stand up to them, they withdraw into the depths of the great wilderness where none can follow them with any hopes of success It is probable, that the ¶ dwelling deep which Jeremiah recommends to the Arab tribes here and at ver 30, means this plan ¶ to retire to the deserts, rather than going into caves and dens, as has been sometimes supposed For although people, who have settled kind of life, have pursued this method of security ¶ the Arabs who lead a wandering life in tents, look upon caves as traps rather than as places of defence Harmer

The language of modern travellers in describing the custom of the Arabs corresponds with the language of Scripture Nebuchadnezzar speaking of their conduct under certain circumstances of dissatisfaction says "all the tribe retires to the bottom of the desert whither the Turks dare not follow" and Savary says concerning the wandering, or Bedouin Arabs, "Always on their guard against tyranny, on the least discontent they pack up their tents hide their camels with them, ravage the flat country and plunge into the burning sands, whither none can pursue them and where they alone dare dwell Parkhurst

¶ Dedan, ¶ The Dedanites were Arabians, of the posterity of Dedan the grandson of Abraham, Gen xxv 1 They seem in later times to have been subdued by the Idumeans, and incorporated with them B Tenth

<sup>Obad ver</sup> 14 I have heard a rumour from the LORD, and an ambassador is sent unto the heathen, saying, Gather ye together, and come against her, and rise up to the battle

11 I leave thy fatherless children, &c.] It is doubted whether these words are a threatening or a promise. If a promise the sense is that though this great destruction should come upon the body of the Idonites yet God would take care of some of their fatherless children whose parents being carried into captivity they had none to provide for them. If they be taken as a threatening they imply ruin to them as well as to the rest. Pool

See Is. x. 19. — I. li. 11, Is. xlii. 2. 3. xlviii. 3. God's stirring up a people to invade such countries is described here, as if He had set an army to do it to the Chaldeans and their confederates to attack them in a war against the Idonites, according to the methods which earthly princes use to engage their subjects. — *W. We know little more of the history of the Idonites than is connected with that of the Jews and where is the ruin of the nation now? They were swallowed up and lost partly among the Nabathian Arabs and partly among the Jews and the very name was abolished and disused about the first century after Christ. Thus were they rewarded for insulting and oppressing their brethren the Jews and hereby were fulfilled the prophecy of Jeremiah in this chapter and of the other Prophets enumerated in the note on the seventh verse. Bp Hall

19 Behold he shall come up like a lion &c.] A description of Nebuchadnezzar, marching with his army against Jerusalem. Upon occasion of the inundations to which the Jordan is subject, (see the note on chap. xii. 5) we are told by Maimonides that several sorts of wild beasts which resort to harbour among the trees and bushes by the river side are forced out of their covert and infest the neighbouring plains. To this circumstance the Prophet here alludes. Dr Blayney

— I will suddenly in the hour run away from her] The most probable sense of these words is, that they indicate the Idonites running away from Nebuchadnezzar out of their own country which seems to be understood by "her. Pool "Hm" apply the son of man, of whom it was said in the preceding verse that he should not abide or dwell there. Dr Blayney

— and who is a chosen man, that I may appoint over her?] That is, I will single out a man remarkable for his prowess, namely Nebuchadnezzar and place him at the head of the army which shall execute My vengeance upon Edom. W. Louth

— who will appoint me the time? and who is that shepherd &c.] Who will challenge Me to meet him in the field as it were upon equal terms? Or what leader or general can enter the lists with Me? The word "shepherd" often signifies a prince or commander see chap. vi. 2, xvi. 24. But here it is used in opposition to the "lion" mentioned before, as if he had said "A shepherd may well encounter a lion as the best appointed warrior contend with God Almighty, or those whom He makes the instruments of His vengeance." W. Louth

redemption of Israel

595 THE word that the LORD spake against Babylon and against the land of the Chaldeans: by Jeremiah the prophet

2 Declare ye among the nations, and publish, and set up a standard, publish, and conceal not say, Babylon is taken, Bel is confounded, Merodach is broken in pieces, her idols are confounded, her images are broken in pieces

a nation against her, which shall make her land desolate, and none shall dwell therein:
they shall remove, they shall depart, both man and beast.

1 ¶ In those days, and in that time, saith the LORD, the children of Israel shall come, they and the children of Judah together, going and weeping: they shall go, and seek the LORD their God.

2 They shall ask the way to Zion with their faces thitherward, saying, Come, and let us join ourselves to the LORD in a perpetual covenant that shall not be forgotten.

6 My people hath been lost sheep: their shepherds have caused them to go astray, they have turned them away on the mountains: they have gone from mountain to hill, they have forgotten their resting-place.

7 All that found them have devoured them: and their adversaries said, We offend not, because they have sinned against the LORD, the habitation of justice, even the LORD, the hope of their fathers.

8 Remove out of the midst of Babylon, and go forth out of the land of the Chal-deans, and be as the goats before the flocks.

3 — the bow of Elam,] Isaiah thus speaks of the Elimites, chap xxi 6. And Elam had the quiver. Strabo says, that the mountainous parts of Elymais bred chiefly archers: and Elymais and other heathen writers speak of the Elymaean bowmen. Dr Blayney

4 — four winds from the four quarters of heaven.] That is, enemies from every quarter. Wars and commotions are metaphorically denoted by winds. see chap iv 11, 12. Is 1, Dan vi

5 And I will set my throne in Elam.] Nebuchadnezzar acting under the commission and authority of God, the establishment of his power was in effect the setting up of the throne of dominion of his principal. Dr Blayney, W Louth

6 — I will bring again the captivity of Elam.] See note on ver 31

Chap I. This chapter and the next contain a prophecy concerning the fall of Babylon, intermixed and contrasted with prediction concerning the redemption of Israel and Judah who were not like those oppressors, to be finally extirpated, but to survive them and upon their repentance and conversion to be pardoned and restored. The prophecy was delivered and sent to Babylon in the fourth year of Zedekiah's reign, as appears from chap li 9. Dr Blayney

Ver 2 — set up a standard.] To call people together, and impart to them these good tidings. The destruction of Babylon would be likewise a sort of signal to the Jews to assemble together in order to their return home: the time of their captivity being then to expire. W Louth

— Bel — Merodach.] See the second note on chap xlii 1, and concerning Bel, see the note from Dean Prideaux on Gen x 9. Merodach might be the name of one of their kings: that was afterwards deified by some of his subjects. W Louth

3 — out of the north there cometh up a nation &c.] The Medes who lay to the north of Babylon. see ver 9 11. W

1 In those days — the children of Israel &c.] In those days the children of Israel and the children of Judah shall through the favour of the Persian monarchs, go up together weeping for joy to return to their country and to the place of God's worship and service. 1 p Hall. In that time will denote during the time of Babylon's desolation. Which being designed to be perpetual, will comprehend as well the time of the general restoration of Israel and Judah in the latter days as that of their more immediate and partial return from Babylon. Dr Blayney

2 — a perpetual covenant.] We find the Jews after their return from Babylon, in Nehemiah's time entering into a covenant to walk in God's law and to obey Him. Neh x 28 x 1 &c Put by the perpetual or everlasting covenant, may probably be understood that of the Gospel. Dr Blayney

6 — their shepherds have caused them to go astray.] Their pastors and governors have led them to commit idolatry, of which the mountans were a principal scene. see chap ii 20, iii 6 28 Isa vi 9, & 10, xiii 6, &c And they have gone from mountain to hill, leaving the object or place of their idolatrous worship and forgetting the sanctuary of their God where alone they ought to have set up their rest. Dr Blayney those who are good and just. W Louth

9 ¶ For, lo, I will raise and cause to come up against Babylon an assembly of great nations from the north country and they shall set themselves in array against her, from thence she shall be taken then mowings shall be as of a mighty expert man, none shall return in vain

10 And Chaldea shall be a spoil all that spoil her shall be satisfied, saith the Lord

11 Because ye were glad, because ye rejoiced, O ye destroyers of mine heritage, because ye are grown fat as the heifer of grass, and bellow as bulls,

12 Your mother shall be sore confounded, she that bare you shall be ashamed behold, the hindermost of the nations shall be a wilderness, a dry land, and a desert

13 Because of the wrath of the Lord it shall not be inhabited, but it shall be wholly desolate every one that goeth by Babylon shall be astonished, and hiss at all her plagues

14 Put yourselves in array against Babylon round about all ye that bend the bow, shoot at her, spare no arrows for she hath sinned against the Lord

15 Shout against her round about she hath given her hand her foundations are fallen, her walls are thrown down for it is the vengeance of the Lord take vengeance upon her, as she hath done, do unto her

16 Cut off the sower from Babylon, and him that handleth the sickle in the time

12 — Your mother shall be sore confounded, &c. Your mother city Babylon shall be sore confounded, and Chaldea, which was the queen of all nation shall now be cast behind all the rest and become a very wilderness and a barren desert Bp Hall

15 — she hath given her hand In token of subjection and rejoice The phrase occurs in the same sense, 1 Chron xxix 24 1 and 26 It probably alludes to the act of the vanquished, who throwing down his arms and stretching forth his defenceless hands acknowledges himself in the power of the conqueror Dr Blayney

— her foundations are fallen The signification of the Hebrew word which occurs nowhere else, is uncertain It probably means the battlements, which is the rendering of the Greek version Dr Blayney

16 Cut off the sower from Babylon Babylon resembled a country called up, rather than a city the walls, according to Herodotus being sixty miles in circumference Within this huge circuit a great deal of ground was cultivated with corn so that enough grew within the walls to support the inhabitants during long sieges W Lenth

— they shall turn every one to his people They, that is, the allies of Babylon Compare chap xlv 15 Is xiii 14 W Lenth

17 — as the king of Assyria hath devoured him and last &c After Nineveh the metropolis of the Assyrian empire was destroyed Babylon became the queen of the East They were both equally enemies to the people of God, the one subverted the kingdom of Israel, and the other the kingdom of Judah the one carried away the ten tribes and the other the two remaining tribes into captivity No wonder therefore that there are several prophecies relating to each of these cities, and that the fate of Ba-of harvest for fear of the oppressing sword they shall turn every one to his people, and they shall flee every one to his own land •

17 ¶ Israel is a scattered sheep, the lions have driven him away first the king of Assyria hath devoured him, and last this Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon hath broken his bones

18 Therefore thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel, Behold, I will punish the king of Babylon and his land, as I have punished the king of Assyria

19 And I will bring Israel again to his habitation, and he shall feed on Carmel and Bashan, and his soul shall be satisfied upon mount Ephraim and Gilead

20 In those days, and in that time, saith the Lord, the iniquity of Israel shall be sought for, and there shall be none and the sins of Judah, and they shall not be found for I will pardon them whom I reserve

21 ¶ Go up against the land of Moab, even against it, and against the inhabitants of Pekod waste and utterly destroy after them, saith the Lord, and do according to all that I have commanded thee

22 A sound of battle is in the land, and of great destruction

23 How is the hammer of the whole earth cut asunder and broken how is Babylon become a desolation among the nations

24 I have laid a snare for thee, and thou

Babylon is foretold as was that of Nineveh Bp Newton See the note on Is x Nahum iii Zephaniah i, Leck xxxi

18 — as I have punished the king of Assyria This may most probably be understood of the destruction of Nineveh the chief seat of the Assyrian empire, by Nebuchadnezzar and Ariarathes, or Astyages as it is related in Tobit, chap xiv 15 At the taking of this great city, foretold by Jonah Nahum and Zephaniah Chynodanues the last king of the Assyrian race was killed and the seat and title of the empire removed to Babylon which was no longer called the Assyrian, but the Babylonian monarchy W Lenth

20 — the iniquity of Israel shall be sought for &c Then sins shall be done away through My grace and mercy Bp Hall

The promise contained in this verse seems evidently to respect the Gospel times, and “the remnant that shall be saved according to the election of grace” Compare chap xxxi 1 xxxiii 8, Is lvi 20, Rom xi 25, 26, 27 Dr Blayney

21 Go up against the land of Moab, — and — of Pekod Go up, ye Medes and Persians against the territories of Babylon even against the land of these proud rebels against the land of those who have “visited My people with the sword and merciless destruction” Bp Hall There is no certainty, and indeed little probability, that there were any places to which belonged the names in the text Dr Blayney See the margin

23 How is the hammer of the whole earth cut asunder and broken That oppressive empire, “which smote the people with a continual stroke, as it is described by Isaiah chap xiv 6” W Lenth

31 One post shall run to meet another, &c.] That is Counters shall run from different parts and so fall in with one another all carrying the same intelligence to the same person that the city was taken on the side that each came from. Dr Blayney

Babylon was taken by surprise by unexpectedly draining the river Euphrates, and entering through the channel into the city, as Herodotus relates

In the carrying on of this stratagem Cyrus took the opportunity of a public festival when the whole night was usually spent in revelings and all manner of disorders, see ver 39. In this time of riot the gates leading down to the river, that used to be shut every night, were left open and gave a passage to Cyrus and his army into the city, which he became master of, while they thought themselves in the utmost security both from the height and strength of their walls and depth of their river. Cyrus having as yet made little progress in the siege, though he had invested the city with his army two years before. This surprise caused so many messengers to run one after the other, to acquaint the king with this unexpected news. The vast compass of this city has been observed in the notes on chap l 16. W Louth

32 — that the passages are stopped.] Or rather, "surprised. These were most probably the entrances into the city from the river side, which were secured by gates that ought, as Herodotus observes, to have been fast barred, which, if it had been done would have effectually frustrated the attempt of the enemy, but being left open and unguarded on account of the public festival, the assailants were in possession of those entrances, and in the heart of the city, before the besieged were aware of it. Dr Blayney

— and the reeds they have burned with fire.] The soldiers seeing the Euphrates nearly dry, set fire to the reeds which covered its borders in order to facilitate the approach of the troops to the wall. The messengers reported to the king this circumstance, for the purpose of signifying to him that all the waters round about Babylon were dried up and that there was no longer any thing to shelter the city from the enemy. These reeds are said to have been very large and high, and, together with the mud on which they stood, to have formed as it were another wall round the city. (almel Pool)

34 Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon hath devoured me.] A pathetic description of the calamities brought upon the Jews by Nebuchadnezzar and his forces, who after they had devoured the wealth, and had waste the beauty of their country, then turned them out of it, and led them captives into a strange land. W Louth

36 — I will dry up her sea, and make her springs dry.] See the notes on Is xiv 23 and ver 31 of this chapter. By the means there described Babylon was taken, as here foretold. The city would have been otherwise impregnable, as it was supplied with provisions for many years, saith Herodotus, for more than twenty years, according to Xenophon, for, as Herodotus saith, if the Babylonians had but known what the Persians were doing, by shutting the gates which opened upon the river, and by standing upon the walls which were built as banks they might have taken and destroyed the Persians as in a net, or cage. Bp Newton

37 And Babylon shall become heaps, &c.] See the notes on Is xiii 20

38 They shall roar together like lions.] Either for grief and anguish of mind compare Zech xi 5, Is liv 11 or else the Prophet describes the revels and riotous noise that they made on the night of the public festival on which the city was taken. see the following verse. W Louth

42 The sea is come up upon Babylon.] By "the sea" any large collection of waters is denoted, and particularly the river Euphrates, ver 36 so that the fate of Babylon is here alluded to concerning which see ver 64, and Is xiv 23. Other by "the sea" understand metaphorically a numerous army and by the overreaching of waters the invasion and conquest of the country. Dr Blayney

25 — the principal scribe of the host ] In the margin the translation is, 'the scribe of the captain of the host.' It appears however that there were certain officers belonging to the Jewish armies called scribes, who were what we call mustermasters of the troops. See 1 Macc ii 42. more modern conquerors. Thus in the year 796 Chuleniague transplanted the Saxons from their own country, to oblige them to remain faithful to him, into different parts of his kingdom, either Ilanders, or the country of the Helvetians, &c. Their own country was repopled by the Achites, a Scythian nation. Hennault. So in much later times, 'It was the policy of Abbas the First, who ascended the throne of Persia in 1555 to transplant the inhabitants of conquered places from one country to another with a view not only of preventing any danger from their disaffection but likewise of depopulating the countries exposed to an enemy. Hanway's Revolutions of Persia, Parkhurst

29—30 This is the people &c ] It is not to be supposed that the whole number of the Jews whom Nebuchadnezzar carried into captivity, was no more than four thousand six hundred. He carried away more than twice that number at one time in the eighth year of his reign 2 Kings xxv 12—16. Before that time he had carried off a number of captives from Jerusalem in the first year of his reign among whom were Daniel and his companions Dan i 1—6. These are confessedly not taken notice of here. And as the taking and burning of Jerusalem is in this very chapter said to have been in the fourth and fifth months of the nineteenth year of Nebuchadnezzar, those who were carried into captivity at the date of those events, cannot possibly be the same with those that are said to be carried away either in the eighteenth or the twenty third year of that prince. Nor indeed is it credible, that the number carried away at the time the city was taken and the whole country reduced could be so few as eight hundred and thirty two supposing I may take in the date of the year which some are willing to do though without sufficient grounds. Here then we have three deportations, and those the most considerable ones, in the first the eighth, and the nineteenth years of Nebuchadnezzar, sufficiently distinguished from those in his seventh, eighteenth and twenty-third years. So that it seems most reasonable to conclude with Archbishop Usher, that by the latter three the historian meant to point out deportations of a lesser kind not elsewhere noticed in direct terms in Scripture. # THE LAMENTATIONS OF JEREMIAH.

INTRODUCTION.

THE Lamentations of Jeremiah are very properly distributed into five chapters, each of them containing a distinct elegy, consisting of twenty-two periods, according to the number of letters in the Hebrew alphabet

They were not composed till after the destruction of Jerusalem and its temple, and the depopulation of the country by the transmigration of all its inhabitants, which events are described not at all in the style of prophetic predictions, but alluded to and bewailed as what had been already fully accomplished and brought to pass. We cannot admire too much the full and graceful flow of pathetic eloquence, in which the author pours forth the effusions of a patriotick heart, and piously weeps over the ruins of his venerable country. Never was there a more rich and elegant variety of beautiful images ranged together within so small a compass, nor more happily chosen and applied. But it was before observed, that the Prophet's peculiar talent lay in working up and expressing the passions of grief and pity, and unhappily for him, as a man and a citizen, he met with a subject but too well calculated to give his genius its full display. Dr Blayney

Perhaps the most perfect and regular elegiack composition in the world, is the Lamentations of Jeremiah, as the Prophet mourns in this Book over the destruction of the temple and the holy city, and the overthrow of the whole state, he assembles all the affecting images which a subject so melancholy could suggest. The composition is uncommonly artificial. By turns the Prophet and the city Jerusalem are introduced, as pouring forth their sorrows, and, in the end, a chorus of the people send up the most earnest and plaintive supplications to God. The lines of the original, as may in part appear from our translation, are longer than is usual in other kinds of Hebrew poetry, and the melody is rendered thereby more flowing, and better adapted to the querimonious strain of elegy. Dr Blair

3 Judah is gone into captivity &c.] Many Jews, to avoid the miserable servitude of the Chaldeans, have betaken themselves to a voluntary transmigration to other nations, hoping there to find rest, but even there have these Babylonian persecutors overtaken them, so that they are surprised in those straits, which could no way be avoided. Bp Hall

7 — did mock at her sabbaths.] The heathen writers commonly ridicule the Jewish sabbaths, as a mark of the sloth and idleness of the people, without considering the excellent uses that day was designed for, namely, to give men leisure to attend upon the service of God, and learn the duties of religion. W. Lowth

8 — because they have seen her nakedness.] She is stripped of all her ornaments, and carried naked and bare into captivity. As she has defiled herself with idolatry, called spiritual adultery in Scripture, so God has ordered her to be exposed to shame, like a common harlot. See note on Jer. xiii. 22. W. Lowth

9 Her filthiness is in her skirts.] The Prophet proceeds in comparing the Jewish people to a woman, whose filthiness is exposed to the publick view. But, as he continues, notwithstanding such degrees of sin, they would not believe or consider what would be the end of their wickedness. Poole

13 From above hath he sent fire into my bones.] That is, a judgment as consuming as fire in the bones, so that the strength of the Jews was exhausted. Poole

15 — trodden — as in a winepress.] God's vengeance is often thus compared in the prophetic writings. See Is. lxiii. 3, Rev. xiv. 19, 20, xix. 15. W. Lowth

21 — thou wilt bring the day that thou hast called, &c.] The day, when thou wilt execute thy judgments upon the Babylonians, and other nations hostile to the Jews, will certainly come at thy appointed time. W. Lowth, Poole

The destruction of Jerusalem affords us a melancholy and alarming instance of Divine justice. The severity of this justice appears, not only in the city's being taken, and the people exposed to the fury of their enemies, and carried into captivity, but more especially in the burning of the temple, and the suppression of the Divine service. After such an example as this, no one can doubt but that God will severely revenge the contempt which men offer to His covenant, His worship, and the invitations of His mercy. Ostervald

NOW hath the Lord covered the daughter of Zion with a cloud in his anger, and cast down from heaven unto the earth the beauty of Israel, and remembered not his footstool in the day of his anger.

2 The Lord hath swallowed up all the habitations of Jacob, and hath not pitied he hath thrown down in his wrath the strong holds of the daughter of Judah, he hath brought them down to the ground he hath polluted the kingdom and the princes thereof

3 He hath cut off in his fierce anger all the horn of Israel he hath drawn back his right hand from before the enemy, and he burned against Jacob like a flaming fire, which devoureth round about

4 He hath bent his bow like an enemy he stood with his right hand as an adversary, and slew all that were pleasant to the eye in the tabernacle of the daughter of Zion he poured out his fury like fire

5 The Lord was as an enemy he hath swallowed up Israel, he hath swallowed up all her palaces he hath destroyed his strong holds, and hath increased in the daughter of Judah mourning and lamentation

6 And he hath violently taken away his tabernacle, as if it were of a garden he hath destroyed his places of the assembly the Lord hath caused the solemn feasts and sabbaths to be forgotten in Zion, and hath despised in the indignation of his anger the king and the priest

19 — in the top of every street ] The same phrase occur chap iv 1 Is li 20 Nahum iii 10, and perhaps signify in every street, (W Lanth), or at the extremity of the streets at either end. Dr Blayney

20 — Shall the women eat their fruit &c ] We find by comparing this verse with chap iv 10, that God brought upon them that terrible judgment, which He had denounced against them, if they continued to provoke Him, namely that they should † eat the flesh of their own sons and daughters, Levit xxvi 29, Deut xxviii 53, Jer xix 9. W Lanth

22 Thou hast called as in a solemn day my terrors round about ] Terrors came upon me on every side by thy appointment just as multitudes used to flock to Jerusalem at the times of the solemn feasts. The phrase † fear or terror on every side is elsewhere used by Jeremiah to express great misery and desolation, Jer vi 25 vii 3 xlii 5, xlii 29. W Lanth

It is to be observed, that though the Babylonians had reduced the Jews to their present deplorable condition, yet the Prophet attributes all these misfortunes to God and says that it was God Himself, who had cast off His people, and delivered His temple His altars and His city, into the hands of the idolaters The enemies of the Jews could not have hurt them, if God had not withdrawn His protection from the people that He had chosen God is the dispenser of afflictions to mankind but in His Church particularly nothing happens without His will It is also to be considered, that, when God thus exposes His Church to sufferings, He does not design to destroy it, but only to reform and purify it by His corrections And the same judgment should be passed on all the evils, which befall men in this life Osterwald

THE BOOK OF THE PROPHET EZEKIEL.

INTRODUCTION

EZEKIEL, who was the third of the great Prophets, was, like his contemporary Jeremiah, of the sacerdotal race. He was carried away captive to Babylon with Jehoiachin, king of Judah, in the year of the world 3406, before Christ 598, and was placed with many others of his countrymen upon the banks of the river Chebar in Mesopotamia, where he was favoured with the Divine revelations contained in this Book. He began to prophesy in the fifth year of his captivity, and is supposed to have prophesied about twenty-one years. The boldness, with which he censured the idolatry and wickedness of his countrymen, is said to have cost him his life; but his memory was greatly revered, not only by the Jews, but also by the Medes and Persians.

The Divine instructions were first revealed to him in a glorious vision, in which he beheld a representation, or, as he reverently expresses it, 'the appearance of the likeness of the glory of the Lord,' attended by His cherubim symbolically portrayed. "The word of the Lord came expressly" unto him, and he received his commission by a voice which was followed by a forcible influence of the Spirit, and by awful directions for his conduct. He appears to have executed his high trust with great fidelity. The author of Ecclesiasticus says of him, that "he directed them who went right, chap. xlix. 9" which may be considered as a merited encomium on the industry with which he endeavoured to guide and instruct his countrymen in righteousness.

Ezekiel represents himself as the author of this Book, in the beginning and other parts of it, and justly assumes the character and pretensions of a Prophet, as such he has been universally considered.

This Book may be considered under the five following divisions. The first three chapters contain the glorious appearance of God to the Prophet, and his solemn appointment to his office, with instructions and encouragements for the discharge of it. From the 4th to the 24th chapter inclusive, he describes, under a variety of visions and similitudes, the calamities impending over Judea, and the total destruction of the temple and city of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar, occasionally predicting another period of yet greater desolation, and more general dispersion. From the beginning of the 25th to the end of the 32d chapter, the Prophet turns his attention to those nations, who had unfeelingly triumphed over the Jews in their affliction, predicting that destruction of the Ammonites, Moabites, and Philistines, which was effected by Nebuchadnezzar, that mighty instrument of God's wrath against the wickedness of man, and particularly he foretells the ruin and desolation of Tyre and Sidon, the fall of Egypt, and the base degeneracy of its future people, in a manner so forcible, in terms so accurately and minutely descriptive of their several fates and present condition, that nothing can be more interesting than to trace the accomplishment of these prophecies in the accounts of historians and travellers. From the 32d to the 40th chapter, he inveighs against the accumulated sins of the Jews collectively, and the murmuring spirit of his captive brethren, exhorts them earnestly to repent of their hypocrisy and wickedness, upon the assurance that God will accept sincere repentance, and encourages them to resignation by promises of deliverance, and by intimations of spiritual redemption. In the two last chapters of this division, under the promised victories to be obtained over Gog and Magog, he predicts the final return of the Jews from their dispersion in the latter days, with an obscurity however that can be dispelled only by the event. The last nine chapters contain a remarkable vision of the structure of a new temple, and a new polity, applicable in the first instance to the return from the Babylonian captivity, but in its ultimate sense referring to the glory and prosperity of the universal Church of Christ.

St. Jerome observes, that the visions of Ezekiel are among the things in Scripture 'hard to be understood.' This obscurity arises, in part at least, from the nature and design of the prophecies themselves: they were delivered amidst the gloom of captivity, and though calculated to cheer the drooping spirits of the Jews, and to keep alive a watchful and submissive confidence in the mercy of God, yet they were intended to communicate only such a degree of encouragement, as was consistent with a state of punishment, and to excite an indistinct expectation of future blessings upon the condition of repentance and amendment. But, though mysterious in themselves, the predictions are related by the Prophet in a plain and historical manner. He seems to have been desirous of conveying the strong impressions, which he received, as accurately as they were capable of being described. It ought to be observed, that the last twelve chapters of this Book bear a very striking resemblance to the concluding chapters of the book of Revelation.

The style of this Prophet may be characterized as bold, vehement, and tragical, as often worked up to a kind of tremendous dignity. His book is highly parabolical, and abounds with figures and metaphorical expressions. He is employed rather in exciting our terror than in moving our pity. He displays a rough but majestic dignity, an unpolished, though noble simplicity, excelled perhaps in other respects by most of the Prophets, but none in the whole compass of writers has ever equalled him in the manner of writing, for which he seems singularly qualified by nature, in force, impetuosity, weight, and grandeur. He sometimes emphatically and indignantly repeats his sentiments, fully dilates his pictures, and describes the adulterous manners of his countrymen under the strongest and most exaggerated representations, that the licence of the Eastern style would admit. His genius led him to amplification, and the Divine Spirit did not overrule the natural bent of his mind. His diffuseness of manner in mild and affectionate exhortation, this vehement enlarging on the guilt and consequent sufferings of his countrymen, seems wisely adapted to their capacities and circumstances, and must have had a forcible tendency to awaken them from their lethargy. [Chap I ver 1 — in the thirtieth year] Usher, Prideaux, Touth and others reckoned on the thirty years here spoken of as well as the forty days or years mentioned in chap iv 6 from the covenant made by Josiah in the eighteenth year of his reign. See 2 Kings xxiii 2. According to which computation this thirtieth year corresponds with the year of the world 3410 and the fifth year of Jehoiachin's captivity or about 593 before Christ as in the margin. Other chronologists conceive it to be the thirtieth year of Ezekiel's age or the thirtieth of Nabopolassar's reign and others the thirtieth year from the jubilee. Ezekiel usually dates his prophecies from the era of his appointment to the prophetic office. Dr. Gray

3 And he said unto me, Son of man, I send thee to the children of Israel, to a rebellious nation that hath rebelled against me: they and their fathers have transgressed against me, even unto this very day

5 And they, whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear, (for they are a rebellious house,) yet shall know that there hath been a prophet among them

6 ¶ And thou, son of man, be not afraid of them, neither be afraid of their words, though they be briars and thorns be with thee: and thou dost dwell among scorpions, be not afraid of their words, nor be dismayed at their looks, though they be a rebellious house

This august vision was a representation of God's glory which tended to convince the Prophet of the Divine appearance. It signified that God is every where present, that His knowledge and power are infinite, that He governs all things by His providence, and that it was by Him that Jerusalem was destroyed, &c. He would change its condition in being the Jew's redemption from captivity by means known only to Himself. Observe!

[Chap II ver 1 — Son of man] This expression is generally understood as applied to the Prophet, to put him in mind of his frailty and mortality, and of the infinite distance between God and man. In which sense it is applied to both when spoken of Christ in the New Testament, implying His great humility in assuming our nature and appearing no other wise than as in ordinary man. W. Foulton's Commentary. See the note on Dan vii 17.

— stand up & thy feet ¶ It is taken from the last verse in the first chapter, that the Prophet had fallen prostrate in the Eastern manner at the revelation of the glory of God. Abp Newcome

— the spirit ¶ The Spirit of God. Bp Hall B. Foulton The power of the Holy Spirit. See chap in 1. 11. 14. 1 Kings viii 12. 2 Kings ii 10. Abp Newcome See Abp Secker's note on Nehem ix 20.

— whether they will hear &c ¶ Whether they will hear or will not hear (it is more probable for they are a stubborn people) yet shall they feel and find by the event answering thy prediction, that they have had a Prophet amongst them, on which account if then sins are not reformed, they shall be more deeply punished. Dr Hall

— thorns and thorns be with thee ¶ Though thou art likely to be stung by briars and thorns, and to be stung by scorpions, though thou expose thyself to injurious and malignant men. Abp Newcome The Prophets and messengers of God are often exhorted to take courage, and are promised a protection from all enemies in the discharge of their office, without fear.

ing my mind's perception, or standing in awe of my mind's greatness. See chap in 2, 9. Jer i 8, 18. Such a presence of mind is expressed by boldness in the New Testament, and is spoken of as a peculiar gift bestowed upon the first preachers of the Gospel Acts iv 13. 2) 1 ph v 19. And they had need of great presence of mind who were to reprove men hardened in sin, who are always impatient of reproof and become the enemies of the one who tell them such truths as they have no mind to hear. W. Foulton

Concerning scorpions, see the note on Deut viii 15. 6 — eat ¶ See chap in 1, 3, 10. God's words were to sink into him, that he might faithfully deliver them to others. Abp Newcome Take in, retain, digest. Abp Secker

The knowledge of Divine truths is often expressed by the metaphors of bodily food and nourishment, and therefore to eat the words of this prophecy, signifies to commit them to memory, to meditate upon them, and digest them. W. Foulton

The writing on both sides shewed that the prophecy would be long. Calaneo

Chap III ver 1 — that thou findest ¶ That which is given to you. Houbigant

2 — he caused me to eat that roll ¶ See the note on chap iv 1. This circumstance of Ezekiel's eating the roll plainly belongs to his first vision, during which he ate the roll, and therefore his eating was vision, not real. Dr Waterland

[7 — Is an adamant?] It is not ascertained what is properly meant by the word. [13 — Tel abib] This is generally supposed to be the name of the place which was the principal residence of the captive Israelites upon the bank of the Chebar. The meaning of the word in the original is a heap of corn, and St. Jerome so translates it. The place might have been called so from its fertility. The Prophet might have had to come to his people, not that he had ever departed actually into another place, but that by

<sup>Before</sup> <sup>CHRIST</sup> 13 I heard also the noise of the wings of the living creatures that I touched one another, and the noise of the wheels over against them, and a noise of a great rushing.

15 ¶ Then I came to them of the captivity at Tel abib, that dwelt by the river of Chebar, and I sat where they sat, and remained there astonished among them seven days.

Perhaps this is a distinct colony of captives from those that are mentioned chap. i. See verse 2 of this chapter. It is more probable these passages to suppose that the following words, "he that heareth—forgetteth" are the word of God to Ezekiel, not part of the message which the Prophet was to deliver — bp Newcome. And of the passage may be paraphrased — But when I renew My commission to thee, and bid thee speak, I will then give a freedom of speech unto thee, and thou shalt say, Thus saith the Lord, Whether they be with thee or hear thee not, it is all one to thee, do thou thy duty, and it sufficeth — bp Hall

[Chap IV ver 1 — take thee a tile] The tiles or bricks used for building in the East were sometimes very large, with one of the surface well polished, and capable of receiving the representation here described. In the cabinets of the curious are still preserved fragments of such tiles, brought from what is by some persons supposed to be the site of ancient Babylon.

It has been a question among the learned, whether the order which God here gave were intended as real commands, and figures, also, or only as figures of things to come, under the form of commands, signifying, not what the Prophet was to perform, but what God in His wise counsels had determined to bring about. Lowth, Wells, Bochart, and the generality of commentators combine with the authority of most of the Fathers in support of the literal interpretation. They plead in the first instance that all which is here commanded was practicable, and that the several circumstances mentioned carry no direct repugnancy nor absurdity with them, and they further infer that if the Prophet did not really perform what is here related, he could not have been a sign to the house of Israel. See chap iv 3. But several judicious interpreters, namely, St Jerome, Maimonides, and amongst ourselves, Smith, Bullingfleet, and Jenkins, conceive all that is here related to be a

CHAP IV

1 Under the type of a siege is shewn the time from the defection of Jeroboam to the captivity. 9 By the provision of the siege is shewn the hardness of the famine

THOU also, son of man, take thee a tile, and lay it before thee, and pourtray upon it the city, even Jerusalem history only of the vision itself, or a prophetic scheme, and as some difficulties will occur by the adoption in all cases of the literal interpretation, it may be proper shortly to notice the reasons they assign for this construction. It is observed then, that though we have in this Book an account of such and such commands given in vision to Ezekiel, yet it is not said that he ever performed them, but that like St Peter in a vision was commanded to do what he never did ("Arise, Peter, slay and eat") so Ezekiel was ordered in the same way to do several things in vision, which it was never intended that he should actually perform. And as St Peter reports his vision for the instruction of Christians, so Ezekiel reports his for the instruction of the house of Israel. These emblematical commands so reported become sign figures, and resemblances of what had come or should come upon the house of Israel or Judah, and in what manner, and why, and thus they were signs to the house of Israel, signifying things past, and prefiguring things to come, and they seem to have been delivered to him in a preceptive form, in order to imprint the things intended deeper in his mind, and make the representation of them to the Jews more lively and affecting. Dr Waterland. Other interpreters have adopted a middle course, they suppose that some of the directions were given to the Prophet only by way of metaphorical instruction, such for instance as eating the roll of prophecy, where we perceive that he speaks only of a transaction in a vision, but that others were imposed upon him as commands, and actually performed, namely the representation of the siege upon the removal of his household stuff, and the rebranding from the customary shew of grief at the death of his wife, &c. but whatever hypothesis we may adopt, whether we suppose them to be descriptive of real or imaginary event, or of both, they are very reconcilable with the Divine intention in the employment of the Prophet. On the supposition that they were real, we may reasonably conceive, a miraculous assistance to have been afforded when necessary, and if we consider them as imaginary, they might be represented equally as emblematical forewarnings revealed to the Prophet. Drs Gray and Waterland

2 — lay siege against it] Make a portraiture of a siege, and of such warlike preparations as are necessary. W Lenth

— a mount] The mount or terrace of earth was constructed for protecting the operations of the besiegers, for filling up the ditches, or for enabling the assaillants to reach the top of the wall. Cabnet. See the note on Jer xxvii 24.

— battering rams] Engines for forcing breaches in the walls. This is said to be the first historical notice of the pieces — <sup>an iron pan</sup> ] Or plate of iron. See the margin. Probably such as cakes were baked on. This may denote the strong ties of the besiegers, and the invincibility of the siege. Bp Hall. Or according to others, that there was an iron wall between the besieged and God whom the Prophet represented. Bp Newcome.

4 [Lie thou] In his own house, chap. iii. 24. This was to be his position in the exercise of his prophetic office. It may be supposed that the Prophet did not remain without intermission but only during a part of each day, when the people were likely to observe his conduct. Bp Newcome.

— <sup>lay the iniquity</sup> ] That is declare that you thus represent the iniquity, &c. Bp Newcome.

The words are commonly explained in this manner but as the circumstances under which Ezekiel was placed were all of them peculiar and as the other expression of 'laying on iniquity' used in connection with this verse (see ch. i. 10) conveys the imputation of guilt the Prophet may be better supposed in this vision to represent and prefigure the punishment due to the idolatry of Israel and Judah. Bp Newcome. The original word here of other sense.

— <sup>three hundred and ninety days</sup> ] The number of years since the fall of Jerusalem (see ver. 6) will take us back with sufficient accuracy from the year in which Jerusalem was sacked by Nebuchadnezzar to the first year of Jeroboam's reign, when idolatry began in Israel. The number of days was designed to signify the certainty of the siege of Jerusalem. That siege lasted from the beginning to the ending of it, seventeen months, as appears from 2 King xix. 1—4. But the king of Egypt came to relieve the city was the occasion of raising the siege for one time. Bp Newcome. We may suppose therefore upon the authority of the text as well as upon the circumstances of the story that the actual siege lasted three hundred and ninety days. Bp Newcome.

years corresponding to these days from Jeremiah's mission as a Prophet which was in the thirteenth year of Josiah from which time till the last year of Zedekiah when the city and temple were destroyed is just forty years. Bp Lenth.

7 — <sup>thine arm shall be uncovered</sup> ] Then habits were merely contrived so that the right arm was disengaged from the upper garments that they might be the more ready for action. Thus God is said to make bare His arm Is. li. 10. where He is represented as subduing His adversaries and bringing salvation to His people. Bp Lenth.

8 — <sup>I will lay bands upon thee</sup> ] God is said to do what was done in consequence of His commands. See chap. iii. 2. This seems to shew the firmness of the Chaldeans in carrying on the siege till they took the city. Bp Newcome.

9 — <sup>wheat and barley and beans and lentiles &c</sup> ] By this mixture it is intended to shew the distressed situation of the city of Jerusalem during the approaching siege. The use of mixed corn is generally a proof of scarcity but when beans and lentiles are added it is a mark of severe distress. Bp Lenth. Calmet.

10 — <sup>twenty shekels</sup> ] About nine ounces. Bp Cumberland.

11 — <sup>the sixth part of an hin</sup> ] Which is somewhat above a pint and a half of our measure. Bp Cumberland.

The Prophet was to take the pittance from day to day and in small portions from time to time while he subjected himself to public notice. The act denoted scarcity during the siege. Bp Newcome.

12 — <sup>as barley cakes</sup> ] Such as people make in haste when they have not time for preparing a solid food. Exod. xii. 30. This represents the hurry and disorder of a siege. Bp Lenth.

— <sup>dung</sup> ] To signify the scarcity of all kinds of fuel. Bp Lenth. I think ourselves that the dung of oxen and of camels was often used by the Jews as fuel for preparing their food but this command to use human dung for the same purpose as a terrible signification of the extremities to which the Jews were to be reduced and denote a necessity which cannot be contemplated without horror. Bp Hall.

13 — <sup>their defiled bread</sup> ] The pollution here mentioned was not only in itself disgusting but particularly odious to the Jews being positively condemned by the law, Lev. xv. 17. Deut. xxi. 12. Bp Hall. Calmet.

The Prophet tells the people in this chapter that, because they had rejected God's ordinances and profaned His sanctuary and especially because they had imitated and even exceeded the neighbouring nations in their idolatry, for this reason God would punish them in the sight of those nations and that as they had surpassed the other nations in wickedness, He would do to them such things as He had never done before and would execute His judgments upon them with wrath and fury Thus God punishes men for their rebellion adapting their punishment to their crimes and dealing with the greatest severity those, who, having had the greatest share of His favours, ungratefully abuse them Calmet

CHAP. VIII

1 Ezekiel in a vision of God at Jerusalem, 5 shewed the image of jealousy, 7 the chambers of imagery, 13 the mourners for Tammuz, 15 the worshippers towards the sun 18 God's wrath for their idolatry

AND it came to pass in the sixth year, in the sixth month, in the fifth day of the month, as I sat in mine house, and the elders of Judah sat before me, that the hand of the Lord God fell there upon me

24 — the worst of the heathen.] The Chaldeans, see chap xxx 11—24 They were at that time the oppressors of the world, and a terror to all the countries round about them W. Lowth

— the pomp of the strong.] Compare chap xxi 21, and xx 6 Lev xxvi 19 The excellency of their strength, that is, the temple Abp. Secker

26 — but the law shall perish from the priest, &c.] But, as a just punishment for their former neglect and security, God shall take away His gifts from their priests and prophets, so as they shall not be able to declare His will unto them for their direction and preservation Bp. Hall

[chap VIII ver 1 — in the sixth year, in the sixth month.] This date is one year and two months after the commencement of the vision, chap i 1 Abps. Newcome and Secker, Dean Prynne

— and the elders of Judah sat before me.] Men of note for their age or authority, perhaps such as had been members of the greater or lesser consistories before their captivity. W. Lowth

— sat before me.] This was the posture of those, who came to hear the instructions of any Prophet or teacher Compare ch xiv 1, xx 1, xxiii 31, 2 Kings iv 38 In aftertimes the teachers sat in a chair or eminent seat and the hearers on lower forms at the feet of their master, see Luke x 39, Acts xiii, 3 W. Lowth See the note on Deut xxiii 3

This chapter and the three following contain the particulars of a single vision Calmet

3 — the form of a hand.] Just as the form of a hand appeared writing upon the wall, Dan v 5 W. Lowth

— in the vision of God.] By mental representation, as if the Prophet had been personally present It seems most probable that every thing to chap xl 24 passed while the Prophet was in a trance, chap xi 25 Ezekiel relates his vision to the elders who sat before him. W. Lowth, Abp. Newcome

— the image of jealousy.] What this image was which rivalled Jehovah with the Jews, cannot be ascertained, see 2 Chron. xxxvi 14. St Jerome conjectures, that it was the image of Baal,

2 Then I beheld, and lo a likeness as the appearance of fire from the appearance of his loins even downward, fire and from his loins even upward, as the appearance of brightness, as the colour of amber.

3 And he put forth the form of an hand, and took me by a lock of mine head, and the spirit lifted me up between the earth and the heaven, and brought me in the visions of God to Jerusalem, to the door of the inner gate that looketh toward the north, where was the seat of the image of jealousy, which provoketh to jealousy

4 And, behold, the glory of the God of Israel was there, according to the vision that I saw in the plain.

5 ¶ Then said he unto me, Son of man, lift up thine eyes now the way toward the north. So I lifted up mine eyes the way, toward the north, and behold northward at the gate of the altar this image of jealousy in the entry

6 He said furthermore unto me, Son of man, seest thou what they do? even the great abominations that the house of Israel committeth here, that I should go far off from my sanctuary? but turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see greater abominations.

which having been erected for Mammon, and afterward destroyed by Josiah, had been probably restored by his successors. Others think that the expression was intended to express the false gods in general, by the worship of which the angel of God had been excited against His people, or it may be, that the false divinity was Adonis, and this conjecture is not without some appearance of reason, as the Prophet, upon his return to the northern gate, where he had first seen the image of jealousy, beheld women sitting and weeping for Tammuz, and Tammuz was Adonis, see ver 14 Abp. Newcome, Bp. Hall, Calmet

By that time the use of this wretched people were ripe for the punishment of their approaching captivity, they had polluted themselves with all kinds of Egyptian abominations, as appears from this famous vision of the Prophet, wherein their three capital idolatries are so clearly described The Prophet represents himself as brought in a vision to Jerusalem, and at the door of the inner gate that looked toward the north, he saw the seat of the image of jealousy, which provoketh to jealousy This is a prelude to the visions, which describe the various idolatries of the house of Israel, where, in the noblest stretch of an inspired imagination, idolatry is itself personified and made an idol, and the image sublimely called the image of jealousy, which the Prophet explains by observing, that "it was that which provoked God to jealousy." He then proceeds to the various scenery of the inspired vision. Bp. Warburton

— in the plain.] See chap iii 22, 23
— at the gate of the altar.] Probably so called from the time of Josiah, who placed the broken altar to the north of the altar, both according to the model of that which he had seen at Damascus. 2 Kings xvi. 14. Abp. Newcome

6 — go far off from my sanctuary?] That I should forsake it and deliver it up to the heathen to be polluted, chap vii 1 22 W. Lowth We may suppose a reference to chap ix 5, x 15, in both which texts the glory of the Lord is said to have changed its place. Nicholas

9 And he said unto me, Go in, and behold the wicked abominations that they do here

10 So I went in and saw, and behold every form of creeping things, and abominable beasts, and all the idols of the house of Israel, pourtrayed upon the wall round about

11 And there stood before them seventy men of the ancients of the house of Israel, and in the midst of them stood Jaazaniah the son of Shaphan, with every man his censer in his hand, and a thick cloud of incense went up

8 — dig now in the wall,] We have here a very lively and circumstantial description of the celebrated mysteries of Isis and Osiris. For 1st, the rites were represented as performed in a secret subterraneous place, ver. 7, 8. This secret place was, as the Prophet tells us in the temple. And such kind of places for this use the Egyptians had in their temples, as we learn from a similitude of Plutarch. I like the disposition, says he, "and the ordinance of their temples which in one place enlarge and extend themselves in wings and fair and open places, in another, sink into dark and secret subterraneous vestries, like the adyta of the Indians. 2dly, These rites were celebrated by the Sanhedrim, or the elders of Israel, ver. 11. Now it appears from the best accounts we have of the mysteries, that none but princes, rulers, and the wisest of the people were admitted to their most secret celebrations. 3dly, The paintings and imagery on the walls of this subterraneous apartment answer exactly to the descriptions, which the ancients have given us, of the mystick cells of the Egyptians. Bp Warburton

10 — of creeping things, and abominable beasts,] This practice so strongly reprobated here was probably borrowed from the Egyptians. Diodorus Siculus says, "Round the rooms in Thebes, where the body of king Osymundias seemed to be buried, a multitude of chambers was built, which had elegant paintings of all the beasts sacred in Egypt." Abps Foster and Newcome See the note from Bryant on Dent. iv. 15. Pictures were as much prohibited by the law as carved images. Num. xxxiii. 52, Lev. xxvi. 1. W Louth

11 — Jan aniah] Probably a member of the people. See the close of chap. vi. 1. Abp. Newcome Jaazaniah was well known under the reign of king Josiah. See 2 Kings xxi. 2, 3. The seventy ancients, or elders with him, were probably the members of the Sanhedrim, or great council of the Jews. Bp Hall

12 — in the dark] No darkness, nor secrecy, can hide the knowledge of men's sins from Him, who knoweth all things. No concealment can shelter sinners from His judgment. Calverley

14 — weeping for Tammuz] The ancient expositors consider Tammuz as Adonis.

This was the Phœnician superstition. It was derived from the Egyptians, and afterwards the Phœnicians improved it. Bp Warburton, W Louth

15 ¶ Then said he unto me, Hast thou seen this, O son of man? turn thee yet again; and thou shalt see greater abominations than these

16 And he brought me into the inner court of the Lord's house, and, behold, at the door of the temple of the Lord, between the porch and the altar, were about five and twenty men, with their backs toward the temple of the Lord, and then faces toward the east, and they worshipped the sun toward the east.

17 ¶ Then he said unto me, Hast thou seen this, O son of man? ¶ Is it a light thing to the house of Judah that they com- || Or Is there any thing lighter than to commit?

The ancient Greeks used to place their dead near the doors of their houses, and to attend them there with mourning. Chmides observed the continuance of this custom when travelling in Greece. The weeping for Tammuz is described as performed near a door of the temple, perhaps with a view to such a custom. Harm.

15 — turn thee yet again, &c.] This is a description of the Persian superstition. It is to be observed, that, when the Prophet is bid to turn from the Egyptian to the Phœnician rites, he is then said to look towards the north, ver. 14, the situation of Phœnicia with respect to Jerusalem, consequently, he before stood southward, the situation of Egypt with respect to the same place. And when from thence he is bid to turn into the inner court of the Lord's house, to see the Persian rites, this was east, the situation of Persia with so much exactness of representation is the whole vision conducted. Again, as the mysterious rites of Egypt are said, agreeably to their usage, to be held in secret by their "elders and rulers only so the Phœnician rites for the same reason, are shown as they were celebrated by the people in open day. And the Persian worship of the same, which was performed by the Magi, is here said to be observed by the priests alone "five and twenty men with their faces toward the east. Bp Warburton

16 — between the porch and the altar,] The place where the Jewish priests invoked the mercy of Jehovah for the people. See Joel ii. 17.

— five and twenty men,] Possibly the twelve priests and twelve Levites of the weekly service, with the high priest Calmet — their backs toward the temple,] They turned their backs to God Almighty, and their faces to the sun. Perhaps Hieronimus may allude to some such idolatrous practice in that confession of his, 2 Chron. xxx. 6, "Our fathers have done evil in the eyes of the Lord, and have forsaken Him, and turned away their faces from the habitation of the Lord, and turned their backs." "They turned their back unto Him, and not their face," as Jerem. li. expresses their contempt towards Him, chap. ii. 27, xxxiii. 8. For this reason the people were commanded to come in at the north or south gate of the outward court of the temple when they came to worship, that they might not at their return turn their backs upon God. See chap. xli. 9. The Jews always turned their faces towards the temple when they worshipped. W. Louth Dr. Spranger

5 And the sound of the cherubims' wings was heard even to the outer court, as the voice of the Almighty God when he speaketh

6 And it came to pass, that when he had commanded the man clothed with linen, saying, Take fire from between the wheels, from between the cherubims, then he went in, and stood beside the wheels <sup>Before</sup> <sup>CHRIST</sup> <sup>591</sup>

8 ¶ And there appeared in the cherubims the form of a man's hand under their wings

9 And when I looked, behold the four wheels by the cherubims, one wheel by one cherub, and another wheel by another cherub and the appearance of the wheels was as the colour of a <sup>Chap 1</sup> <sup>10</sup> beryl stone

10 And as for their appearances, they four had one likeness, as if a wheel had been in the midst of a wheel

11 When they went, they went upon their four sides, they turned not as they went, but to the place whither the head looked they followed it, they turned not as they went

12 And their whole <sup>† Heb</sup> <sup>fresh</sup> † body, and their backs, and their hands, and their wings, and the wheels, were full of eyes round about, even the wheels that they four had well to be observed, that when Ezekiel inquired of God whether He would destroy His people, God answered, that the sins of the Jews were too great not to be avenged, that they had carried their impiety so far as to say, "The Lord hath forsaken the land, the Lord is not, and therefore that He would no longer have any pity on them. When men have arrived at a certain degree of wickedness, when they have lost all fear of God, and every thing is in the utmost disorder, God is, as it were, obliged to execute justice, and His mercy gives way to His vengeance. Osterwald

[Chap X ver 1 — in the firmament.] See note on chap 1 26

2 — even under the cherub.] The wheels were below or beside the cherubim, and the firmament was above them, and the fire here mentioned ran up and down among the wheels and the cherubim. See chap 1 13 Abp Newcome, W Louth

— over the city.] A beautiful prophecy that Jerusalem should be burnt by the Babylonians. Coals of fire frequently denote the Divine vengeance. Abp Newcome, Dr E Porock

3 Now the cherubims stood.] The cherubims, which were part of the vision shewed to Ezekiel — and the cloud filled the inner court.] This bright cloud seems to be an attendant upon that glory, which was represented in this vision to Ezekiel, chap viii. 2, x 1 W Louth

4 — the glory of the Lord went up from the cherub.] See chap. ix 9 to shew them that He meant to remove away from Israel and yet not all at once, but by degrees, and therefore He removed first only to the threshold of the temple. Bp Hall

Michaelis observes, that the original word signifies a storm or a whirlwind. Abp Newcome We learn from this passage that God takes perfect notice of the events of things, and both gives and judges their motion. Bp Hall

14 — the first face was the face of a cherub.] That is of an ox, as appears by comparing this verse with chap 1 10 The word "cherub" does originally signify an ox. The several faces are here represented in a different order from the description given of them, chap 1 10, of which difference this reason may be assigned. In the first chapter, the Prophet saw his vision coming out of the north, and advancing southward, ver 4, where the face of a man being placed on the south side was first in view. The lion, being

We read throughout the Prophets, that the time of the Messiah is all along represented as a time of universal love, and peace, and godliness, wherein as the natures of people shall be changed, and all nature and ill nature rooted out, (Isa. xxi.) so God would give them a heart to do His will, and "He would be their God, and they should be His people," ver 20. Dr T Burnet

[Chap. XII, ver. 2 — thou dwellest in the midst of a rebellious house] He was among them of the captivity in Chaldea, ver. 10 chap. vi 24 xiv 22 and these seem to have disbelieved the prophecies that Jerusalem should be smitten and burnt, and its inhabitants scattered abroad, chap. iv 2, ix 5, x 2, xi 9 Abp Newcome

St Jerome remarks upon this place, that the words of this chapter were addressed to the Jews of the captivity, who were then regretting that they had listened to the prophecies of Jeremiah since Jerusalem was still standing, of which he had predicted the fall; and the object of it seems to have been to shew that they who were left behind to endure the miseries of a siege, and the insults of a conqueror, would be in a worse condition than those who were already captives. Calnet

— by day.] Do this openly, and at noonday, that they may all see and take notice of it. W Lenth See the note on chap. ix 1 There appears no reason for thinking that the Prophet might not really perform all that is mentioned in this chapter, without forfeiting either his discretion or gravity. The manner and circumstances of the whole narrative plead strongly for the strict and literal interpretation. It is no less than seven times reported, that the Prophet was to do, or did, thus and thus “in the sight of the people” and he did it “in the evening in the twilight,” ver. 7 and “in the morning after,” ver. 9, God came to ask him whether the house of Israel had taken notice of such his uncommon behaviour, and had inquired what it meant. These and other circumstances appear to be very urgent proofs of real fact, and that it is more than a narration of a vision, or a detail of a parable. Dr Waterland

4 — thou shalt go forth at even in their sight, &c.] This is as they do in the caravans they carry out their baggage in the day-time, and the caravan loads in the evening for in the morning it is too hot to set out in a journey for that day, and they cannot well see in the night. Sir J Chardin

6 — thou shalt cover thy face,] The actions of the Prophet were intended for prophetic instruction, and sometimes conveyed it with more force and efficacy than words. Covering the face was a token of shame and grief. Persons condemned to death had their faces covered. David had his head covered when he fled from Absalom, 2 Sam. xv 30. Calnet

— for I have set thee for a sign.] Language by signs is common in the East so that when the Prophets in the Old Testament were divinely directed to set a portion of the information, which they were to communicate to the people, they did little or nothing more than what was done every day in the countries where they resided. When Isaiah says he and his children were for signs, when Jeremiah found his girdle marred as a sign when Ezekiel was a sign to the people in not mourning for the death, chap. xxiv and in his removing into captivity, and digging through the wall, these and similar actions were not only well understood but they were one customary manner of conveying information and they had the advantage of being in daily use among the people to whom they were addressed. Fragments to Calnet

9 — hath not the house of Israel — said.] The meaning is, I know that they have said. As, “Are they not written in the book of the Acts of Solomon, &c.” Houbigant

— What doest thou?] The actions of the Prophet would naturally produce an anxiety in the minds of the Jews who witnessed them, to know their object and intention. Or it is probable that the question was asked in pure derision, and therefore they are termed a rebellious house. W Lenth

10 — This burden concerneth the prince &c.] Or, “This prophecy is against the prince, against Jerusalem, and against all, &c.” Houbigant By “the prince,” king Zedekiah is meant. Abp Newcome, W Lenth

In the passages referred to, the king and his party are said to have escaped through the gate between two walls, by the way of the garden. They might have fled through a breach made by themselves in the wall, or, as Michael suggests, the gate through which they fled might have been walled up during the siege, and broken down in their flight. Abp Newcome

The phrase is taken from those that put a stop to the enemy when he is just entering in at a breach. Another expression taken from those that are besieged, who, if a breach be made in a wall presently make it up or build up a new one within it, to prevent the enemy from entering, and becoming master of the city. The original word here rendered "hedge," signifies any other sort of fortification, Ps lxxii 3. W Lenth

Instead of providing such a fence and bulwark as might secure the people against the judgments that threatened them (see ver 5) they have made a slight wall without any mortar or cement to bind and strengthen it, that is, they have applied slight and palliating remedies to publick calamities, which will never give true peace to men's consciences, nor stand them in any stead when God visits for their iniquities just as it in unskilful builder should undertake to set up a wall, and his fellow workmen should daub it with untempered mortar. When I was at Tozer in December, 1727 we had a small drizzling shower that continued for the space of two hours, and so little provision was made against accidents of this kind, that several of the houses, which are built only as usual with palm branches mud and tiles baked in the sun, corresponding perhaps to and explanatory of, the untempered mortar in Ezekiel fell down by imbibing the moisture of the shower. — to slay the souls.] By pronouncing the sentence of death on the righteous, and by assuring the wicked that they should live, see ver 22. Abp Newcome

‘to slay and “to save alive, signify here, to promise men life, or to threaten them with death. W Lenth

22 — with lies ye have made the heart of the righteous sad, &c.] In terrifying them with those evils which shall not come and encouraged wicked men, by pretending to secure them against those evils which shall surely fall upon them. Bp Hall

The faithful minister makes the word of God his only rule both of faith and of doctrine: he converts it into nourishment for his own soul's health and salvation, and then he administers ‘the sincere milk of the word’ to his hearers. Whereas the seducer and false teachers either withhold the Scriptures from the people and substitute inventions of their own, which, like ‘walls built and diked with untempered mortar, can yield no security or defence. Or they pretend a particular light within, which is no other than a vain vision, a ‘lying divination. Or else they set up unfounded interpretations of Scripture and say, The Lord saith albeit the Lord hath not spoken. Scripture, when applied to deceive and to establish error, is no Scripture: it changes its nature, ceases to be Divine truth and becomes a lie. God's word in the mouth of a false teacher is not the word of God. Hogan

They are not only inclined to idolatry in their hearts, but have actually set up idols and worshipped them. However, the Prophet shews plainly, that their idolatry consisted not in entirely deserting but in polluting with foreign worship, the religion of Moses. Bp Hall

9 — I the Lord have decreed that prophet ] This is permitted him to be deceived and to deceive the people, as a just judgment upon them for their infidelity with respect to His true Prophets. Thus He threatens at the 5th verse, 'I will take the house of Israel &c because they have chosen to themselves false gods, I will suffer them to be deceived with false prophets and that this is the meaning appears by the threatening added, 'and I will stretch out My hand upon him, and will destroy him from the midst of My people. Now God will not punish that whereof He is the author Abp Tillotson

10 And they shall bear the punishment of their iniquity ] When God has sufficiently made known His will to men, and they not withstanding err from the right way, obstinately following their own wills and imaginations, He in His just judgment forsakes them, and then, meeting with seducers they give ear to lies rather than to the truth. Thus it happened to the Jews, who in consequence perished with their seducers, as Ezekiel here threatens them. It is a dangerous thing to hearken to any other voice than that of God Ostwald

11 — when the land sinneth against me by trespassing grievously ] The design of this and the following verses is to shew, that when the inhabitants of a land have filled up the measure of their iniquities and God awaith to execute judgment upon them, the few righteous that are left among them shall not be able by their prayers and intercessions to deliver the nation from the judgment

As there is a time of mercy, when the righteousness of one or a few may relieve a whole nation from destruction see Gen xviii 12 Ps cvi 30 Jer v 1 so when the appointed time of their fatal stroke is come, though Noah, Daniel, and Job should be in the midst of it, they could prevail no further than the delivery of their own souls Abp Sanderson

— and will break the staff of the bread thereof ] See chap iv 16

14 Though these three men, Noah, Daniel, and Job, were in it ] Daniel was then in captivity, he was taken in the third year of Jehoiakim, Dan 1 1, after this, Jehoiakim reigned eight years, 2 Kings xxiii 36, and this prophecy, as appears from chap viii 1, was uttered in the sixth year of Jehoiachin's captivity, who succeeded Jehoiakim, and reigned only three months, 2 Kings xxiv 6 8, therefore at this time Daniel had been fourteen years in captivity, and was little more than thirty years of age. It is observable how early the time of his piety had spread over Chaldaea Abp Newcome, W Louth

All these persons were eminent for their piety. Noah and his family were saved from the universal deluge and obtained a promise from the Most High, that He would never again destroy the world by an inundation of water. Daniel interceded with the Almighty for the whole nation of the Jews, and obtained a promise of their restoration, Dan ix. And Job was appointed by God Himself to make intercession for his three friends. But when the Almighty's irrevocable decree is gone out against a nation, even the prayers of such favourites of Heaven would be ineffectual to procure their deliverance. The Prophet, in this allusion to Abraham's intercession for Sodom, declares from God, that when His judgments come out against the land of Judea, the righteous found in it should only save themselves, which plainly shows a Providence extending to particulars Abp Warburton

The intercession of good men prevailth much, but is not always effectual for others nevertheless God takes care of His faithful servants, and exempts them from those punishments and miseries, to which the wicked and sinners are exposed. Ostervald

Chap XV ver 2 Son of man, What is the vine tree &c ] The vine is a noble plant in respect to the fruit it bears, but in regard of its wood, no shub is so mean, it is so far from affording any useful timber that not even a pin can be made from it, on which any vessel may be hung. Lo, such is Israel! if it bore good fruit, it would be dear and precious to Me, but in itself it is but mean and base in comparison of other nations, and unfit for any service it is only meet to be cast into the fire for fuel Bp Hall

The chief excellence of a parable is, that it contains an image which is known and proper to the subject, and the use of which was plain, and determined by custom the necessary consequence of which is perspicuity, wherein the chief beauty of an allegory consists. The Prophets frequently make use of these kinds of images by way of comparison or illustration and such is this of the useless vine, by which these ungrateful people are more than once described Bp Louth

Chap XVI ver 2 — cause Jerusalem to know her abominations.] Declue to them that are with thee, and to them that are at Jerusalem to these declue by letter, to those by word of mouth what state was theirs in their infancy what I did for them, namely, for the whole nation of the Jews Pool

— Thy birth and thy nativity is of the land of Canaan &c.] Jerusalem is here represented under the image of an exposed infant, whom God preserved from destruction, brought up espoused, and exalted to sovereignty but she proved faithless and abandoned and therefore God threatens her with severe vengeance, but graciously promises that hereafter He will fulfil His early covenant with her The allegory is easily understood, and as Mr Iowth observes, has much force, liveliness, and vehemence of eloquent amplification The images are adapted to a people immersed in sensuality Abp Newcome, Bp Louth

— of the land of Canaan.] As your fathers sojourned in the land of Canaan before they came to have any right or property in it, so you, their posterity, have all along resembled the manners of Canaan, more than those of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, your ancestors W Louth

— thy father was an Amorite and thy mother an Hittite.] Those are said to be our parents, in the Scripture dialect, whose manners we resemble see ver 45 of this chapter, John viii 44. There is an expression of the same import in the History of Susanna, ver 56, that seems to be copied from this text, "O thou seed of Chanaan and not of Juda, beauty hath deceived thee and lust hath perverted thine heart" W Louth It is the language of indignation and reproof Abp Newcome See the note on Job xxx 29

46 — but thine elder sister is Samaria, &c ] Or the ten tribes of Israel. She and those her daughter cities, that lie to the north, and thy younger sister that dwelleth to the south, is Sodom, and the cities appertaining unto her. Bp Hall

By Sodom the Ammonites and Moabites seem here to be meant. These people whose father Lot went out of Sodom and whose country bordered upon the Dead sea on the lake of Sodom, are called the younger sister of Jerusalem partly because they were less in number than the Samaritans and partly because they were more distant from Jerusalem than Samaria. Grotius Calmet Sodom was on the right and Samaria was on the left: that is, the first was to the south, the second to the north. The Jews speak of the situation of places upon the supposition that they stand with their faces to the east and then backs to the west: the right hand will then be to the south and the left to the north. The same way of speaking is still used in the ancient British or Welsh language. Bp Louth

47 Yet hast thou not walked after their way &c ] Thou hast not contented thyself to do after their example but, &c. Bp Hall

48 — this was the iniquity of — Sodom, &c ] We may learn from this passage of the Prophet, how odious in the sight of God is intemperance, vanity, and want of mercy to the poor. These reproaches may regard the ancient Sodomites less perhaps than the Moabites and the Ammonites of that day who were extremely wicked and corrupted, as appears from Is xvi 6, Jer xlviii 29, 30 and xlix 1. Calmet

— abundance of idleness ] In places, where there is least work, the worst sins do most prevail and idleness therefore by the Prophet reckoned one of the three great sins of Sodom. A part of the rest. 5. When I shall bring again their captivity, &c.] The meaning, When the fulness of the Gentiles shall come into the Church (some of whom may be compared to Sodom for wickedness) then will I do as I remember you who are My ancient people. The conversion of the Gentile is expressed in Jeremiah by the returning of the captivity of Moab, Ammon, and Edom, chap. xliii 47, xli 6, 50, and by the Egyptians, Ethiopians, and Syrians acknowledging themselves His servants in the prophecy of Isaiah chap. xlv 14, xlviii 18. And by the same rule, we are to understand the returning of the captivity of Sodom here of the Gentiles coming into the Church. W Lenth, 4hp Newcome see below verses 60—61 which seem to explain the sense of this passage.

He took also of the seed of the land,

6 And it grew, and became a spreading vine of low stature, whose branches turned brought forth branches, and shot forth

7 There was also another great eagle behold, this vine did bend her roots toward him, and shot forth her branches toward him, that he might water it by the furrows

— a land of traffick ] Babylon is called a land of traffick, the East for commerce. Its situation possessed infinite advantage with respect to the two rivers the Tigris and Euphrates, and the Persian Gulf, opened a way into the richest and most distant countries. The vast extent of the dominions of Nebuchadnezzar afforded the greatest facilities to the journeys of the merchant, and to the export of merchandise. Finally the affluence of the people and the riches of Babylon attracted thither from all parts of the world a multitude of traders. Calmet.

Strabo notices that the merchants who travelled by land to Babylon went through the country of the Arabians called Scenites and vessel of great burden came up to the walls of it from the Persian gulph by the Euphrates as appears from Pliny. W. Lenth.

10 Yea, behold, being planted, shall it prosper? shall it not utterly wither, when the east wind toucheth it? it shall wither in the furrows where it grew.

15 But he rebelled against him in sending his ambassadors into Egypt, that they might give him horses and much people. Shall he prosper? shall he escape that doeth such things? or shall he break the covenant, and be delivered?

16 As I live, saith the Lord God, surely in the place where the king dwelleth that made him king, whose oath he despised, and whose covenant he brake, even with him in the midst of Babylon he shall die.

17 Neither shall Pharaoh with his mighty army and great company make for him in the war, by casting up mounts, and building forts, to cut off many persons.

18 Seeing he despised the oath by breaking the covenant, when, lo, he had given his hand, and hath done all these things, he shall not escape.

19 Therefore thus saith the Lord God, As I live, surely mine oath that he hath despised, and my covenant that he hath broken, even it will I recompense upon his own head.

20 And I will spread my net upon him, and he shall be taken in my snare, and I will bring him to Babylon, and will plead with him there for his trespass that he hath trespassed against me.

21 And all his fugitives with all his bands shall fall by the sword, and they that remain shall be scattered toward all winds: and ye shall know that I the Lord have spoken it.

22 ¶ Thus saith the Lord God, I will also take of the highest branch of the high cedar, and will set it. I will crop off from the top of his young twigs a tender one, and will plant it upon an high mountain and eminent.

23 In the mountain of the height of Israel will I plant it: and it shall bring forth boughs and bear fruit, and be a goodly cedar: and under it shall dwell all fowl of every wing, in the shadow of the branches thereof shall they dwell.

24 And all the trees of the field shall know that I the Lord have brought down the high tree, have exalted the low tree, have dried up the green tree, and have made the dry tree to flourish: I the Lord have spoken and have done it.

CHAP XVIII

1 God reproveth the unjust parable of sour grapes. 5 He sheweth how he dealeth with a just father. 10 not a naked son of a just father. 11 with a just son of a naked father. 19 not a naked man repenting. 24 with a just man revolting. 25 He defendeth his justice, and exhorteth to repentance.

THE word of the Lord came unto me again, saying,

2 What mean ye, that ye use this proverb concerning the land of Israel, saying, The fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge?

3 As I live, saith the Lord God, ye shall not have occasion any more to use this proverb in Israel.

4 Behold, all souls are mine, as the soul of the father, so also the soul of the son is mine: the soul that sinneth, it shall die.

proud and mighty tyrants of the world, and have exalted this meek and despised Saviour of mankind above every name that is named in heaven and earth. Bp Hall

These circumstances, mentioned in ver 2, 3, 4, can properly refer to no other than our Saviour Christ, who has collected in His Church and under His empire all the kind of heaven: that is, all those who have been able to lay to themselves above earthly things, by attaching themselves only to God through the profession and the practice of Christianity. Bp Hall Bp Hall Cabnet. Where is the judgment, that in the chapter might seem to indicate the utter extirpation of the seed of David, the Lord is here pleased to assure it continuance, and the raising of the Messiah from that house according to promise. Hooker. And thus this prophecy, as well as that contained in the first chapter, closes its denunciation of woes with a striking passage relating to the kingdom of Christ.

Chap XVIII ver 2 — concerning the land of Israel. With respect to the dissolutions made in it by the word famine and pestilence, chap vi 25, and vii 2. Bp Hall

— The fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge. The Chaldee Paraphrase explains the proverb rightly. The fathers have sinned, and the sons are smitten: see the notes on Exod xx 5, Deut v 9, also on Jer xxxi 29, 30.

4 — all souls are mine. All persons and their lives. I will deal with them without prejudice or partiality. Bp Vencom Bp Lush

15 — that they might give him horses &c.] Cavalry for war. Egypt was a country well clothed in horses, of which there was great security in Judea. Bp Lush. See notes at Deut xvii 10.

22 — I will also take of the highest branch of the high cedar, &c.] I will at the last work out the delivery and redemption of My people out of the seed of David, will I raise up the Messiah, and set him on high in My holy Church. Bp Hall

23 — In the mountain of the height of Israel will I plant it.] Even in My glorious evangelical Church will I exalt His power, and he shall preach My Gospel, and enlarge His spiritual dominions all the world over, and all His elect shall shroud themselves under His love and protection. Bp Hall

The holy mountain is often used by the Prophet to denote the Christian Church. Bp Lush

24 — And all the trees of the field shall know &c.] And all the people of the earth shall know that I have brought down the

5 ¶ But if a man be just, and do that which is lawful and right,

6 And hath not eaten upon the mountain, neither hath lifted up his eyes to the idols of the house of Israel, neither hath defiled his neighbour's wife, neither hath come near to a menstruous woman,

7 And hath not oppressed any, but hath restored to the debtor his pledge, hath spoiled none by violence, hath given his bread to the hungry, and hath covered the naked with a garment,

8 He that hath not given forth upon usury, neither hath taken any increase, that hath withdrawn his hand from iniquity, hath executed true judgment between man and man,

9 Hath walked in my statutes, and hath kept my judgments, to deal truly, he is just, he shall surely live, saith the Lord God.

10 ¶ If he beget a son that is a robber, a shedder of blood, and that doeth the like to any one of these things,

11 And that doeth not any of those duties, but even hath eaten upon the mountains, and defiled his neighbour's wife,

12 Hath oppressed the poor and needy, hath spoiled by violence, hath not restored the pledge, and hath lifted up his eyes to the idols, hath committed abomination,

13 Hath given forth upon usury, and hath taken increase shall he then live? he shall not live: he hath done all these abominations, he shall surely die, his blood shall be upon him.

14 ¶ Now, lo, if he beget a son, that seeth all his father's sins which he hath done, and considereth, and doeth not such like,

6 — eat upon the mountains &c] I tasted on the sacrifices there offered to false gods chap vi 13 Abp Newcome Item part of the sacrifice was properly maintaining communion with the idol to whom it was offered. ¶ 11 Lenth

— neither hath lifted up his eyes] In prayer and adoration ¶ 11p Newcome

— hath restored to the debtor his pledge] God commanded the Jew not to detain any pledge they took from a poor man all which was in effect to enjoin them to lend to the poor without either pawn or usury. See Exod xxii 25, 26, Deut xxiv 10, 11. ¶ 11 Lenth

— from usury] See Deut xxiii 19, 20, in which it appears that they were permitted towards strangers. We may therefore conclude that lending money or interest may be agreeable to justice if duly circumstanced. Every kind and degree of usury was forbidden to the Israelites amongst each other, to promote a spirit of mutual kindness: but this law was peculiar to them. Abp Newcome Oppression to the poor may be here meant, because it is joined with violence and want of charity. ¶ 11 Lenth

9 — he shall surely live] His life is meant in the Old Testament all that happiness which is contained in the literal sense of the promises belonging to that covenant: and under these were

15 That hath not eaten upon the mountains, neither hath lifted up his eyes to the idols of the house of Israel, hath not defiled his neighbour's wife,

16 Neither hath oppressed any, but hath not withholden the pledge neither hath spoiled by violence, but hath given his bread to the hungry, and hath covered the naked with a garment,

17 That hath taken off his hand from the poor, that hath not received usury nor increase, hath executed my judgments, hath walked in my statutes, he shall not die for the iniquity of his father, he shall surely live.

18 As for his father, because he cruelly oppressed, spoiled his brother by violence, and did that which is not good among his people, lo, even he shall die in his iniquity.

19 ¶ Yet say ye, Why doth not the son bear the iniquity of the father? When the son hath done that which is lawful and right, and hath kept all my statutes, and hath done them, he shall surely live.

20 The soul that sinneth, it shall die. The son shall not bear the iniquity of the father, neither shall the father bear the iniquity of the son: the righteousness of the righteous shall be upon him, and the wickedness of the wicked shall be upon him.

21 But if the wicked will turn from all his sins that he hath committed, and keep all my statutes, and do that which is lawful and right, he shall surely live, he shall not die.

22 All his transgressions that he hath committed, they shall not be mentioned comprehended the promise of a better life wherein God will bestow upon His servants the peculiar marks of His favour. ¶ 11 Lenth

20 — The soul that sinneth it shall die] The people, whom Ezekiel addressed presumptuously complained that they were punished for the sins of their forefathers, though in truth they had merited their captivity by persisting in evil. God therefore, very consistently with His former declarations, here announces by the Prophet His purpose to make such distinction between the righteous and the wicked that each man should be sensible of having deserved his sufferings. And he assures the people with especial reference to eternal punishment that the soul that sinned should die: and that the son should not be in the iniquity of his father: that each should be responsible only for his own conduct. ¶ 11 Gray

31 — and make you a new heart &c.] The Prophet often exhorteth the Jews to an inward purity and holiness, thereby to take them off from relying upon an outward legal righteousness, and an exactness in the observance of the ritual parts of the law. By thus instructing them in a more excellent way of serving God than the ceremonial law did directly prescribe they prepared their minds for receiving those truths which the Gospel would more fully discover. God promises (chap xxxvi 26) to give them a new heart, and to put within them a new spirit here He exhorts them to make themselves a new heart and a new spirit. Which difference of expression is thus to be reconciled that although God works in us so will and to do, and is the first Mover in our reformation, yet we must work together with His grace at least willingly receive it, and not quench or resist its motion. || Tenth

The repentance to which God here joins the promise of pardon is that which withdraws a man from sin and lead him as is often repeated in this chapter to repair the evil he has done by restitution, and by all other possible means. In a word the Lord declares there is no repentance effectual but that which produces by God's grace a new heart and a change of inclinations followed by actual amendment, reformation, and future holiness of life. Osterwald

32 For I have no pleasure in the death of him that dieth.] The Holy Scriptures in general expressly declare that the good and gracious God was from the beginning and is still using the best fitted and wisest means to render all His creature one or well is another blessed and happy and if any of them through their own self-willed obstinacy and perverseness miss of these joys it will be greatly contrary to His inclination and desire. Thus when Adam was in paradise the good God kindly cautioned him against the danger of disobedience. And when man by transgression fell He immediately comforted him by telling him of the remedy He had prepared for his reconciliation and recovery even the Seed of the woman which was to bruise the serpent's head, that seed, in whom all the nations of the earth were to be blessed, and who in the fulness of time, was to give His life a ransom for many to "taste death for every man." And in consequence of this first promise how gracious yet how compassionate is the tenour of every declaration, which He made from time to time on this head. Have I any pleasure at all that the wicked should die? saith the Lord God and not that he should return from his ways, and live? Make you a new heart

Have I any pleasure at all that the wicked should die? That those which are now wicked should die everlastingly? Is it not rather My desire that men should repent and that the repentant should live? Is not this the sum of My Gospel which I send into the world? Do not I call and cry and sue to men that they would return from their sins and be saved? Bp Hall In conformity to this, St Paul instructs us that God would have all men to be saved, and is not willing that any should perish. 1 Tim ii 4. 2 Pet iii 9. W Tenth

24 — All his righteousness that he hath done &c.] Such in one man as in a clear light and greater convictions and is without guilt of ingratitude, in doing despite unto the Spirit of grace. It had been better for him not to have known the way of righteousness than after he hath known it to turn from the holy commandment. 2 Pet ii 21. W Tenth

25 Yet ye say The way of the Lord is not equal.] Why? Because He punishes the children for the fathers for this is the subject of the chapter. God had already answered the complaint cover 9 &c. Here He gives another reason to justify His conduct namely that those very persons who complain that the way of the Lord is not equal and our fathers have eaten out grapes and onion teeth we set on edge these Jews themselves are culpable in many ways, and have well deserved to be found guilty. Are not your ways unequal? Calmet

27 When a righteous man turneth away from his righteousness &c.] It is an opinion that prevailed among the Jews even till this day that at the day of judgment a considerable number of good actions shall overbalance men's evil ones. See chap xxxiii 1. So they thought it a hard case for a man who had been righteous the greater part of his life if he had at last committed iniquity that his former righteousness should avail him nothing. In opposition to this doctrine God here declares that a righteous man sinning, and not repenting should die in his sins and that a wicked man upon his repentance should save his soul alive. W Tenth

30 — every one according to his ways.] You complain of the partiality of My providence therefore will I be indeed impartial to you and deal with you according to your merits you demand justice and you shall have it but remember that it will descend in punishment. Hence you call Me so strictly to account, I will be strict and exact in My reckoning with you. I will judge you O house of Israel every one according to his ways, saith the Lord God. Dr Ogden

AND it came to pass in the seventh year, in the fifth month, the tenth day of the month, that certain of the elders of Israel came to enquire of the LORD, and sat before me

2 Then came the word of the LORD unto me, saying,

3 Son of man, speak unto the elders of Israel, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God, Are ye come to enquire of me?
As I live, saith the Lord God, I will not

4 Wilt thou judge them, son of man, wilt thou judge them? cause them to know the abominations of their fathers

Lord God, In the day when I chose Is-seed of the house of Jacob, and made myself known unto them in the land of Egypt, when I lifted up mine hand unto them, saying, I am the LORD your God,

6 In the day that I lifted up mine hand unto them, to bring them forth of the land of Egypt into a land that I had espied for them, flowing with milk and honey, which is the glory of all lands

7 Then said I unto them, Cast ye away every man the abominations of his eyes, and defile not yourselves with the idols of Egypt I am the LORD your God

8 But they rebelled against me, and would not hearken unto me they did not every man cast away the abominations of their eyes, neither did they forsake the idols of Egypt then I said, I will pour out my fury upon them, to accomplish my anger against them in the midst of the land of Egypt

9 But I wrought for my name's sake, that it should not be polluted before the heathen, among whom they were, in whose sight I made myself known unto them, in bringing them forth out of the land of Egypt

10 ¶ Wherefore I caused them to go forth out of the land of Egypt, and brought them into the wilderness

11 And I gave them my statutes, and shewed them my judgments, which if a man do, he shall even live in them

12 Moreover also I gave them my sabbaths, to be a sign between me and them, that they might know that I am the LORD that sanctify them

13 But the house of Israel rebelled against me in the wilderness they walked not in my statutes, and they despised my judgments, which if a man do, he shall even live in them, and my sabbaths they greatly polluted then I said, I would pour out my fury upon them in the wilderness, to consume them

14 But I wrought for my name's sake,
that it should not be polluted before the heathen, in whose sight I brought them out

15 Yet also I lifted up my hand unto them in the wilderness, that I would not bring them into the land which I had given them, flowing with milk and honey, which is the glory of all lands,

16 Because they despised my judgments, and walked not in my statutes, but polluted my sabbaths for their heart went after their idols

from destroying them, neither did I make an end of them in the wilderness

18 But I said unto their children in the wilderness] This refers to the many pathetic exhortations contained in the Book of

19 I am the LORD your God, walk in my statutes, and keep my judgments, and do them,

20 And hallow my sabbaths, and they shall be a sign between me and you, that ye may know that I am the LORD your God.

21 Notwithstanding the children rebelled against me: they walked not in my statutes, neither kept my judgments to do them, which if a man do, he shall even live in them; they polluted my sabbaths: then I said, I would pour out my fury upon them, to accomplish my anger against them in the wilderness,

22 Nevertheless I withdrew mine hand, and wrought for my name's sake, that it should not be polluted in the sight of the heathen, in whose sight I brought them forth.

23 I lifted up mine hand unto them also in the wilderness, that I would scatter them among the heathen, and disperse them through the countries, 24 Because they had not executed my judgments, but had despised my statutes, and had polluted my sabbaths, and their eyes were after their fathers' idols.

25 Wherefore I gave them also statutes that were not good, and judgments whereby they should not live,

26 And I polluted them in their own gifts, in that they caused to pass through the fire all that openeth the womb, that might make them desolate, to the end that they might know that I am the LORD. <sup>Before CHRIST 593 Chap 11</sup>

27 ¶ Therefore, son of man, speak unto the house of Israel, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God, Yet in this your fathers have blasphemed me, in that they have committed a trespass against me.

28 For when I had brought them into the land, for the which I lifted up mine hand to give it to them, then they saw every high hill, and all the thick trees, and they offered there their sacrifices, and there they presented the provocation of their offering: there also they made their sweet savour, and poured out there their drink offerings.

29 Then I said unto them, What is the high place wherunto ye go? And the name thereof is called Bamah unto this day. <sup>† Heb they used a trespass ¶ I told them what the high place was or, Bamah</sup>

30 Wherefore say unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord God, Are ye polluted after the manner of your fathers' and committed your whoredom after their abominations?

31 For when ye offer your gifts, when ye make your sons to pass through the fire, ye pollute yourselves with all your idols, even unto this day: and shall I be enquired of by you, O house of Israel? As I

Deuteronomy, particularly those in chap xxix, xxx, xxxi, and xxxii, which were uttered after that rebellious generation were all consumed, as God had threatened them, (see Numb xiv 32, 33, xxvi 64, 65,) and were designed as warnings to succeeding generations, Deut. xxxi 16—21. W. Louth

25 Wherefore I gave them also statutes that were not good, God intended not here His own statutes and judgments, but the idolatrous statutes and judgments, the corrupt principles and practices of the heathen nations, to which He sometimes gave up and abandoned His own people, because they first deserted and abandoned Him. This is the sense given to the passage by the Targum of Jonathan, and in the speech of St. Stephen in the New Testament, Acts vii 42, and the context points to the same interpretation, for that this is its true sense appears chiefly from this that God here describes these statutes and judgments by characters directly opposite to those He gives of His own in the same chapter. For, it appears from ver 11, 18, 21, and other passages, that the distinction of God's own law was that a man should live in them, whereas He expressly says of these, that they were statutes and judgments, whereby "they should not live." Also, at ver 18, we have mention of statutes and of judgments (the same words in the Hebrew as in this verse,) yet not meaning God's statutes and judgments, but the corrupt customs and manners of their idolatrous ancestors, such as God permitted or gave them up to, because they chose them, as is intimated in ver 23. The original word for "give," is frequently used in the permissive sense, and therefore "I gave them" in this verse may amount to no more than "I suffered such things." Iuringa, Dr Waterland, W Louth, Dr Berriman See also Ps lxxxii 12, Rom i 24

26 — I polluted them in their own gifts, in that they caused to pass through the fire &c ] This sufficiently intimates what kind of statutes and judgments God was just before speaking of, namely, the rites and practices of the heathen, whereby God polluted them that is, gave them up to their own hearts lusts to defile and pollute themselves. The Israelites had provoked God many ways, and more especially by their frequent idolatry: and therefore God gave them up to the vilest and most deplorable idolatry of all, namely, that of offering up their children as burnt offerings to Moloch. Iuringa, Dr Waterland

— that I might make them desolate, &c ] The consequence of which was that they would be exposed to My anger, and at length would acknowledge My hand in the judgments inflicted on them. Abp Newcome

28 — then they saw every high hill, &c ] They cast their eyes upon those hills and groves whereon the heathen had been wont to offer their idolatrous sacrifices, and there, contrary to My commandments, they made their sinful oblations to provoke Me to wrath. Bp Hall

29 — What is the high place &c ] What mean you that ye go to the high place? Should you not go to the altar of God, and bring your sacrifices to the temple, instead of leaving My temple and the service I prescribed, and in other places unrequired doing supposed duties? Poole

— And the name thereof is called Bamah unto this day ] The words probably refer to some noted high place, which the Jews frequented to perform their idolatrous worship. W Louth The very word told them their wickedness, that they acted against the express will of God, and framed themselves to the idolatries of the nations. Poole

44 And ye shall know that I am the Lord, when I have wrought with you for wicked see ver 37 This may be understood of the captive Israelites in Chaldea and Babylon. God well knew how to distinguish among the captives, the just from the unjust. He will bring back the former into their country, and will disperse the latter into every part of the world. The passage may have further reference to the Jews who rejected our Saviour: they have been driven from their country, and have not reentered the land of Israel Calmet

39 — Go ye, ] A permission, full of indignation and rebuke W Louth See the notes on Numb xxii 20, 2 Kings ii 17, 18

— all of them in the land ] All of the house of Israel that are restored shall serve Me, there shall be no separation of tribes Abp Newcome

— your offerings, and the firstfruits of your oblation ] The Prophet here expresses the Christian worship by those religious oblations which were proper to his own time, as the other Prophets frequently describe the state of the Christian Church by representations taken from the Jewish temple and service, Isa xix 19, lvi 7, lx 7, lxvi 23 W Louth

43 — and ye shall lothe yourselves ] See chap vi 9, xvi 67

44 And ye shall know that I am the Lord, &c ] As in the height of God's vengeance on the sins of this wretched people, the distant prospect always terminated in a mercy, so with a mercy and a promise of better times the whole of this prophetick scene is closed, in order that those, to whom it is addressed, should, however criminal, not be left in an utter state of desperation but be afforded some shadow of repose in the prospect of future peace and tranquillity. The idea of mercy is naturally attached to that of repentance and reformation, and with mercy the prophecy ends Bp Warburton

The foregoing chapter presents us with a detail of the favours, conferred by God upon the Jews, of their ingratitude for His blessings and insensibility to His warnings, and of the severe judgments which were for this reason to overtake them God has done infinitely more for us than for the Jews He has redeemed us by His only Son our Lord Jesus Christ, He has given us the knowledge of His holy laws, by which we may obtain life, and the warnings, which He gives us to induce us to serve and fear Him, are not less express, nor less frequent, than those addressed to His ancient people If after all, we fall into infidelity and disobedience we shall be infinitely more criminal than the Jews and our punishment will be proportionally more severe (Ps 136)

first make war and committed the decision of this matter to his lots of divination, described ver 21 W Lomth

20 — to Rabbath] Or, Rabbah, chap xxv 5, the chief city of the Ammonites, 2 Sam xii 26, Jer xlii 2

21 For the king of Babylon stood at the parting of the way, — to use divination he made his arrows bright,] This way of divining by arrows is thus described by St Jerome, in his commentary upon this place "They wrote on several arrows the names of the cities they intended to assault, and then putting them all together promiscuously in a quiver, they drew them out thence as lots are drawn, and that city whose name was written on the arrow first drawn, was the city they first made war upon W Lomth

— he made his arrows bright,] Or rather, he mingled his arrows, which sense of the word agrees better with the description of this kind of divination given by St Jerome It is preferred by Dr Pocock, who confirms this exposition from the Arabic use of the word, and also by Houbigant W Lomth, Abp Newcome

Abp Potter notices the practice among the Greeks in which divination was made by arrows shaken together in a quiver The method of divination practised by the idolatrous Arabs, but forbidden by the Koran, is too singular to be unnoticed "Seven divining arrows were kept at the temple of Mecca but generally in divination, the idolatrous Arabs made use of three only on one was written, 'My lord hath commanded me', on another

My lord hath forbidden me and the third was blank If the first was drawn, they looked upon it as an approbation of the enterprise in question, if the second, they made a contrary conclusion, but if the third happened to be drawn they mixed them and drew over again till a decisive answer was given by one of the others' Abp Newcome

— he consulted with images] In Hebrew "teraphim, which signifies all sorts of idols principally of the human form, Hos iii 4, and it is apparent from several passages of Scripture, that they were consulted as oracles Th L Pocock Gen xxxi 19, 1 Sam xv 23, &c

— he looked in the liver] The practice of predicting the future by inspecting the fibres of the liver in an animal recently killed, was very common in antiquity Grotius conjectures, that the Chaldeans communicated this superstitious custom to the Lydians, the Lydians to the Iuscans, and the Iuscans to the people of Italy Calmet

22 At his right hand was the divination for Jerusalem,] His

11 — of the slayer] Of the king of Babylon W Lomth 12 — smite therefore upon thy thigh] An action expressive of grief compare chap vi 11, Jer xxxi 19

13 Because it is a trial,] A calamity W Lomth The sense may be 'for the firmness of the sword has been proved and what if it destroy not only the common branches, but even the root of the sceptre? Abp Newcome

— it shall be no more,] The diadem and throne shall be no more, see ver 27, the regal succession shall end in Zedekiah Abp Newcome

14 — smite thine hands together,] A sign of grief chap xi 11, of 14c Numb xxiv 10, of astonishment, chap xxii 18 But many think it here a gesture of encouragement to the victorious Chaldeans Abp Newcome

— and let the sword be doubled the third time, the sword of the slain] The expression may mean no more than if the Prophet had said, "Let the stroke be repeated twice and thrice, that is, oftentimes So that phrase is used, Job xxxiii 20, "All these things worketh God twice and thrice with man, where our translation very fitly expresses the sense 'oftentimes' A form of speech much like those elsewhere used 'For three transgressions, and for four Amos i 3 "Give a portion to seven, and also to eight, Eccles xi 2 W Lomth

"The sword of the slain in this verse should probably be rendered 'the sword of the soldiers, that is, of the Babylonians, and the sword of the great men that are slain should be "the word of the great soldier that is, of the valiant king of Babylon for thus it is expressly called in the 19th verse "the sword of the king of Babylon Dr Kennicott

— into their privy chambers] Whether they went to hide themselves, see 1 Kings xxii 25 W Lomth

15 — wrapped up] In the scabbard but sharpened and ready for slaughter Calmet

16 Go thee — either on the right hand, or on the left,] The words are addressed to the sword, which is directed to go through the land without restraint, to the south or to the north, these two quarters being expressed in the Hebrew language by the right and left see chap xvi 46, and note W Lomth

17 — my fury to rest] See chap v 13, xxix 13

19 — appoint thee two ways] "Describe or paint two roads diverging from one God foretells His Prophet, that the king of Babylon, coming with his army into Syria and finding that the Ammonites had entered into a confederacy with Egypt as well as Zedekiah, was in doubt against which of the two people he should divinations shew that he was to go to the right hand that is, towards Jerusalem Dathus Supposed the way towards the east, the southern branch of the two roads, which was towards the right hand led towards Jerusalem, for this city lay to the south of Rabbah You must represent Nebuchadnezzar as coming from Din and marching along Jordan Here Rabbah was situated at the left hand and Jerusalem at the right Abp Newcome, Michaelis

In coming from beyond the Euphrates into Syria and Phenicia, they commonly took their journey through Damascus They passed the Euphrates at Thapsacus, entered into Palestine by the plain of Libanus, under mount Hermon, and crossed the Jordan above the lake Samochonites. They did not come directly from Babylon through Arabia Deserta, the shortest rout, on account of the sterility of the country Calmet.

I thought the manner, which the king of Babylon chose to detain him what course to take, was such, yet God was pleased so to direct it, that he turned first against Jerusalem God governs all things by His providence He ever presides over such events, as we imagine to depend upon mere chance, and, generally speaking, over the actions of men so that men, without knowing it become the instruments of executing what He has resolved to do or permit Ostervald

— to appoint captains, to open the mouth in the slaughter,] Whose office it was to encourage the army to fall upon the enemy and destroy them W Lenth

23 And it shall be unto them as a false divination] But this process shall be unto the Jews, when some of their friends behold it, and report it at Jerusalem, as a deceitful lot, such as the event would not verify, it shall even appear so to the Jews, who had sworn false oaths to the Chaldeans, (2 Chron. xxxvi. 13.) and ought therefore to have expected the Divine vengeance But he (Nebuchadnezzar) is mindful of their perjury, and gladly turns his arms first against them, to revenge himself on them Abp Newcome

25 And thou, profane wicked prince of Israel,] The words are addressed to king Zedekiah, whom the Prophet calls "profane and "wicked, chiefly with respect to his breaking that solemn oath uttered in the name of God, whereby he had engaged himself to be tributary to the king of Babylon, chap xxii. 10 W Lenth

26 — exalt him that is low, and abase him that is high] As Zedekiah shall be brought down from his kingly dignity so another branch of that family, namely, Christ (see ver 27,) shall be advanced from an obscure origin and low condition, to the supreme degree of sovereignty W Lenth

27 I will overturn — it and it shall be no more, until he come whose right it is and I will give it him] This is a threat that the kingdom should never recover its former glory and strength, but consume, till the sceptre should be quite taken away from Judah, and way be made for the Messiah, who is He that was to come, whose was the dominion, and to whom the Father would give it so that the final desolation of the temporal kingdom of the seed of David is here threatened, and the eternal kingdom of the Messiah is promised The triple use of the word "overturn, expresses the certainty of the event. Poole

28 And thou son of man, &c.] In ver 19, 20 Rabbath, the chief city of the Ammonites, was mentioned, as being in equal danger with Jerusalem God here directs the Prophet to resume the subject of Rabbath, and to declare the ruin of it Poole

— the Ammonites, and concerning their reproach] They insulted over their brethren the Jews, for which they are often reproved very severely by the Prophets, and threatened with like judgments See chap xxv. 2—6, Zeph ii. 8, 10 W Lenth

29 Whiles they see vanity unto thee, whiles they divine a lie &c.] While thy wizards feed thee with false predictions to stir thee up against those already miserable and distressed Israelites, against those wicked revolvers from Me, whose judgment is now to be fully accomplished Bp Hall

24 — Thou art the land that is not cleansed, nor rained upon in the day of indignation ] Thou art a land notoriously unclean with thy abominable sins, and therefore shalt be seized upon by My judgments without mitigation, when My fire shall flame up to consume thee, there shall not be so much as a shower of rain for the quenching thereof Bp Hall

The metaphor of fire, which had been used in the foregoing verses, seems to be pursued here, and the admonition of the Prophets is to be understood under the figure of rain. Calmat, W Lenth See chap xx 46

25 — a conspiracy of her prophets ] That is, of the false prophets. These are often reproved for making a gain of their profession. See Jer vi 13, Micah iii 5, 11 W Lenth Probably they agreed together in supporting each other's false prophecies. See chap xiii 11, 12 Calmat

— they have devoured souls, ] They make merchandise of men out or else they take away their lives by false accusation and then seize upon their substance. Compare ver 27, and Matt xxiii 14 W Lenth Or the consequence of their false prophecies the destruction of men's lives by the judgments which fall on impenitence is charged on them

26 — and have hid their eyes from my sabbaths, ] Absenting themselves from the holy rites to be performed in My courts Abp Newcome

28 And her prophets have daubed them &c ] Have soothed them in their sins, and in a base flattery have spoken plausible things to them, no less false than pleasing. Bp Hall See chap xiii 6—10, and the note there

CHAP XXIII

1 The whoredoms of Aholah and Ahobah 2<sup>o</sup> Ahobah is to be plagued by her lovers 3<sup>o</sup> The prophet reproves the adulteries of them both, 45 and sheweth their judgments

2 Son of man, there were two women, the daughters of one mother

3 And they committed whoredoms in Egypt, they committed whoredoms in their youth: there were their breasts pressed,

30 — but I found none ] The Jews had generally given themselves up to idolatry, injustice, uncleanness, and abominations of every kind and had profaned in the most shocking manner the religion and the service of God. The corruption spread among persons in a publick character the prophet seduced the people the priests broke the law, and profaned the holy things, the magistrates were addicted to injustice, dishonest gain, fraud, and violence. This deprived them of the Divine protection, and obliged God, as it were, to put His threatenings into execution. These sins, no doubt, God does still abhor and much more in Christians to whom the punishments of the Jews should be a warning and especially to pastors and governors, that they be not the authors of corruption and of publick calamities, and so in the end, of eternal perdition to those, whom God has placed under their care. Ostervald

Chap XXIII ver 2 — there were two women, ] The style of this chapter, like that of chap xvi, is adapted to men among whom at that time, no refinement subsisted. Large allowance must be made for language addressed to an ancient Eastern people in the worst period of their history, all whose ideas were sensual, and whose grand inducement to idolatry seems to have been, the brutal impurities which it encouraged. Abp Newcome

— the daughters of one mother ] Samaria and Jerusalem are described in this chapter as sisters, the offspring of the same land or country. Compare chap xvi 46, Jer iii 7, 8 W Lenth

3 And they committed whoredoms in Egypt ] Idolatry, see chap xx, 7, 8

— in their youth ] The time when the Israelites were in Egypt, or were lately departed out of it, is called then "youth" in

Before CHRIST 591 and there they bruised the teats of their virginity

4 And the names of them were Aholah the elder, and Aholibah her sister and they were mine, and they bare sons and daughters Thus were their names, Samaria is Aholah, and Jerusalem Aholibah

5 And Aholah played the harlot when she was mine, and she doted on her lovers, on the Assyrians her neighbours,

6 Which were clothed with blue, captains and rulers, all of them desirable young men, horsemen riding upon horses

7 Thus she committed her whoredoms with them, with all them that were the chosen men of Assyria, and with all on whom she doted with all their idols she defiled herself

8 Neither left she her whoredoms brought from Egypt for in her youth they lay with her, and they bruised the breasts of her virginity, and poured their whoredom upon her

9 Wherefore I have delivered her into the hand of her lovers, into the hand of the Assyrians, upon whom she doted

10 These discovered her nakedness they took her sons and her daughters, and slew her with the sword, and she became famous among women; for they had executed judgment upon her

11 And when her sister Aholibah saw

thus, she was more corrupt in her inordinate love than she, and in her whoredoms more than her sister in her whoredoms

12 She doted upon the Assyrians her neighbours, captains and rulers clothed most gorgeously, horsemen riding upon horses, all of them desirable young men

13 Then I saw that she was defiled, that they took both one way,

14 And that she increased her whoredoms for when she saw men painted upon the wall, the images of the Chaldeans painted with vermilion,

15 Girded with girdles upon their loins, exceeding in dyed attire upon their heads, all of them princes to look to, after the manner of the Babylonians of Chalda, the land of their nativity

16 And as soon as she saw them with her eyes, she doted upon them, and sent messengers unto them into Chaldea

17 And the Babylonians came to her into the bed of love, and they defiled her with their whoredom, and she was polluted with them, and her mind was alienated from them,

18 So she discovered her whoredoms, and discovered her nakedness then my mind was alienated from her, like as my mind was alienated from her sister

19 Yet she multiplied her whoredoms, in calling to remembrance the days of her

the Prophets, because that was the time when God first owned them for His people See ver 8, 19, chap xvi 8, 22, Jer ii 2, Hos ii 15 W Louth

4 And the names of them were Aholah the elder, &c] Both of these divided people had their names from a tent, or tabernacle (Israel) which is the greater part of the ten tribes, is Aholah, 'her own tabernacle,' which she would needs erect according to her own device, to draw away clients from My temple Judah is Aholibah 'My tent or tabernacle in her,' because of the place of My worship settled there Bp Hall

5 — when she was mine,] When she was under My dominion Houbigant While she professed to be Mine Bp Hall — on the Assyrians her neighbours] The king of Assyria was a very powerful prince and therefore his alliance was courted both by the kings of Israel and Judah, 2 Kings xv 29, xvi 7, and ver 12 of this chapter W Louth

The Assyrians taught them the worship of Baal, and inspired them with the rage for making sacrifices upon high places Calmet

6 — clothed with blue,] The Chaldeans, the Assyrians, and the Persians, chiefly admired the colour of purple and hyacinth Dresses of these colours were reserved for the prince and the great lords and one of the most distinguished rewards for merit and service was the permission to wear them Calmet See Nahum ii 3

— horsemen riding upon horses] Horses were scarce in Judah which made the Jews, in proportion as they renounced their dependence upon Heaven, apply themselves to the neighbouring countries for troops of horse, in the time of any hostile invasion, Isa xxx 16, xxxi 1 W Louth

8 — her whoredoms brought from Egypt] All the precautions taken by Moses, all the zeal of Joshua and his successors, were insufficient to root out the propensity to idolatry, which the Jews had imbibed in Egypt Calmet

10 — and she became famous among women,] And she became a noted and remarkable example of God's judgments among the nations Bp Hall

11 And when her sister Aholibah saw this] Saw the judgment inflicted on Samaria, instead of taking warning by it, she advanced to greater degrees of idolatry Bp Hall W Louth

14 — men painted upon the wall, the images of the Chaldeans] The defied men worshipped by the Chaldeans must be meant These the inhabitants of Chalda had represented on the walls of Jerusalem, and the Jews desired to possess the idols, that they might pay them Divine honours Abp Newcome Such is Bel, Nebo, and Merodach, mentioned Is xli 1, Jer i 2 Abp Newcome, W Louth

15 — exceeding in dyed attire upon their head] Flowing, luxuriant, in the turbans worn by them Abp Newcome

16 — and sent messengers] This probably relates to those times when a correspondence was maintained between the cities of Babylon and Jerusalem, after that Nebuchadnezzar had conquered Judah, and made it a tributary kingdom, in the beginning of the fourth year of Jehoiakim, Dan i 1, 2, 2 Kings xxiv 1 W Louth

17 — and her mind was alienated] Through satiety she loathed them, but still she desired other paramours, chap xvi 20 Abp Newcome

The representation of idolatry under the figure of the inordinate lust of adultery is still kept up W Louth

Before CHRIST 593. Aholibah? yea, declare unto them their abominations, 37 That they have committed adultery, and blood is in their hands, and with their idols have they committed adultery, and have also caused their sons, whom they bare unto me, to pass for them through the fire, to devour them.

38 Moreover thus they have done unto me they have defiled my sanctuary in the same day, and have profaned my sabbaths

39 For when they had slain their children to their idols, then they came the same day into my sanctuary to profane it, and, lo, thus have they done in the midst of mine house.

40 And furthermore, that ye have sent for men to come from far, unto whom a messenger was sent, and, lo, they came for whom thou didst wash thyself, paintedst thy eyes, and deckedst thyself with ornaments,

41 And satest upon a stately bed, and a table prepared before it, whereupon thou hast set mine incense and mine oil

42 And a voice of a multitude being at ease was with her and with the men of the common sort were brought Sabeans from the wilderness, which put bracelets upon their hands, and beautiful crowns upon their heads

43 Then said I unto her that was old in adulteries, Will they now commit whoredoms with her, and she with them?

44 Yet they went in unto her, as they go in unto a woman that playeth the harlot so went they in unto Aholah and unto Aholibah, the lewd women

45 ¶ And the righteous men, they shall judge them after the manner of adulteresses, and after the manner of women that shed blood, because they are adulteresses, and blood is in their hands

46 For thus saith the Lord God, I will bring up a company upon them, and will give them to be removed and spoiled

47 And the company shall stone them with stones, and dispatch them with their swords, they shall slay their sons and their daughters, and burn up their houses with fire

48 Thus will I cause lewdness to cease out of the land, that all women may be taught not to do after your lewdness

49 And they shall recompense your lewdness upon you, and ye shall bear the sins of your idols and ye shall know that I am the Lord God

CHAP XXIV.

1 Under the parable of a boiling pot, 6 is shewed the irrevocable destruction of Jerusalem 15 By the sign of Izekiel not mourning for the death of his wife, 19 is shewed the calamity of the Jews to be beyond all sorrow

A GAIN in the ninth year, in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, the word of the Lord came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, Write thee the name of the day, even of this same day the king of Babylon set himself against Jerusalem this same day.

43 — her that was old in adulteries,] The word "Ier" is taken collectively in this and the following verses, so as to include both the sisters. W Louth

45 And the righteous men,] Meaning the Prophets who foretold the judgments God would inflict upon Samaria and Jerusalem, such as Hosea, Amos, Jeremiah, &c. The Prophets are said to execute those judgments which they foretold so Izekiel says of himself, that he was sent "to destroy the city" chap xliii 3, that is, to prophesy its destruction. To the same sense we read, Hos vi 5, "I have bewept them by the Prophets. I have slain them by the words of My mouth" See Is vi 10, Jer i 10 W Louth

46 — a company] The Babylonians

47 — shall stone them] See chap xlii 38 John viii 3

49 — and ye shall bear the sins of your idols] Ye shall bear the punishment due to your sins of idolatry W Louth

Chap XXIV ver 1 — in the ninth year,] Ezekiel, who was then a captive in Mesopotamia, saw in spirit the commencement of the siege of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar, and he wrote down the date of it that very day, that the Jews who were near him and who could not fail of knowing in a short time what had happened to the capital of their country, might also learn, that the Prophet did not utter vain prophecy, and that his predictions were no longer to be discredited Calmel

37 — and blood is in their hands,] They have shed innocent blood particularly in sacrificing their children, as the verse after wards expresses Dr Wells

40 — ye have sent for men to come from far, &c.] Their court ing the alliances of foreign nations, by complying with their idoltries, is set forth under the representation of the several arts which harlots use to recommend themselves to new lovers, Is lvii 9 W Louth

— paintedst thy eyes,] See the note on Jer iv 30

41 — mine incense and mine oil] Which should have been offered to me Abp Newcom

42 — at ease,] I casting and making merry

— Sabeans from the wilderness,] The Sabeans. The word is translated "drunkards" in the margin. The word saba in the Hebrew signifies to drink to excess, from whence comes the participle sabaim, drunkards, which comes very near in sound to the word "Sabeans" in the text. The same word occurs Joel iii, 8, Is xlv 14 in which places it is supposed to denote the inhabitants of Arabia Felix, who were the posterity of Seba, mentioned Gen x 7 W Louth

— upon their heads,] That is, upon the hands and heads of these two lewd women, Aholah and Aholibah. See ver 45. Bracelets and crowns were ornaments proper to brides, (see chap xvi 11, 12,) and were likewise presented by lovers to their mistresses W Louth

— Set on a pot ] If this figure should appear to any one undignified let him remember that it bears allusion to the sacred rites of the temple, and therefore nothing low or mean was associated with it in the ideas of the Jews, to whom the prophecy was directed Bp Lenth The destruction of Jerusalem is represented by a boiling pot or caldron, Jer 1 13, Ezek xi 3 W Lenth

Ezekiel was a sign to the house of Israel in various instances, and described by sensible representations the miseries which God was about to bring upon that people That his predictions were fully accomplished we learn from the conclusion of the books of Kings and Chronicles, from the 39th and 52d chapters of Jeremiah, and most particularly from the Lamentations of that Prophet who was an eyewitness of the desolations of his country, and the captivity of his people How long did God wait! how often did He call, "Be thou instructed, O Jerusalem! lest My soul depart from thee, lest I make thee desolate and land not inhabited! But she refused to be instructed, and God's soul did depart from her Let us hear, and fear, and take better impressions from such words of exhortation, and cleanse our hearts, and purify our hearts, from the defilement of our sins Let us speedily embrace the overtures of our peace, whilst the door of mercy stands open turning without delay from our rebellious ways And among those things which are well pleasing to God that so we may be reconciled to Him, and rejoice in the light of His countenance and finally obtain from Him the salvation of our soul and bodies, through the merits and mediation of Jesus Christ our Lord Reading

Chap XXV ver 2 — against the Ammonites The chronological order of this chapter is after chap xxxiii 21, &c at a time when not only the taking of Jerusalem was known but also the conduct which the surrounding nations pursued in consequence of the event Abp Newcome Josephus and Archbishop Usher place the events of the chapter five years after the destruction of Jerusalem W Lowth

The accomplishment of these prophecies has not been distinctly recorded by the Prophets but Josephus informs us, that five years after the taking of Jerusalem, Nebuchadnezzar carried the war into Coele-syria, and afterwards against the Ammonites and the Moabites, and finally against Egypt, and that having achieved the entire conquest of these countries, he returned to Babylon Calmet

— cover not thy lips,] Covering the lips was another token of mourning, Lev xiii 45 Micah iii 7 W Lowth The author above mentioned, in his account of the Jews of Barbary, thus describes one of their mourning rites "They return from the grave to the house of the deceased, where one as chief mourner receives them, with his jaws tied up with a linen cloth, after the same manner that they bind up the dead and by this the mourner is said to testify, that he was ready to die with his friend And thus unfiled, the mourner goes for seven days during which time the rest of his friends come twice every twenty-four hours to pry with him Harmer

This exposition seems to be confirmed by the latter part of this, and by the following verse, which expresses clearly the genius and the mode of life of the Arabs "They shall eat thy fruit, and they shall drink thy milk, and I will make Rabbah a stable for camels and the Ammonites a couchingplace for flocks" Their food is milk, their riches flocks, and upon camels they transport themselves and their property from place to place Cabnet, Harmer

AND it came to pass in the eleventh year, in the first day of the month,

1 — Because the Philistines have dealt by revenge ] The Philistines being borderers upon the Jews were their ancient enemies, from the time of the Judges down ward, more particularly in the time of Abimelech. Chon xxviii 18 W Lomth Amos accuses them of having sold to the Idumeans the captives which they had taken in Judah Amos i 5—6 Calmet

— the remnant ] The Philistines had been much weakened in preceding wars by the kings of Egypt and of Chaldea, and therefore they are called the remnant Calmet See Jer xxv and xlvii

Chap XXVI ver 1 — in the eleventh year in the first day of the month ] The eleventh year mentioned here is the very year of the taking of Jerusalem It was the eleventh year of the reign of Zedekiah and of the captivity of Jehoiachin The particular month is not mentioned W Lomth

2 — she is broken that was the gates of the people ] Jerusalem is ancient There was a great confluence of people to Jerusalem from all parts at the solemn feasts of the year, as well of Jews as proselytes John xii 20 This, together with the resort for the purposes of trade, contributed to render her populous and wealthy and on that account an object of envy to the Tyrians W Lomth Calmet Poole

Ezekiel here begins his prophecy against the Tyrians with a declaration, that it was occasioned by their insulting over the Jews upon the taking of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar The Prophets Joel and Amos had before denounced the Divine judgments upon the Tyrians for their wickedness in general, and in particular for their cruelty to the children of Israel, and for buying and selling them like cattle in the markets, Joel iii 5, &c, Amos i 9 And the Psalmist reckons them among the most inveterate and unprincipled enemies of the Jewish name and nation, Ps lxxxiii 6, 7 Bp Newton

— she is turned unto me ] Her traffick and her wealth are come into my tores (compare Is lx 5 Bp Hall

— I shall be replenished, ] Trading interest will turn to me, they that carried merchandise to Jerusalem, will now bring it to me Poole Besides which, as Tyre was a noted market for all sorts of trade, so when Jerusalem was taken and sacked, the spoil of the city was carried thither for sale and probably several of the inhabitants, being made captives, were sold there for slaves, a traffick the Tyrians dealt in very much, chap xxvii 13 This interpretation may be confirmed by comparing it with Joel iii 4 5 6, where the Prophet upbraids the Tyrians for making mer-that the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Before CHRIST 548.

• 2 Son of man, because that Tyrus hath said against Jerusalem, Aha, she is broken that was the gates of the people she is turned unto me I shall be replenished, now she is laid waste

• 3 Therefore thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I am against thee, O Tyrus, and will cause many nations to come up against thee, as the sea causeth his waves to come up

4 And they shall destroy the walls of Tyrus, and break down her towers I will also scrape her dust from her, and make her like the top of a rock

chandise, both of the persons and substance of the Jews when they came into their hands To the same purpose we read 1 Mac iii 41, that when Lysias came with great forces to subdue the Jews, the merchants of the country took silver and gold and came into the camp, to buy the children of Israel for slaves W Lomth

9 — I am against thee, O Tyrus, ] This prophecy respects the same siege of Tyre which is foretold in the 47th chapter of Jeremiah The profane authors extant in the time of St Jerome said nothing of this siege, but the ancient writers of the Phœnician history, which had been read by Josephus, related that Nebuchadnezzar had besieged Tyre in the reign of king Ithobal, and that the siege had lasted thirteen years Berosus and the Phœnician history also stated, that the king of Chaldea had subdued Phœnicia and Syria: and lastly Philostratus had spoken of this siege by Nebuchadnezzar The sole object of this and the two following chapters is the destruction of the city and of the kingdom of Tyre Calmet.

When we consider the extent and effects of the Phœnician commerce the scanty information concerning it, which we receive from ancient writers, must on a first view appear surprising But when we recollect that all the Greek historians, Herodotus excepted, who give any account of the Phœnicians, published their works long after the destruction of Tyre by Alexander the Great, we shall cease to wonder at their not having entered into minute details with respect to a trade, which was then removed to new seats, and carried on in other channels But the power and opulence of Tyre, in the prosperous age of its commerce, must have attracted general attention In this and the two following chapters of Ezekiel, who flourished two hundred and sixty years before the fall of Tyre, there is the most particular account of the nature and variety of its commercial transactions, that is to be found in any ancient writer, and which conveys at the same time a magnificent idea of the extensive power of that state Dr Robertson

14 And I will make thee like the top of a rock: thou shalt be a place of snares upon, thou shalt be built no more: for I the Lord have spoken it, saith the Lord God.

15 ¶ Thus saith the Lord God to Tyrus, Shall not the isles shake at the sound of thy fall, when the wounded cry, when the slaughter is made in the midst of thee?

entire house left. Its present inhabitants are only a few wretches huddling themselves in the vaults, and subsisting themselves chiefly upon fishing, who seem to be preserved in this place by Divine Providence, as a monument of the Lord's faithfulness to His word concerning Tyre.

The Jesuit Hieronymus Perizonius, who lived many years in Syria, and Fluctus heard him say, that he had seen the ruins of Tyre, and beheld the rocks stretched forth to the sea and the great stones scattered up and down on the shore, made clean and smooth by the sun, waves, and winds, and useful only for the drying of fishermen's nets, many of which happened at the time to be spread on them, it brought to his memory this prophecy. Bp Newton

6 — her daughters which are in the field] By the daughters of Tyre are meant the lesser towns which were under her jurisdiction as the mother city or seat of the kingdom. W Lenth

7 — Behold, I will bring upon Tyrus Nebuchadrezzar &c.] The Prophet in this place expressly declares, that the city should be taken and destroyed by Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon. Shalmaneser king of Assyria had besieged Tyre, but without success: the Tyrians had with a few ships beaten his large fleet: but yet Nebuchadrezzar should prevail. Ezekiel not only foretold the siege, but mentioned it afterwards as a past transaction. See chap. xxix. 18. Bp Newton

It hath been questioned among learned men, which of the Tyres was the subject of these prophecies, whether Old Tyre, that was seated on the continent, or New Tyre, that was built in an island almost over against it. The true and best answer I conceive to be, that the prophecies appertain to both, some explanation being applicable only to the former, and others only to the latter. Compare chap. xxvii. 3, with ver. 4, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, and Ezek. xxix. 10, with ver. 12, and xxxviii. 5. From these passages it appears that the insular Tyre, as well as the Tyre upon the continent, is included in these prophecies: they are both comprehended under the same name, and both spoken of as one and the same city, part built on the continent, and part on an island adjoining. It is commonly said indeed, that when Old Tyre was closely besieged, and was near falling into the hand of the Chaldeans, then the Tyrians fled from thence, and built New Tyre in the island: but the learned Vitranga hath proved at large that New Tyre was founded several ages before, and was the station for ships, and considered as part of Old Tyre, and Pliny, speaking of the compass of the city, reckons both the old and the new together. The prophecy was fulfilled upon New Tyre, whose inhabitants were quite destroyed by Alexander when he took the city, and afterwards the city itself became desolate. W Lenth to their ships Suetonius, in his Life of Caligula, reckons this among several instances of that emperor's extravagance, that he furnished his pleasure boats with costly sails, and other expensive ornaments Bishop Newton compares this luxury in the Tyrian shipping with the elegance and magnificence of Cleopatra's galley, when she sailed down the river Cydnus to meet Antony W Louth, Abp Newcome Maillet says of Egypt, "there is still a considerable quantity of cloth made here, but it is far short of the perfection of that which was formerly brought from Egypt." Hasselquist is of a different opinion, "By what we can see of the linen wrapped round the mummies, the famous linen of the Egyptians was no better than what is made at present in this country, it is however softer and of a looser texture, for which reason it lasts longer, and does not wear out so soon as ours" Now as the persons embalmed were of great distinction, it is probable that the linen, in which the mummies were wrapped, was the finest at that time in Egypt, but if it was so coarse, why is it represented in this passage of Ezekiel as such a piece of magnificence for the ships of Tyre to have their sails of the linen of Egypt? Certainly, because though coarse in our eyes, it was thought to be very valuable when used even for clothing, and if matting was then commonly used for sails, as appears from Niebuhr to be the case at present on the Red sea, sails of linen must have been extremely magnificent. Harmer

— blue and purple from the sales of Elishah] Blue and purple are elsewhere reckoned among those colours which set off the richest attire, see Exod. xxv 4, Jer. x. 9 They were brought from the islands of the Egean sea, particularly Coos, famed for purple among heathen authors Elishah denotes the countries upon the coast of Greece, a part of Peloponnesus retains the name of Elis W Louth, Bochart explains "Elishah" of Peloponnesus, and Michaelis remarks the resemblance of the name to Hellenes, who he said by Herodotus to have settled in the Peloponnesus Abp Newcome

The Arvadites are mentioned, Gen x 18 It is also called Arvad or Arphad, 2 Kings xviii 34, Is x 9 Jer xlix 23 W Louth The Tyrians were so opulent that they employed the inhabitants of other cities in the servile office of rowers and mariners. Calnet

14 Thou art the anointed cherub that covereth. ] The particle of similitude "like" is understood; the two cherubim of beaten gold were part of the ark, and therefore anointed. Exod xxv 18, 21 xxx 26, the two cherubim covered the mercy seat with their wings. In this lamentation, with beauty, magnificence, splendour and perfection are attributed to the king of Tyre, he likewise bore an exalted and sacred office on these accounts he is compared to one of the angelick orders. *Abp. Afterwards Tyre became more powerful than the mother country, and obtained the sovereignty, both of Zidon and the other cities of Phœnicia. We learn from Josephus, that Zidon rebelled against Tyre, and submitted herself to Shalmaneser. They were however generally partakers of the same fate in prosperity and adversity, and the destruction of Zidon followed close upon that of Tyre. Calmet, W. Louth

to the times of the Gospel, and are to be understood in a spiritual sense Junius. Or, if we follow the literal sense of the words, it is a plain prophecy, either of the comparative safety and happiness which the Jews enjoyed after the seventy years' captivity, (Pool,) or, of the general restoration of the Jews, and their future return into their own land; as will appear by comparing the words with the parallel texts of this Prophet, namely, chap xi 17, xx 38, 41, xxxiv 19, xxxvi 24, xxxvii 12, 14, 21, 25, xxxix 27 Compare Is. lxxv 9, 10, Jer. xxx 18, xxxii 41, in which prediction most of the other Prophets agree with him W. Lowth

Chap. XXIX, ver 1 In the tenth year, in the tenth month, &c.] This and the three following chapters are joined together, because they treat of the same subject, though they consist of prophecies uttered at very different periods of time. The period assigned at the head of this chapter is during the siege of Jerusalem, and, agreeably to ver 6, 7, may be immediately after Pharaoh's retreat, foretold by Jeremiah, chap xxxvii, 7 Abp Newcome.

2 — against Pharaoh] Pharaoh being a common name to all the kings of Egypt, this prince was called Pharaoh-hophra by Jeremiah chap xlv 30 and Apries by Herodotus W Lowth.

3 — the great dragon] The crocodile is alluded to. Bechart remarks, that the word Pharaoh signifies a crocodile in the Arabic tongue. Among the ancients it was a symbol of Egypt, and appears so in Roman coins W Lowth, Michaelis.

— that lieth in the midst of his rivers.] Memphis is thought to have been the residence of the ancient kings of Egypt. There were large lakes to the north and west of Memphis, which made the strength of the place surprising, and Dr Pococke saw some near Altiabenny, which he supposes were these very lakes. Nothing then could be more natural than these words of Ezekiel Hamer. The expression however is to be understood figuratively and, as Pharaoh is intended by the "great dragon," so the power, riches, and forces of his kingdom are denoted by "his rivers." as it follows, "My river is mine own, that is, all the strength and glory of Egypt are mine" Poole

lute. [I have made it for myself.] This vaunting language agrees with what Herodotus relates of Pharaoh-hophra, (see Jer xlv, 30,) or Apries. This is said to have been the persuasion of Apries, that no God was able to deprive him of his kingdom Grolius, Abp Newcome.

4. But I will put hooks in thy jaws, &c.] But I will put the hooks of the king of Babylon into thy jaws, and will drag thee out of those watery forts of thine to the dry land, and for thy princes and people, which are as the lesser sort of fishes, they also, as sticking to thy scales, shall be plucked out with thee Abp Hall. This prophecy may also relate to the unsuccessful expedition of Apries against the Cyrenians W Lowth. To the mutiny of his own people, and to his defeat by Amasis Abp Newcome.

5. — thrown into the wilderness.] This seems to be a plainer allusion to the heavy loss which Apries and his Egyptian army sustained amongst the deserts of Lybia and Cyrene. Apries did not perish there, he was wounded afterwards in his palace Abp Newcome, W Lowth. — upon the shore Calmet.

6 — a staff of reed.] A deceitful and untrusty stay to the house of Israel. Canes or reeds abounded on the banks of the Nile Abp Newcome, W Lowth.

7 When they took hold of thee by thy hand, thou didst break, and rend all their shoulder.] Or their arm. The sharp fragment pierced the arm that leaned on it. The king, who was Zedekiah's confederate, came with a great army to raise the siege of Jerusalem, but durst not venture a battle with the Chaldeans, and in a little time returned into his own country, deserting Zedekiah, whom he had engaged to rebel against Nebuchadnezzar, whereby they became the occasion of his own and his people's ruin, chap xvii 15, Jer xxxvii, 5, 7. W. Lowth.

— and madest all their loins to be at a stand.] Or, "and didst strain all their joints." Abp Newcome.

13 ¶ Yet thus saith the Lord God, At the end of forty years will I gather the Egyptians from the people whither they were scattered:

10 — from the tower of Syene even unto the border of Ethiopia ] From the south border of Egypt unto the north, shall the land be desolate. Bp Hall Others prefer the translation, "from Migdol to Syene even unto the border of Ethiopia." Compare chap xxx 5, 9 Migdol, or Magdolus, was a town near the Red Sea as appears from Exod xiv 2, Num xxxiii 7. It lay therefore towards the north, at the entrance of Egypt from Palestine. And Syene was to the south of Egypt, under the tropick of Cancer, and bordering upon African Ethiopia. Dean Prideaux, W Lenth Abp Newcome

11 — neither shall it be inhabited forty years ] After the total defeat of Apries by the Cyrenians, in which so many Egyptians fell, that the whole nation was enraged against their king a civil war with Amasis followed, after that a conquest and desolation of Egypt by Nebuchadnezzar, and another conquest of it by Cyrus. We learn from this passage, during what period of years Egypt was laid waste, and in a manner deserted. Abp Newcome, W Lenth Amasis reigned forty four years according to Herodotus. The forty years of desolation must have ended in the time of Cyrus, who probably permitted the Egyptian captives to return. Calmet

12 — I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations ] Some of them shall flee for refuge into foreign countries, and some shall be carried captive by the Babylonians. Compare Jer xvi 19 W Lenth

We cannot prove from heathen authors that this desolation of the country continued exactly forty years, though it is likely enough that this, as well as the other conquered countries, did not shake off the Babylonian yoke till the time of Cyrus but we are assured by Berosus, that Nebuchadnezzar took several captives in Egypt, and carried them to Babylon, and from Megasthenes we learn, that he transplanted and settled others in Pontus. So true it is that they were "scattered among the nations, and dispersed through the countries, and might, upon the dissolution of the Babylonian empire, return to their native country. Bp Newton

14 — into the land of Pathros ] That part of Egypt which is called Thebais, as Bochart proves by several arguments. W Lenth

It shall be the basest of the kingdoms ] And, as it follows in the next chapter, "there shall be no more a prince of the land of Egypt, ver 13 It is now a great deal above two thousand years since this prophecy was first delivered, and what likelihood or appearance was there, that the Egyptians should for so many ages

17 ¶ And it came to pass in the seven and twentieth year, in the first month, in the first day of the month, the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, how under a foreign yoke, and never in all that time be able to recover their liberties, and have a prince of their own to reign over them? Bp Newton In Egypt the human mind had made some of its earliest and most auspicious efforts. It was long the general opinion, that there the laws of society had been discovered, and the fountains of science opened. Undoubtedly that ingenious people were very early distinguished by an ardent spirit of enterprise, and a peculiar brightness of invention. The stupendous monuments of art, which he scattered over the banks of the Nile, attest the vastness of their designs, and the extent of their power. The earliest professors of literature, and the first founders of civil polity, in Europe, and in the more western provinces of Asia, travelled into Egypt, and there acquired a knowledge of the fundamental principles of science and government. Egypt was possessed likewise of natural advantages, which could seldom fail. Its situation was singularly calculated to defend it against the attacks of foreign invaders, whilst its uncommon fruitfulness promised to secure the country, which it enriched, from poverty, baseness, and subjection. Yet after a long course of grandeur and in contradiction to its natural advantages, Ezekiel pronounced that "the kingdom should be the basest of kingdoms, and that there should be no more a prince of the land of Egypt." Richards As is the prophecy, so is the event. For not long afterwards Egypt was conquered by the Babylonians, and after the Babylonians, by the Persians, and after the Persians, it became subject to the Macedonians, and after the Macedonians, to the Romans, and after the Romans, to the Saracens, and then to the Mamelucks; and is now a province of the Ottoman empire. Bp Newton

16 — which bringeth their iniquity to remembrance ] Causing God to punish the iniquity of His people. Abp Newcome God never forgets, but when He visits, punishes and judges a nation for their sin, then their sin is said to come up into remembrance. Field

17 — in the seven and twentieth year ] See the note on ver 1. — to serve a great service ] The siege lasted thirteen years. The heads of the soldiers were made bald by the helmet, by disease, and by labour, and their shoulders galled by carrying earth to raise mounts and fortifications against it. W Lenth, Bp Hall

shaken by the battering of the sea, whatsoever precious things in gold, silver, clothes, and various kinds of furniture, the nobility had, they put them on board their ships, and carried them to the islands, so that the city being taken, Nebuchadrezzar found nothing worthy of his labour. Bp Newton

20 — because they wrought for me.] The destruction of cities and countries is a work of God's providence, for the effecting of which He makes use of kings and princes as His instruments. Upon this account He calls Nebuchadrezzar His servant, Jer xxv 9 because "he wrought for Him," as it is here expressed, that he executed His judgments upon Tyre, and the other cities and countries which God delivered into his hand. W Louth.

21 — the horn of the house of Israel to bud forth.] The enlargement of Ichaiakim may be referred to. See 2 Kings xxv 27 Or, Zerubbabel, who was born at Babylon, of the house of David. Daniel was also advanced to authority, Dan ii 48, 49. These marks of favour bestowed upon the Jews were preludes to their general restoration. * 8 9 — I have set thee a watchman &c.] See chap iii, 17, 18, 19.

10 — If our transgressions — be upon us, and we pine away &c.] If according to thy prophecies God has determined to reckon with us for our sins, and to bring judgment upon us, to what purpose shall our conversion be? and how shall we live, though we do amend? Bp Hall They are the words of persons despairing of God's mercy, and from thence taking occasion to go on in their sins. See a like instance Jer ii 25 W Lowth.

11 — As I live, saith the Lord God, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked &c.] We have here one of the most express declarations to be found in the whole Scripture, of the infinite mercy of God. God swears by Himself, that He would not by any means the death of the wicked, that He desires nothing but their conversion and life, and receives them graciously as soon as they return to Him. The consideration of God's great mercy should fill sinners with confidence, and engage them to repent, and thereby prevent their ruin. Ostervald.

These are most comfortable words for now we may be sure, that when we will leave our sins and wickedness, and turn unto Him with all our hearts earnestly, then He will turn Himself unto us, and will shew Himself a loving Father. And to the intent we should believe this, He sweareth an oath we ought to believe. God without an oath, yet He sweareth, to make us more sure. Bp Latimer.

God declares Himself to bear an universal good will to mankind, that He doth earnestly desire the welfare of all men, and is displeased with the ruin of any man. Thus He affirms, and for the confirmation of our faith, and our consolation therein, He swears it. As I live, saith the Lord God, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but that the wicked turn from his way and live. See also Is x 4 Hos xiii 9, Is lxi 2, Rom x 21, Jer vii 31, Prov i 4 29 Is lxi 12, lxi 4, i 18, Jer vi 10, Zech vii 11 &c. Which passages, and many others of the like importance that occur, do imply the large extent of God's merciful intentions, and the competency of the means, which God affords for the salvation of men, that He wants no affection or inclination to save them, that He neglects no means proper for effecting it, that He draws them into the way leading thither by serious and earnest invitation, directs them by medicinal light and instruction, excites them by powerful arguments and persuasions, and, as St. Ambrose speaketh, that "God hath shewed to all, that what was in Him, He did will to deliver or save all men." Whence He may truly and properly be called the Benefactor and Saviour even of those, who by their wilful malice or neglect do not obtain salvation. Dr Isaac Barrow.

13 — if he trust to his own righteousness,] If he rely upon the good works that he hath done, and think the worth of them will overbalance his evil deeds. This seems to be the persuasion of the latter Jews, who lay this down for a certain rule in their Mishna, that all Israel hath a share in the world to come. The Mahometans think the same respecting themselves. Reland, W Lowth.

14 — when I say unto the wicked, Thou shalt surely die &c.] In the whole course of Scripture God's threatenings, and so His promises too, have ever a condition annexed to them in God's purpose, which though it be not ever, indeed but seldom, expressed, yet is it ever included, and so to be understood. All God's promises, how absolutely soever expressed, are made on condition of obedience, and all His threatenings how absolutely soever expressed, on condition of repentance. This is plain from the passage before us, where Almighty God clearly teaches us, that we ought so to conceive of all His threatenings, be they never so peremptorily set down, (as what more peremptory than this, "Thou shalt surely die?") as that He may reserve to Himself a power of revocation, in case the parties threatened repent. Bp Sanderson.

15 — give again that he had robbed,] The law was express to this purpose, Lev. xix 16, where the offender is required to add a fifth part to the principal, and give it to him to whom it appertaineth. W Lowth.

3 Ye eat the fat, and ye clothe you with the wool, ye kill them that are fed but ye feed not the flock.

4 The diseased have ye not strengthened, neither have ye healed that which was sick, neither have ye bound up that which was broken, neither have ye brought again that which was driven away, neither have ye sought that which was lost; but with force and with cruelty have ye ruled them then sentiments are enlivened agreeable emotions of various kinds are excited. So the hearer is pleased, the speaker is commended and followed, but with no thought of practising one word that he hath said. This is the turn of mind so admirably described many ages ago by the Prophet Ezekiel in this passage. But religious instruction could never be appointed to give such empty, insignificant delight as this nor doth it in the least attain its proper end, unless it influences men to forget the preacher, and think of themselves unless it raises in them, not a superficial complacency, or middle admiration, but an awful and a durable solicitude about their eternal welfare. Abp Secker

3 And when this cometh to pass,] This matter, this event, the destruction of Jerusalem. Abp Newcome

— (lo it will come,) ] Or rather "lo it is come chap vii 26 10, the verb being in the present tense. When you see my prophecies concerning the destruction of Jerusalem actually brought to pass, as it appears they are at this time, see ver 21, then you will be convinced of the truth of my mission, and of your own inexcusable crime in despising my predictions, see chap xxiv 27. W Lenth

Chap XXXIV ver 1 — came unto me,] It is probable that the prophecy immediately followed the preceding. At or before the news that Jerusalem was conquered, the Prophet was to speak of the crime, and carelessness of the governors, and to promise the return of the people. Michaelis The negligence of the governor being pointed out as a cause of the incredulity of the people the transition here is natural and the connexion close between this prophecy and the foregoing one, as also between the beginning of the prophecy and its conclusion. For considering that in part the people suffered for the faults of their shepherds, mercy now urged the Prophet to declare from God, that He would judge between them save the flock and set up one Shepherd over them who should feed him even His servant David. Abp Newcome

12 — in the cloudy and dark day] Clouds mark seasons of misery, persecution, and trouble, see Joel ii 2, Zeph i 15. Wolves profit by mists and darkness to plunder and devour the flock. Calmet

13 And I will bring them out from the people,] I will fetch them from those several lands, whither they were driven by their miserable captivity, and will bring them back into their own country, and will feed them carefully and plentifully in My Church. So also the three following verses. Bp Hall

16 I will seek that which was lost,] The Messiah, whom I will set over them see ver 23, shall faithfully discharge all the offices of a shepherd towards them, which their former pastors have neglected, ver 1. W Lenth

— but I will destroy the fat and the strong] Meaning, I will destroy those cruel shepherds who abuse their authority and domineer over the weak. Calmet, W Lenth

17 — between cattle and cattle,] Behold, I judge between one man and another, between the lambs and kids, between the rams and goats: as I do now put a difference between those of My own flock and the world, so hereafter I will exquisitely sever them, the one to My right hand, the other to My left. Bp Hall

18 Seemeth it a small thing unto you to have eaten up the good pasture, &c.] Is it not very great cruelty and most barbarous inhumanity, that you, who have much more than others, partly by the bounty of the Lord of the sheep, and partly by your injustice and rapine, should eat the sweet and better parts of the pasture, and waste and spoil what you cannot eat? Thus the people are starved by your wantonness and oppression, or compelled to live on unwholesome and noxious food. Psalm

23 — one shepherd over them, — even my servant David] Jesus Christ the true Shepherd, to whom the title of David is given by the Prophets, and attributed by Himself in the Gospel, and who has fulfilled all the duties, after having faithfully described all the characters of the office. The Scriptures call this Shepherd David, because He was born of David after the flesh and possessed in reality, and eminently, all those qualities which the Scriptures give to David, under the figure of the Messiah. Calmet Bp Hall

— he shall feed them and he shall be their shepherd] This prophecy was remarkably fulfilled, when Christ by the preaching of the Gospel gathered in unto the children of God that were scattered abroad. John xi 52. 1 Peter i 10, among whom were many “of the lost sheep of the house of Israel.” But it will receive a further completion at the general conversion of the Jews, when the time will come, that they shall say, “Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord.” Matt xxiii 39 and this signal event will usher in, or complete the fulfils of the Gentiles, see Rom xi 12, 15, 25 32. W Lenth

24 — and my servant David a prince among them] The Messiah; the true heir and successor of David. Bp Hall

25 — the evil beasts to cease] And I will keep them from those spiritual dangers that may be hurtful to them: see ver 8 of this chapter. Calmet The words may be meant of freedom from persecution by infidels and strangers. W Lenth

26 And I will make them &c. — a blessing.] I will therefore give remarkable instances of My favour, and the happiness which accompanies it, see Gen xii 2, Is xix 24. God’s hill is the same with His “holy mountain.” Chap xx 40. Bp Hall

The most sensible interpreters seem to agree that there are several expressions in this chapter particularly in the latter part of it, which cannot be literally understood of any event excepting of the reign of the Messiah, of the freedom that He has procured for His Church, of another promised land and of a chosen people, different from that of the Jews, but at the same time that there may be recognised in it certain forms of speech, which have had their literal accomplishment, since the return of the Jews from the captivity. — and the heathen shall know that I am the Lord,] The return of the Jew from the Babylonish captivity was taken notice of by the heathens as a signal instance of God's providence towards them. Calmet and then general conversion will be a much more remarkable proof of My fulfilling the promises made to their fathers, so that the heathens themselves will be forced to take notice of it chap xxxiii 28 Bp Lomth

25 — Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you and ye shall be clean] Allusion is here made to the purifications which were effected in the Jewish Church, by sprinkling pure water upon persons under legal pollution, these were types of baptism, and of that penitence which cleanses us from our sins, through the blood of Jesus Christ, and by the invisible aspersion of His Holy Spirit and grace. It is only therefore in the general establishment of the Church of God, that the real and perfect accomplishment of this prophecy can come to pass. St Paul may probably allude to this text when he exhorts the Hebrew converts "to draw near to God, having their hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience and their bodies washed with pure water." Calmet, H Lomth

26 — the stony heart out of your flesh,] I will take away your perverse and rebellious disposition. I will give you a tenderness of heart, and an aptness to be wrought upon by the motions of My Spirit. Bp Hall Certain it is, that the Jews gave much less occasion for reproach after their return from captivity, more particularly upon the subject of idolatry, and of those other disorders with which they had been reproached by the Prophets, than before that event took place, but their conduct even then was far from being such as to resemble that picture of perfection, of purity, of docility, and of justice, which is described here, and in other places of the Prophets. It is Christianity alone which removes the heart of stone, and supplies the heart of flesh. Calmet

Come from the four winds, O breath, and breathe upon these slain, that they may live

10 So I prophesied as he commanded me, and the breath came into them, and they lived, and stood up upon their feet, in exceeding great army

11 ¶ Then he said unto me, Son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel: behold, they say, Our bones are dried, and our hope is lost: we are cut off for our parts

12 Therefore prophesy and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, O my people, I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel

13 And ye shall know that I am the Lord, when I have opened your graves, O my people, and brought you up out of your graves,

14 And shall put my spirit in you, and ye shall live, and I shall place you in your own land: then shall ye know that I the Lord have spoken it, and performed it, saith the Lord

15 ¶ The word of the Lord came again unto me, saying,

16 Moreover, thou son of man, take thee one stick, and write upon it, For Judah,

9 — Come from the four winds, O breath,] The words figuratively represent the restoration of the Jewish nation from the several countries, whither they were dispersed, over the whole world, expressed by their being scattered towards all winds, chap. x. 10. and 14. W Lowth

11 — these bones are the whole house of Israel] The state of death and dryness of dispersion and abandonment, in which you see them marks the captivity to which they are reduced. I will draw them from that state. Calmet

1 — your graves] Alluding to their being buried, as it were, in the land of their captivity. The Jews seemed as absolutely deprived of their own country, as persons committed to the grave are cut off from the land of the living. The foregoing similitude shows in a beautiful manner that God, who could raise the dead, had power to restore them. Abp Newcome

The Jews in the state of their dispersion and captivity, are called the dead skeletons in Balaam, chap. iii. 4. And their restoration is described as a resurrection by Isaiah, chap. xxvi. 19. at which time 'their bones' are said to 'flourish' or to be restored to their former strength and vigour, in the same Prophet, chap. lxx. 11. In like manner St Paul expresses their conversion by 'life from the dead,' Rom. xi. 15. W Lowth

10 — take thee one stick and write upon it,] That is, one rod. The expression alludes to Num. xvii. 2. where Moses is commanded to take twelve rods, one for each tribe, and to write the name of the tribe upon the rod. W Lowth — For Judah and for the children of Israel his companions] When he came to the head of his companions, withdrew from the children to the house of David, the tribes of Benjamin, Judah, and Levi still adhered to the government of Rehoboam. Besides these three tribes many Israelites from the other tribes joined themselves to the same party, as appears from 2 Chron. xi. 12—16, xx. 9. xxx. 11. 18. Hence the expression, 'for Judah, and for the children of Israel his companions.' Calmet

18 ¶ And when the children of thy people shall speak unto thee, saying, Wilt thou not shew us what thou meanest by these?

19 Say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the tribes of Israel his fellows, and will put them with him, even with the stick of Judah, and make them one stick, and they shall be one in mine hand

20 ¶ And the sticks whereon thou writest shall be in mine hand before their eyes

21 And say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen, whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land

22 And I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel, and one king shall be king to them all. <sup>a</sup> John 10. 16 and they shall be no more two nations,

Reuben's forfeiting his birthright, that privilege was conferred upon the sons of Joseph, of whom Ephraim had the precedence. 1 Chron. v. 1, Gen. xlviii. 20, which caused him to be reckoned the head of the ten tribes. Samaria, the seat of that kingdom, was likewise situated in the tribe of Ephraim, and Jeroboam their first king was an Ephraimite. Upon these accounts the name of Ephraim signifies in the Prophets the whole kingdom of Israel as distinct from that of Judah. W Lowth The union of the two sticks may be supposed to signify in a more extended sense the assembling, not only of the Jews of all the tribes, but also of the people of all nations in the Church of Christ. Calmet

19 — which is in the hand of Ephraim,] Which is wielded as a sceptre in the hand of Ephraim, and of the other nine tribes of Israel the companions of their chief tribe Ephraim. Abp Newcome

— they shall be one in mine hand] I will make them one nation and appoint one King to rule over them, the Messiah, see ver. 22. W Lowth

This prophecy was fulfilled very imperfectly in the persons of the Jews after the captivity: both because neither the tribe of Judah, nor the other tribes, returned entire, and because they were not governed by kings of the family of David. Calmet

22 — And I will make them one nation &c.] And I will bring My Church all the world over into one and one King, even the Messiah, whom I shall send shall be King to them all, and they shall no more be so divided in profession, as if they were different kingdoms ruled by divers sovereigns, but in the main substance of religion shall be one. Bp Hall — and one king shall be king to them all] The Messiah is described as King of the Jews in most of the prophecies of the Old Testament, beginning with that of Genesis, chap. xlix. 10. concerning Shaloh. From David's time He is commonly spoken of as the Person in whom the promises relating to the perpetuity of David's kingdom were to be accomplished. This was a truth unanimously owned by the Jews, see John 1. 49, to which our

24 And David my servant shall be king over them, and they all shall have one shepherd: they shall also walk in my judgments, and observe my statutes, and do them.

25 And they shall dwell in the land that I have given unto Jacob my servant, wherein your fathers have dwelt, and they shall dwell therein, even they, and their children, and their children's children for ever: and my servant David shall be their prince for ever.

1 The army, 8 and malice of Gog. 11 God's judgment against him.

AND the word of the Lord came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, set thy face against Gog, the land of Magog, the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal, and prophesy against him,

3 And say, Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I am against thee, O Gog, the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal.

4 And I will turn thee back, and put hooks into thy jaws, and I will bring thee forth, and all thine army, horses and horsemen, all of them clothed with all sorts of armour, even a great company with bucklers and shields, all of them handling swords.

that the whole prophecy received its completion in the Jewish Church in the times succeeding the Babylonish captivity: that by Gog is designed Antiochus Epiphanes, and that the deliverances predicted to the Church are those which occurred in the times of the Maccabees. On the other hand, it is believed that the prophecy is to be referred to some period of the Christian Church, either past, or yet to come, that by Gog are either represented generally the enemies of the Christian Church, who have been discomfited by the superintending providence of God, or some particular enemies, who were to arise at some future period either of the conversion of the Jews to Christianity, or of some suppose, of their restoration to their own land, or of others maintain, of a second advent of the Messiah to reign personally on earth. Amidst this great variety of opinions on a subject of so great difficulty and obscurity, it is best to maintain a cautious reserve in forming a decision, and to wait for that clearer light which Providence may hereafter vouchsafe to us in the full development of the whole scheme of Scriptural prophecy. Pott's Syn. Crit.

The other Prophets speak of some future enemy of the Jews and the Church under a similar description. But in what manner this magnificent prophecy is to receive its completion time only can explain. Dr Gray

— the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal. The king or head of those northern nations which lie upon the Euxine sea, and border upon mount Caucasus. See note on chap. xxvii. 13. H. Lenth

4 — and put hooks into thy jaws. See chap. xxix. 1. It is an allusion to the manner of taking the crocodile. See Bp Lowth's note on Is. xxxvii. 29. I will disappoint all thy designs. H. Lenth

— and I will bring thee forth. The sense would be plainer if the words were thus translated "after I have brought thee forth, &c.", in which sense the copulative here translated "and" is sometimes used. W. Lenth

5 Persia, Ethiopia, and Libya. Their allies, Ethiopia and Libya are called Cush and Phut in the Hebrew, and are joined together as allies, chap. xxx. 5. Persians are joined in like manner with Africans, chap. xxvii. 10. W. Lenth

Saviour bore testimony before Pontius Pilate when the question being put to him, "Art thou a king?" He made answer, "Thou sayest, (the truth,) that I am a King." St Paul, alluding to these words, calls them "a good confession," 1 Tim. vi. 13. The same truth Pontius Pilate himself asserted in that inscription, which by the direction of Providence he ordered to be written upon the cross, see John xix. 19, so that the chief priests impiously renounced their own avowed principles, when they told Pilate that they had no king but Cæsar. W. Lenth

23 — and will set my sanctuary in the midst of them &c. I will set My Church in the midst of them, which shall continue to the end of the world, and I will dwell in their hearts as in My temple for ever. Bp Hall

24 — and will set my sanctuary in the midst of them &c. I will set My Church in the midst of them, which shall continue to the end of the world, and I will dwell in their hearts as in My temple for ever. Bp Hall

If we understand "for evermore" in a limited sense and the condition of obedience implied, the rebuilding of the temple may be in the first instance foretold. At the final restoration of the Jews God will place His tabernacle and sanctuary among them in a larger sense. Abp Newcome

28 And the heathen shall know. The conversion of the Jewish nation, and their being restored to their former state of favour and acceptance with God, will be a work of Providence taken notice of by the heathens themselves, who shall join themselves to the Jews, as the Church of God and temple of truth. see chap. xxxvi. 23. W. Lenth

Chap. XXXVIII, ver. 2 — with thy face against Gog, the land of Magog. One of the land of Magog. Magog is reckoned among the sons of Japhet. see Gen. x. 2. and Ezekiel here uses Magog as the country of which Gog was prince. W. Lenth, Abp Newcome

It has been the subject of much discussion amongst the learned, what is the meaning of this remarkable prophecy, who is designed under the name of Gog, and to what period of history the fulfilment of it belongs. On the one hand it has been thought,

Before CHRIST about 87 them, all of them with shield and helmet

14 ¶ Therefore, son of man, prophesy and say unto Gog, Thus saith the Lord God, In that day when my people of Israel dwelleth safely, shalt thou not know it?

16 And thou shalt come up against my people of Israel, as a cloud to cover the land, it shall be in the latter days, and I will bring thee against my land, that the heathen may know me, when I shall be sanctified in thee, O Gog before their eyes

17 Thus saith the Lord God, Art thou he of whom I have spoken in old time by my servants the prophets of Israel, which prophesied in those days many years that I would bring thee against them?

Chap XL. The following obscure vision of Ezekiel is generally supposed to contain the description of a temple, corresponding in its structure and dimensions with that of Solomon. The Prophet, by presenting to the captives this delineation of what had been "the desire of their eyes," reminded them of the loss which they had suffered from their unrighteousness, and furnished them with a model, upon which the temple might rise again from its ruins, as it did, with less magnificence indeed, in the time of Zerubbabel. Under the particulars detailed by Ezekiel, however, we often discover the economy of a spiritual temple, which should again be filled with "the glory of the Lord coming from the east," see chap xlii 2, 4. Dr Gray

This concluding vision of a new city and temple was shown to Ezekiel at the close of his ministry for the consolation of his brethren who were then commemorating by the waters of Babylon with sighs and tears the fate of their former city and temple with all its glory, which had that day been extinguished just fourteen years. The restoration of the temple and its service, here circumstantially insisted on, was well calculated to raise their drooping spirits, and renew their trust and confidence in the God of their fathers, and that the rather in their present situation, as they would then naturally reflect all those benefits to themselves in their own persons, and expect that they were to be the immediate consequence of a redemption from the captivity they then laboured under. But the Spirit of God, as in other prophecies on the same occasion, looked to a period beyond that event; which then became evident when the Jews were restored to their land, and the second temple was completed. For neither the extent and magnificence of the building, nor the privileges and ministry of that temple, did by any means correspond to this representation, and, in the glory of the Divine presence, it was entirely deficient, whereas the Prophet here tells us "The Spirit took me, and brought me into the inner court, and behold the glory of the LORD filled the house." He adds further, "And I heard Him speaking unto me out of the temple, and He said unto me, The place of My throne, and the place of the soles of My feet, where I will dwell in the midst of the children of Israel for ever, chap xlii 1-7, which last circumstance of perpetual duration could not belong to any temple under the Jewish economy, but is the peculiar attribute of that nobler dispensation to which it led. Such an interpretation of this mystical vision is agreeable to the usage of the Prophets, who speak of the future dispensation under the

3 And he brought me thither, and, behold, there was a man, whose appearance was like the appearance of brass, with a line of flax in his hand, and a measuring reed, and he stood in the gate.

4 And the man said unto me, Son of man, behold with thine eyes, and hear with thine ears, and set thine heart upon all that I shall shew thee; for in the intent that I might shew them unto thee art thou brought hither declare all that thou seest to the house of Israel.

At the conclusion of this very vision we are told, that the name of the city should be, "The Lord is there," chap. xliii 35 a name of the same import with that given by Jeremiah to the city of Christ, "The Lord our righteousness," Jer xxxiii 16. The whole vision, whatever difficulties there may be in the explication of particular parts, must be considered as a mystical representation of the Messiah's government. On this general application that there should still be partial difficulties, is exactly what ought to be expected, neither will those difficulties entirely vanish till the whole scheme is completed, for the true and accurate interpretation of all prophecy is only to be had from the accomplishment Bp. The temple itself is called the inner house, chap xli 15, xlii 15 to distinguish it from the outer court and precincts thereof. The body of the bullock whose blood was to sanctify the altar was to be burnt without the camp by order of the law. Exod xxix 11. W. Louth Calmet

Ptolemy Philopator in vain endeavored to penetrate to the holy place, he found the Jews determined to die rather than to permit him. Heliodorus entered to see the treasure, but he was punished by the hand of angels. Antiochus Epiphanes and Pompey penetrated to the holy of holies, but they effected it by a violence which it was impossible for the priests to resist, and nothing upon these occasions appeared more mournful, or more distressing to the Jews than that the doors which they held most sacred should have been discovered and laid open to the Gentile. Calmel

— an oblation unto the Lord.] The portion of the Lord is here called an oblation, because it was a sort of firstfruits of the land on itself W Lenth, Abp Newcome

— five and twenty thousand reeds.] The Hebrew doth not express either reeds or cubits but many interpreters expound the place of cubits considering this to be the more probable measure and concluding cubits to be here meant from the circumstance of their being used in the measurement of the temple in the next verse Bp Lenth Calmet, Michaelis

4 — a place for their houses.] The houses were for the priests of the four and twenty courses, who were not in their course of waiting W Lenth

The Levites were very numerous, in the time of David they were reckoned thirty-eight thousand and therefore a large piece of ground is allotted to them, as belonged to the temple and the whole priestly order W Lenth

— twenty shekels, five and twenty shekels, fifteen shekels, shall be your maneh ] The amount of the three is sixty shekels, which made a maneh or unit about thirty ounces of silver. We may well suppose that three of the usual current coins among the Jews answered to the three numbers of shekels here mentioned. Abp Newcome W Lenth But we learn from Sir John Chardin, that it was still the custom of the East in reckoning a sum of money, to specify the different parts of which it is composed. Harmer

CHAP. XLVI

1 Ordinances for the prince in his worship, 9 and for the people 16 An order for the prince's inheritance 19 The courts for boiling and baking

THUS saith the Lord God, The gate of the inner court that looketh toward the east shall be shut the six working days, but on the sabbath it shall be opened, and in the day of the new moon it shall be opened

2 And the prince shall enter by the way of the porch of that gate without, and shall stand by the post of the gate, and the priests shall prepare his burnt offering and his peace offerings, and he shall worship at the threshold of the gate then he shall go forth, but the gate shall not be shut until the evening

3 Likewise the people of the land shall worship at the door of this gate before the Lord in the sabbaths and in the new moons.

4 And the burnt offering that the prince shall offer unto the Lord in the sabbath day shall be six lambs without blemish, and a ram without blemish

5 And the meat offering shall be an ephah for a ram, and the meat offering for the lambs <sup>1/2</sup> as he shall be able to give, and an hin of oil to an ephah

8 And when the prince shall enter, he shall go in by the way of the porch of that gate, and he shall go forth by the way thereof

9 ¶ But when the people of the land shall come before the Lord in the solemn feasts, he that entereth in by the way of the north gate to worship shall go out by the way of the south gate, and he that entereth by the way of the south gate shall go forth by the way of the north gate he shall not return by the way of the gate whereby he came in, but shall go forth over against it

12 Now when the prince shall prepare a voluntary burnt offering or peace offerings voluntarily unto the Lord, one shall then open him the gate that looketh toward the east, and he shall prepare his burnt offering and his peace offerings, as he did on the sabbath day then he shall go forth, and after his going forth one shall shut the gate

17 But if he give a gift of his inheritance to one of his servants, then it shall be his to the year of liberty, after it shall return to the prince but his inheritance shall be his sons' for them.

18 Moreover the prince shall not take of the people's inheritance by oppression, to thrust them out of their possession, but he shall give his sons inheritance out of his own possession that my people be not scattered every man from his possession.

19 ¶ After he brought me through the entry, which was at the side of the gate, into the holy chambers of the priests, which looked toward the north and, behold, there was a place on the two sides westward.

20 Then said he unto me, This is the place where the priests shall boil the trespass offering and the sin offering, where they shall bake the meat offering; that they bear them not out into the utter court, to sanctify the people.

the sacrifices which they offered, this was conveyed in pipes under ground from the fountain Etam. These waters gave occasion to the vision here related. Dr Lightfoot, W Louth

The progressive establishment of the Messiah's kingdom is declared by some of the later Prophets under the most striking and lively representations. In Nebuchadnezzar's dream, related by the Prophet Daniel, and by him expounded of successive kingdoms, that last kingdom set up by the God of heaven was at first no more than "a stone," but "it became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth," Dan ii. 34, 35. In other prophecies, the gradual increase of this new dispensation is beautifully represented by the growth of a tender plant. See Ezek xvii 22, 23. And here again the several steps of this growth are pointed out to us by the same Prophet Ezekiel, under the image of a stream receiving continual accessions in its progress. The waters were at first extremely shallow, reaching only "to the ankles." At the next ford they came up "to the knees," afterwards "to the loins," and at last they were risen to a great height, "waters to swim in, a river that could not be passed over" see verses 3, 4, 5. The increasing blessings of the Messiah's kingdom are wont to be expressed under the figure of waters in prophetic language see Is. xxxv 6, 7 and elsewhere the same figure is used with a peculiar resemblance to this place, see Joel iii 18. Such a sense also best suits that healing and beneficial influence attributed to these so called waters, which are said to have power to "heal the waters of the sea," and to give life wherever they flow; "every thing shall live whithersoever the river cometh." And of the trees nourished by this stream it is said, that "their leaf should not fade nor their fruit be consumed, but their fruit should be for meat, and their leaf for medicine," verses 8—12. Bp Bagot

8 — the waters shall be healed ] This finely represents the tendency of the Gospel to heal the corruptions of human nature Abp. Newcome

10 — the mention of fishers does indeed appear to determine this great feast of religious knowledge and practice to Christianity. Our Saviour Christ told His disciples, that He would make them "fishers of men," Matt iv 19 Abp. Secker, W. Lowth

The allegorical sense is, that some shall reject the Gospel, and some receive it without obeying it. Abp. Newcome. 13 — This shall be the border. ] This allotment, and that which follows in the next chapter, would probably have taken place, if the whole of the ten tribes, as well as those of Judah and Benjamin, had turned themselves to God, for by this means they also would have obtained permission to return but since a few only belonging to the other tribes returned, and were confounded with those of Judah and Benjamin, they obtained settlements in common with them. Grotius. But there is without question a mystical sense implied under this literal description. W. Lowth

— Joseph shall have two portions. ] See Gen xlviii 5, 1 Chron v 1

14 — one as well as another. ] Under Joshua the lots were proportioned to the numbers in each tribe. This mysterious equality shews perhaps, that in the Church of Christ there should be no distinction betwixt the few and the Gentile. Calmet

15 — Hethlon. ] Mentioned again chap xlviii 1. De I Isle writes it Hethalon, and places it between Tyre and Damascus. Abp. Newcome, W. Lowth. Zedad is written Sedada in De I Isle and placed east of Hethlon, nearly in the same latitude. The northern border of the land was to begin from the west point on which side lay the Mediterranean sea, and so on northward towards Hethlon, and so on forward to Zedad, mentioned Numh xxxiv 8. *W. 31 And the gates of the city shall be after the names of the tribes of Israel three gates northward, one gate of Reuben, one gate of Judah, one gate of Levi

32 And at the east side four thousand and five hundred and three gates, and one gate of Joseph, one gate of Benjamin, one gate of Dan

33 And at the south side four thousand and five hundred measures and three gates, one gate of Simeon, one gate of Issachar, one gate of Zebulun

34 At the west side four thousand and five hundred, with their three gates, one gate of Gad, one gate of Asher, one gate of Naphtali

35 It was round about eighteen thousand measures and the name of the city from that day shall be, † The Lord is there <sup>† Heb</sup>

The sense of the verse is, that the possession belonging to the priests and Levites, (see ver 11,) and the city, were bounded on the east and west by the prince's portion, that the former lay in the middle, the latter beyond them W Louth

25 — [Issachar] These appointments are not laid out with any regard to the division of the land made in Joshua's time for here a platform of a new church and state is set forth W Louth

28 — [from Tamar] See note on chap xlvii 19

29 — [for inheritance.] Since there is no doubt but that other things which are said in these chapters relating to the temple, and the land of Israel, are of a prophetic nature, it seems safer to determine that the above-mentioned measures were observed both in building the temple and in assigning the lots to the tribes, though we know not how these things were done, because there is a great chasm in the sacred history, from the time of Ezra to that of the Maccabees Houbigant

It is the opinion of some learned men, that so particular a description of the several portions allotted to each tribe, relates to the Jewish settlement in their own country after their conversion, several passages in the Prophets looking that way But without laying too great stress upon that opinion we may fairly suppose some mystical sense contained under this description the twelve tribes denote the true Christian Church in the New Testament, see Luke xxii 30 So this division of the land among the twelve tribes may imply, that all true Christians shall be equally sharers in the privileges of the Gospel W Louth

30 — [on the north side.] See ver 16, where the same measures are set forth There were three gates in the face of each wall, and the whole circuit of the city was eighteen thousand cubit Culmet

32 — [one gate of Joseph.] There being a gate named after Levi, the gate of Joseph includes Ephraim and Manasse the sons of Joseph Abp Newcome

35 — [The Lord is there] It is frequently said in the sacred writings, that a person or a thing shall be called by a certain name, where it is predicted that the person or thing shall be endowed with those qualities which the name imports When Isaiah predicts the coming of the Messiah he says, that 'His name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The Father, The Prince of Peace,' because He was to possess the qualities which would serve as a foundation to these titles In the same sense Jerusalem is called in the Psalms, the "city of God, the city of the Great King," and in Isaiah "The city of righteousness the faithful city, and in this passage, The Lord is there Culmet

In this new Jerusalem, the Church of Christ God shall dwell in a more glorious manner, and make it the place of His perpetual residence so that every part of that city shall be honoured with evident tokens of the Divine presence and every member of it being dedicated to God's service, and becoming an habitation of God through His Spirit, shall have some degree of the holiness of the temple where God had placed His name, 1 Kings viii 29 compared with Rev xxi 22 This is in a lower degree fulfilled in all good Christians who are called the temple of the living God 2 Cor vi 16, 1 Pet ii 5 and in habitation of God through the Spirit, Eph ii 22 W Louth

DANIEL was of the tribe of Judah, and of very illustrious, if not of royal, descent. Josephus says, he was of the family of Zedekiah the last king of Judah before the destruction of Jerusalem by Nebuzar-adan. He was carried away captive to Babylon in the fourth year of Jehoiakim, in the year of the world 3398, probably in the eighteenth or twentieth year of his age, and on account of his birth wisdom and accomplishments, was selected to stand in the presence of Nebuchadnezzar.

Daniel's strength and habits of mind were of a very superior cast, whether considered as the gifts of nature, or the acquisitions of well applied industry. 'An excellent spirit was in him, which directed him to cultivate and improve all the proper means of knowledge, so that he became master of all the literature of the Chaldeans, and was far superior to all the Magi, or wise men of the East. He was not only renowned for secular wisdom, but favoured with Divine illuminations, had extraordinary insight into visions, and discernment in the interpretation of dreams. Qualified with these abilities, he was admitted to the special favour of several very powerful monarchs, of Nebuchadnezzar, Belshazzar, Darius and Cyrus, and hence he is supposed to have resided not only in the court at Babylon, but occasionally also in those of Media and Persia. Wentli

In the vicissitudes of his life, as in the virtues which he displayed, he has been thought to have resembled Joseph. Like him he lived amidst the corruption of a great court, and preserved an unshaken attachment to his religion in a situation embarrassed with difficulties, and surrounded by temptations. He publicly professed God's service, in defiance of every danger, and predicted His fearful judgments to the very face of intemperate and powerful tyrants. It may be collected from the pensive cast of his writings, that he was of that melancholy disposition which might be expected to characterize the servants of the true God amidst scenes of idolatry. He experienced throughout his life very signal and miraculous proofs of Divine favour, and was looked up to by the Persians, as well as by his own countrymen, as an oracle of inspired wisdom. He appears to have attained a great age, as he prophesied during the whole period of the captivity. He probably however did not long survive his last vision concerning the succession of the kings of Persia, which he beheld in the third year of Cyrus, and in the year of the world 3470, when the Prophet must have reached his nineteenth year.

The book of Daniel contains a very interesting mixture of history and prophecies. The six first chapters are chiefly historical, and are written with much spirit and animation, we seem to be present at the scenes described, and the whole is enriched with the most exalted sentiments of piety, and with the finest attestations to the praise and glory of God. The six last chapters are composed of prophecies, delivered at different times, albeit which are however connected as parts of one great scheme. They extend through many ages, and furnish the most striking description of the fall of successive kingdoms, which were to be introductory to the establishment of the Messiah's reign. They characterize in descriptive terms the four great monarchies of the world to be succeeded by "that kingdom which shall not be destroyed." They foreshew the power and destruction of Antichrist in predictions repeated and extended by St. John, and conclude with a distinct assurance of a general resurrection to a life of everlasting shame, or everlasting glory. Dr. Gray

In general the words of Daniel are proper, well chosen, and comprehensive, his diction simple and classic, yet often strong and nervous, and his whole style compact, concise, and close, but pure and regular. Sometimes however he is diffusive and copious, enlarges an idea, and swells an image to an uncommon pitch of grandeur. His book is not to be reckoned among the poetical compositions of the sacred volume, he makes great use indeed of parabolical imagery, but as a Prophet, shadowing out things and events by means of visions and allegories, without any colouring of a poetick style. Wentli, Bp. Lenth

With respect to the genuineness and authenticity of this book of Daniel, there is abundance both of external and of internal evidence. Of external evidence there is all that can well be had or desired in a case of this nature, not only the testimony of the whole Jewish Church and nation, who have constantly received this book as canonical, but of Josephus particularly, who recommends him as the greatest of the Prophets, of the Jewish Targums and Talmuds, which frequently cite and appeal to his authority, of St. Paul and St. John, who have copied many of his prophecies, of our Saviour Himself, who citeth his words, and styleth him "Daniel the Prophet" of ancient historians, who relate many of the same transactions, of the mother of the seven sons and of the father of the Maccabees, who both recommend the example of Daniel to their sons, of old Ptolemy in Egypt, who praying for the Jews then suffering under the persecution of Ptolemy Philopator, 1 Mac. vii. 6, 7, mentions the deliverance of Daniel out of the den of lions, together with the deliverance of the three men out of the fiery furnace, of the Jewish High Priest, who shewed Daniel's prophecies to Alexander the Great, whilst he was at Jerusalem, and still higher, of Ezekiel, a contemporary writer, who greatly extols his piety and wisdom. Not is the internal evidence more powerful and convincing than the external evidence, for the language, the style, the manner of writing, and all other internal marks and characters, are perfectly agreeable to that age, and he appears plainly and undeniably to have been a Prophet by the exact accomplishment of his prophecies, as well those which have already been fulfilled, as those which are now fulfilling in the world. Bp. Newton

To reject the prophecies of Daniel is to reject the Christian religion, for this religion is founded upon his prophecy concerning the Messiah. (In Isaac Newton) but to read this book with attention, and intelligence, and with an unbiased mind to follow the advice of our Saviour, when he quoted this very prophecy, "Let him that readeth understand, might be sufficient to convert an unbeliever from Deism to Christianity. Bp. Watson

3 ¶ And the king spake unto Ashpenaz the master of his eunuchs, that he should bring certain of the children of Israel, and of the king's seed, and of the princes,

4 Children in whom was no blemish, but well favoured, and skilful in all wisdom, and cunning in knowledge, and understanding science, and such as had ability in them to stand in the king's palace, and whom they might teach the learning and the tongue of the Chaldeans

[Chap I ver 1 In the third year of the reign of Jehoiakim — came Nebuchadnezzar &c.] Jeremiahs makes the first year of Nebuchadnezzar coincide with the fourth year of Jehoiakim, and thence begins the date of the seventy years captivity see Jer xxv 1 But here Daniel speaks of Nebuchadnezzar as king of Babylon in the third year of Jehoiakim In explanation it may be observed that Daniel begins his computation from the time that Nebuchadnezzar was sent by his father against Pharaoh-necho king of Egypt which was towards the latter end of the third year of Jehoiakim In the beginning of the following year he conquered the Egyptians which was the fourth year of Jehoiakim see Jer xlv 2 And in the latter end of the same year he came and besieged Jerusalem at which time Jehoiakim became tributary to the king of Babylon and consequently the seventy years of captivity and vassalage to Babylon began Dean Prideaux

2 — into the land of Shinar] This was the original name of the country about Babylon Gen xi 2, and it was still in use with the Prophets See Is xi 11 Jer v 11 W Louth

— the treasure house of his god] Of the idol Bel See Jer 1

2 W Louth The treasury was a place in ancient temples, appropriated for the reception of spoils and trophies, that were consecrated to the deity to which the temple belonged W Louth

3 — the master of his eunuchs] “Oh — the chief of his chamberlains It appears to have been a title given to the satraps, or such distinguished men as had the care of the royal chambers or wardrobe W Louth

— and of the king's seed] Rather — even of the king's seed Isaiah's prophecy chap xxxix 7, was thus partially fulfilled W Louth

4 Children in whom was no blemish] He was directed to make choice of such as had the best accomplishments both of body and mind, and were fit to give attendance in a king's court The word interpreted “children” is used in Scripture of such as are past the age of childhood, as we now distinguish the parts of man's life see 1 Kings xii 8 W Louth

7 Unto whom the prince of the eunuchs gave names for he gave unto Daniel the name of Belteshazzar, and to Hananiah, of Shadrach, and to Mishael, of Meshach, and to Azariah, of Abed-nego

8 ¶ But Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself with the portion of the king's meat, nor with the wine which he drank therefore he requested of the prince of the eunuchs that he might not defile himself

9 Now God had brought Daniel into favour and tender love with the prince of the eunuchs

10 And the prince of the eunuchs said unto Daniel, I fear my lord the king, who hath appointed your meat and your drink for why should he see your faces † worse liking than the children which are of your sort? then shall ye make me endanger my head to the king

11 Then said Daniel to Melzar, whom the prince of the eunuchs had set over Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah,

— whom they might teach the learning and the tongue of the Chaldeans] Besides the study of politics and the art of war the learning chiefly valued among them was astrology, or the knowledge of the heavenly motions the interpretation of dreams and architecture W Louth

As Moses was “learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians” so we are not to wonder that Daniel was taught the learning of the Chaldeans, and that he so far excelled in it, as to be placed at the head of the Magi See chap iv 9 W Louth

5 — of the king's meat,] So that according to the Eastern manners, they should be fed with such food and wine as were served at the king's table W Louth

7 — gave names] It was customary among the Eastern nations for the kings to distinguish their favourites by new names, when they conferred on them new dignities and the Mogul still adheres to the custom Dr Gray There might also be in this case a desire to wean these young Jews from the manners of their country and to bring them to a conformity with the Chaldean usages in all respects W Louth

— Belteshazzar] According to the name of his god, as Nebuchadnezzar himself derives the word, chap iv 8 So the name was derived from Bel, the chief idol of Babylon as Nebuchadnezzar had his own name from Nebo mother of their idols, mentioned Is xlv 1, and Evil-merodach his successor was named from their idol, Merodach, Jer 1 2 W Louth

8 But Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself &c] The defilement here alluded to might arise, either from the food being prohibited in the law of Moses, or else from its being what was offered to the idols of the Chaldeans, or at least intrusted to be blessed in their name see 1 Cor viii 10, and 1 Zec iv 13 W Louth

9 Now God had brought Daniel into favour &c] See Gen xxxix 21, and compare Ps cvi 46 W Louth

10 — of your sort? ¶ Or, “of your age” W Louth Probably it may include the condition also W Louth

14 So he consented to them in this matter, and proved them ten days

15 And at the end of ten days their countenances appeared fairer and fatter in flesh than all the children which did eat the portion of the king's meat

16 Thus Melzar took away the portion of their meat, and the wine that they should drink, and gave them pulse

17 ¶ As for these four children, God gave them knowledge and skill in all learning and wisdom: and Daniel had understanding in all visions and dreams

18 Now at the end of the days that the king had said he should bring them in, then the prince of the eunuchs brought them in before Nebuchadnezzar

19 And the king communed with them, and among them all was found none like Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah: therefore stood they before the king

20 And in all matters of wisdom and understanding, that the king enquired of them, he found them ten times better than all the magicians and astrologers that were in all his realm

21 And Daniel continued even unto the first year of king Cyrus

CHAP II

1 Nebuchadnezzar, forgetting his dream, requireth it of the Chaldeans by promises and threatenings: 10 They acknowledging their inability are judged to die: 14 Daniel obtaining some respite sheweth the dream: 19 He blesteth God: 24 He shewing the decree is brought to the king: 31 The dream: 36 The interpretation: 46 Daniel's advancement

AND in the second year of the reign of Nebuchadnezzar Nebuchadnezzar dreamed dreams, wherewith his spirit was troubled, and his sleep brake from him

2 Then the king commanded to call the magicians, and the astrologers, and the sorcerers, and the Chaldeans, for to shew the king his dreams: So they came and stood before the king

3 And the king said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and my spirit was troubled to know the dream

4 Then spake the Chaldeans to the king in Syriack, O king, live for ever: tell thy servants the dream, and we will shew the interpretation

12 — pulse] Various sorts of grain were dried and prepared for food by the people of the East as wheat, barley, rice, and pulse. Of some of these was the parched corn mentioned in Scripture, and the chief food of the labouring and poorer sort of people. Windle

15 — their countenances appeared fairer and fatter in flesh &c] Abstinence from wine and from rich food is no injury, but rather an improvement, to the health and complexion of people in those countries. What is said therefore of the effects of the abstinence of Daniel and his companions, might be nothing miraculous or out of the common course of things. See 1 Chardin Harmer

17 — in all visions and dreams] Not fortuitous or casual dreams, but such as were sent from Heaven. Windle. See the note on Gen. xx. 3

19 — among them all] That is, among all the young men included to at ver. 4. Windle

— therefore stood they before the king] They were in continual attendance in the king's court. So Joseph stood before Pharaoh, Gen. xli. 46. Compare 1 Kings xvii. 1. Isa. xv. 19, Numb. xvi. 9. W. Lenth

20 — the magicians and astrologers] These words seem to comprehend the persons in general who were distinguished in the several kinds of learning cultivated among the Chaldeans. Of the like character were the Magi in Egypt and Persia, and the other countries of the East and those wise men that came to our Saviour at His birth. Matt. ii. 1. Windle

21 — And Daniel continued even unto the first year of king Cyrus] And so witnessed the accomplishment of Jeremiah's prophecy concerning the seventy years. Ezra. i. 1. This being so remarkable a year, the text takes notice that Daniel lived so long, not only that he lived longer, at least till the third year of Cyrus, as appears from chap. x. 1. W. Lenth

Chap. II The prophecies of Daniel are all of them related to one another, as if they were but several parts of one general prophesy, given at several times. The first is the easiest to be understood, and every following prophecy adds something new to the former. See Isaac Newton

Ver. 1 — in the second year of the reign of Nebuchadnezzar] The second year, according to the Babylonian account, or the fourth, according to the Jewish, that is, in the second year of his reigning alone, or the fourth of his reigning jointly with his father. See Newton. Daniel, writing the following history in Chaldean for the use of the Chaldeans, follows the computation of time in use among them. W. Lenth

— dreams] Though it was but one continued dream, it contained a succession of various events. W. Lenth. Windle

2 — the sorcerers] See the note on chap. i. 20. By sorcerers seems to be meant a sort of necromancers who pretended to an acquaintance with departed spirits. Windle

— the Chaldeans] The Chaldeans were so much addicted to the study of the heavenly motions, and to make prognostications from them, that the word Chaldean is used both in Greek and Latin authors for an astrologer. W. Lenth. According to this sense we find it used below ver. 4. for the magicians of every sort. Windle

— in Syriack] That is, in the Aramean or Syrian language, is understood in its largest sense, being what was spoken by the Assyrians, Babylonians, and many of the neighbouring nations, and the same with what was called the ancient Chaldean. This language, when corrupted by the introduction of many Hebrew words, is called the Hebrew tongue in the New Testament. The language spoken in Antioch and other parts of Syria differs as a dialect from the two former, and is what we now call the Syriack. Windle, W. Lenth

— O king live for ever] Or, I long live the king. An usual mode of addressing the monarch. When he in his turn addressed the people, it was in the form, "Peace be multiplied unto you." See chap. iv. 1. Windle

7 They answered again and said, Let the king tell his servants the dream, and we will shew the interpretation of it

8 The king answered and said, I know of certainty that ye would gain the time, because ye see the thing is gone from me

9 But if ye will not make known unto me the dream, there is but one decree for you for ye have prepared lying and corrupt words to speak before me, till the time be changed therefore tell me the dream, and I shall know that ye can shew me the interpretation thereof

10 ¶ The Chaldeans answered before the king, and said, There is not a man upon the earth that can shew the king's matter therefore there is no king, lord, nor ruler, that asked such things at any magician, or astrologer, or Chaldean

11 And it is a rare thing that the king requirerh, and there is none other that can shew it before the king, except the gods, whose dwelling is not with flesh.

12 For this cause the king was angry and very furious, and commanded to destroy all the wise men of Babylon

13 And the decree went forth that the wise men should be slain, and they sought Daniel and his fellows to be slain

14 ¶ Then Daniel answered with counsel and wisdom to Arioch the captain of the king's guard, which was gone forth to slay the wise men of Babylon

15 He answered and said to Arioch the king's captain, Why is the decree so hasty from the king? Then Arioch made the thing known to Daniel

16 Then Daniel went in, and desired of the king that he would give him time, and that he would shew the king the interpretation

17 Then Daniel went to his house, and made the thing known to Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, his companions

18 That they would desire mercies of the God of heaven concerning this secret, that Daniel and his fellows should not perish with the rest of the wise men of Babylon

19 ¶ Then was the secret revealed unto Daniel in a night vision Then Daniel blessed the God of heaven

20 Daniel answered and said, Blessed be the name of God for ever and ever for wisdom and might are his

21 And he changeth the times and the seasons he removeth kings, and setteth up kings he giveth wisdom unto the wise, and knowledge to them that know understanding

10 — There is not a man upon the earth &c ] The answer of the Chaldeans was very reasonable that no king had ever required such a thing that it transcended all the powers and faculties of man God alone could disclose it But the pride of absolute power cannot bear any reason or bear any control Bp Newton The furious and arbitrary conduct of Nebuchadnezzar both in this instance and in that which is recorded in the following chapter is much illustrated by history, which shews that such characters are not uncommon among the eastern monarchs

18 That they would desire mercies &c ] Many useful observations might be drawn from this passage on the nature, the causes and the rewards, of devotion, on the power and prevalence of united addresses to Heaven and the important benefits, when the piety of a few holy men may sometimes bring down upon multitudes Such improvements must be obvious to every attentive reader Windle

20 — Blessed be the name of God &c ] In this and the three next verses, the Prophet has celebrated the praises of the Almighty in a simple, but truly sublime and animated, and warm and unaffected piety, he made special mention of His wisdom and power, and illustrated the display of those attributes in several instances apposite to the subject and occasion Windle

30 But as for me, this secret is not revealed to me for any wisdom that I have more than any living, but for thy sakes that shall make known the interpretation to the king, and that thou mightest know the thoughts of thy heart.

28. But there is a God in heaven &c.] Daniel's great modesty in disclaiming all merit or extraordinary wisdom on his own part, his piety in giving the glory to God alone, and at the same time his skill and dexterity in preparing the king's attention, and gradually opening his understanding to the reception of the truth, and the acknowledgment of the one true God, are very remarkable. The pious king, as St Jerome justly observes, had a prophetic dream that the saint interpreting it God might be glorified and the captives, and those who served God in captivity, might receive great consolation. We read the same thing of Pharaoh. Bp Newton

— the latter days.] This phrase often signifies the times of the Messiah called the last times or age of the world. See the note on Isa. ii. 2. and so the expression may be understood here for the prophecy contained in this vision reaches to the establishment of Messiah's kingdom. See ver. 44, and compare chap. x. 14. W. Iomth

30. — but for thy sakes that shall make known the interpretation to the king.] That this may be the means for myself and my three friends to gain your goodwill the better to promote the glory of God and do kindnesses to our brethren of the captivity. W. Iomth

31. Thou, O king, sawest and beholdest a great image.] In this vision of the image composed of four metals the foundation of all Daniel's prophecies is laid. It represents a body of four great nations which should reign over the earth successively, namely, the people of Babylon, the Persians, the Greeks, and the Romans. And by a stone cut out without hands which fell upon the feet of the image and by the four metals to pieces, and became a great mountain and filled the whole earth, it further represents, that a new kingdom should arise after the four and conquer all those nations, and grow very great, and last to the end of all ages. Isaac Newton

— This great image whose brightness was excellent, &c.] A great terrible human figure is not an improper emblem of human power and dominion, and the various metals of which it was composed not unfitly typify the various kingdoms that should arise. The order of their succession is clearly denoted by the order of the parts, the head and higher parts signifying the earlier times, and the lower parts the latter times. Bps Chandler and Newton

was wholly taken up with admiration of worldly pomp and splendour: whereas the same monarchies were represented to Daniel under the shape of fierce and wild beasts, chap. vii. as being the great supporters of idolatry and tyranny in the world. W. Iomth

32. This image's head was of fine gold.] Which Daniel interprets, ver. 36, Thou art this head of gold: thou and thy family and thy representatives. The Babylonian therefore was the first of these kingdoms: and it was fitly represented by the head of fine gold, on account of its great riches: and Babylon for the same reason was called by Isaiah 'the golden city' chap. xiv. 4. Daniel addresses Nebuchadnezzar as if he were a very powerful king and his empire very large and extensive. 'Thou, O king, art a king of kings' &c. see verses 37 and 38. Almost all the ancient eastern histories are lost: but there are some fragments even of heathen historians yet preserved, which speak of this mighty conqueror and his extended empire and describe him as holding in subjection Egypt, Syria, Phoenicia and Arabia, as having subdued the greatest part of Libya and Spain, and as having proceeded as far as to the pillars of Hercules: and led his army out of Spain into Thrace and Pontus. But his empire though of great extent was yet of no long duration: for it ended in his grandson Belshazzar not seventy years after the delivery of this prophecy: and not above twenty three years after the death of Nebuchadnezzar. Bp Newton — his breast and his arms of silver.] Which Daniel interprets, ver. 39. And after thee shall arise another kingdom inferior to thee. The kingdom which arose after the Babylonian, was the Medo-Persian. The two hands and the shoulders, which Josephus signifies that the empire of the Babylonians should be dissolved by two kings. The two kings were the kings of the Medes and Persians whose powers were united under Cyrus who was son of one of the king and son in law of the other: who besieged and took Babylon put an end to that empire: and on its ruins erected the Medo-Persian or Persian as it is more usually called, the Persian, having soon gained the ascendancy over the Medes. His empire is said to have been inferior, as being less than the former: according to the sense of the Latin Vulgate: because neither Cyrus, nor either of his successors, ever carried their arms into Africa or Spain, so far as Nebuchadnezzar is reported to have done: or rather inferior, as being worse than the former: for Dean Prideaux asserts, and it may be very truly so asserted that the kings of Persia were the worst race of men that it governed in empire. This empire from its first establishment by Cyrus to the death of the last king, Domitian, lasted not much more than two hundred years. Ips. Newton

The arms and shields of the Persians were frequently ornamented or case'd with silver whence Alexander instituted that remarkable body of veteran infantry called Argyraspides, from their silver shields after the conquest of Persia adopting the manners of the conquered nations. Dr. Hales

— his belly and his thighs of brass ] Which Daniel interpreted ver 9. And another third kingdom of brass, which shall be a rule over all the earth. Alexander the Great subdued the Persian empire. The kingdom therefore which succeeded to the Persian was the Macedonian, and the kingdom was fitly represented by brass, for the Greeks were famous for their braced armour, their usual epithet being, 'the braced-coated Greeks.' The interpretation of Daniel in Josephus is that another, coming from the west, completely armed in brass, shall destroy the empire of the Medes and Persians. This third kingdom is also said to be a rule over all the earth, by a figure usual in almost all authors. Alexander himself commanded that he should be called the king of all the world, not that he really conquered or conquered the whole world, but he had considerable dominions in Europe, Asia and Africa, that is in all the three parts of the world then known, and Diodorus Siculus, and other historians give an account of ambassadors coming from almost all the world to congratulate him on his success or to submit to his empire, and then especially, as Arrian remarks, did Alexander appear to himself and to those about him to be master both of the earth and of the sea.

The Seleucids who reigned in Syria and the Ptolemies who reigned in Egypt successors of Alexander might be designed particularly by the two thighs of brass. And of all his successors they alone might be pointed out because they alone had much connexion with the Jewish church and nation. Ips. Newton 35 His legs of iron, his feet part of iron and part of clay ] Which is thus interpreted by Daniel, And the fourth kingdom shall be strong as iron. &c. See verses 40—43. The Romans succeeded next to the Macedonians, and therefore in course were next to be mentioned. The Roman empire was stronger and longer than any of the preceding. The Romans broke in pieces and subdued all the former kingdom. The iron was mixed with muddy clay, and the Romans were defiled with a mixture of barbarous nations. The Roman empire was at length divided into ten lesser kingdoms, according to the ten toes of the image as we shall see hereafter. The kingdoms retained much of the old Roman strength and manifested it upon several occasions so that the kingdom was partly strong and partly broken. They mingled themselves with the seed of men, they made marriages and alliances one with another as they continue to do at this day, but no union ensued, reasons of state are stronger than the ties of blood and interest generally, and more than of duty. Some expound it of the civil and ecclesiastical power.

We may account and ourselves clashing, and interfering with each other to the weakening of both, and endangering of their future peace. The Roman empire therefore is represented as a brittle state, first with the strength of iron conquering all before it, his legs of iron, and then weakened and divided by the mixture of barbarous nations, his feet part of iron and part of clay. It subdued Syria and made the kingdom of the Seleucids a Roman province in the year 63 before Christ, it subdued Egypt and made the kingdom of the Ptolemies a Roman province in the year 30 before Christ, and in the fourth century after Christ, it began to be torn in pieces by the incursions of the barbarous nations. Ips. Newton

31, 35 Thou sawest till that a stone was cut out without hands ] Which is interpreted and explained by Daniel, in the 44th & 45th verses, 'And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, &c.' This description can with propriety be understood only, as the ancients understood it of the kingdom of Christ. 'And in the days of these kings, that is, in the day of some of them.' As in the day when the judges ruled, Ruth 1, signifies 'in the days when some of the judges ruled, so 'in the days of the kings signifies 'in the day of some' of these kingdoms, and it must be during the days of some of the last of them, because they are reckoned four in succession and consequently this must be the fifth kingdom. Accordingly the kingdom of Christ was set up during the last of these kingdoms, that is, the Romans. The stone was a totally different thing from the image, and the kingdom of Christ is totally different from the kingdoms of this world. The stone was cut out of the mountain without hands, a our heavenly body is said (2 Cor. v. 1) to be a building of God in house not made with hands, that is spiritual as the phrase is used in other places. Mark xiv. 56 compared with John ii. 21. &c. also Col. ii. 9. This is to be understood of the kingdom of Christ which was formed out of the Roman empire, not by number of hands, or strength of armies, but without human means, and the virtue of second causes. This kingdom was set up by the God of heaven, and from hence the phrase of the kingdom of heaven came to signify the kingdom of the Messiah, and so it was used and understood by the Jew, and so it is applied by our Saviour in the New Testament. Other kingdoms were raised by human ambition and worldly power, but this was the work not of man, but of God, this was truly as it is called the 'kingdom of heaven' and John xviii. 36, a kingdom not of this world, its laws its powers were all Divine. This kingdom was never to be destroyed as the Babylonian, the Persian, and the Macedonian empires have been, and in great measure also the Roman. This kingdom was to 'break in pieces' and consume all the other kingdoms to stand and endure it self so that it should comprehend within itself all the former kingdoms. This kingdom was to 'fill the whole earth' &c. &c. universal and to stand for ever.

As the fourth kingdom, or the Roman empire, was represented in a twofold state, first strong and flourishing with legs of iron, and then weakened and divided with feet and toes, part of iron and part of clay, so this fifth kingdom, or the kingdom of Christ is described likewise in two states, which Mr. Mede rightly distinguishes by the names of the kingdoms, 'the stone' and 'the kingdom of the mountain' the first when 'the stone was cut out of the mountain without hands' the second when it became itself a great mountain, and filled the whole earth. The stone was cut out of the mountain without hands, the kingdom of Christ was first set up, while the Roman empire was in its full strength with legs of iron. The Roman empire was afterwards divided into ten lesser kingdoms, the remains of which are subsisting at present. The image is still standing upon his feet and toes of iron and clay, the kingdom of Christ is still a stumblingblock and a rock of offence, but the stone will one day smite the image upon the feet and toes, and destroy utterly and will itself become a great mountain, fill the whole earth, or in other words, Rev. xi. 15, 'The kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ and He shall reign for ever and ever.' We have therefore seen the kingdom of 'the stone', but we have not yet seen the kingdom of 'the mountain'. Some parts of this prophecy still remain to be fulfilled, but the exact completion of the other parts will not suffer us to doubt of the accomplishment of the rest also in due season. Ips. Newton

36 ¶ This is the dream, and we will tell the interpretation thereof before the king

37 Thou, O king, art a king of kings for the God of heaven hath given thee a kingdom, power, and strength, and glory

38 And wheresoever the children of men dwell, the beasts of the field and the fowls of the heaven hath he given into thine hand, and hath made thee ruler over them all: Thou art this head of gold

39 And after thee shall arise another kingdom inferior to thee, and another third kingdom of brass, which shall bear rule over all the earth

40 And the fourth kingdom shall be strong as iron: forasmuch as iron breaketh in pieces and subdueth all things: and as iron that breaketh all these, shall it break in pieces and bruise

41 And whereas thou sawest the feet of iron, and toes, part of potters' clay, and part of iron, the kingdom shall be divided; but there shall be in it of the strength of the iron, forasmuch as thou sawest the iron mixed with miry clay

42 And as the toes of the feet were part of iron, and part of clay, so the kingdom shall be partly strong, and partly broken

43 And whereas thou sawest iron mixed with miry clay, they shall mingle themselves with the seed of men: but they shall not cleave one to another, even as iron is not mixed with clay

44 And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever

45 Forasmuch as thou sawest that the stone was cut out of the mountain without hands, and that it brake in pieces the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver, and the gold, the great God hath made known to thee the king what shall come to pass hereafter: and the dream is certain, and the interpretation thereof sure

The Jews were not only of service in their flourishing state to support true religion in the world but under their afflictions and captivities they spread it much further than they could before: They then became extensively useful to the nation amongst whom necessity mixed them: as both the reasonableness of their faith compared with heathenism was easy to be seen, and as prophecies fulfilled or miracles performed in their favour could not but recommend the worship of that Being whom they served: By these means their conqueror Nebuchadnezzar was brought to declare Him a God of gods and a Lord of kings, all whose works are truth and His ways judgment: chap. iv. 37 On these accounts did Darius the Mede decree, "That in every dominion of his kingdom men should tremble and fear before the God of Daniel: for He is the living God and steadfast for ever" chap. vi. 26 And Cyrus, whom Isaiah had foretold by name above one hundred years before his birth, for the restorer of the people from their captivity acknowledged by a written proclamation, sent through his whole empire, that the God of the Jews

NEBUCHADNEZZAR the king made an image of gold, whose height was threescore cubits, and the breadth thereof six cubits: he set it up in the plain of Dura, in the province of Babylon.

2 Then Nebuchadnezzar the king sent to gather together the princes, the governors, and the captains, the judges, the treasurers, 49 — but Daniel sat in the gate of the king.] See the notes on Gen xxiii 10.

It was from the prophecy recorded in this chapter that the distinction first rose of the four great empires of the world which hath been followed by most historians and chronologers in their distribution of times. These four empires, as they are the subject of the prophecy, are likewise the subject of the most celebrated pens both in former and in later ages. Not but there have been empires as great or greater than some of these: as those of the Persians for instance and of the Syrians and of the Turks: and we may think perhaps that they were as well deserving of a place in this succession of kingdoms and were equally worthy to be made the objects of prophecy being so eminent for the wisdom of their constitutions, the extent of their dominion, and the length of their duration. But these four empires had a particular relation to the church and people of God who were subject to them in their turns. They were therefore particularly predicted: and we have in them without the intermixture of other lines of prophecy (as I may say) extending from the reign of Nebuchadnezzar to the fall and complete establishment of the kingdom of the Messiah. He who is Arbiter of kingdoms and Government of the universe conceived as much of their future revolutions as He pleased: and He hath revealed enough to manifest His providence and to confirm the truth of religion. What Daniel said upon the first discovery of these things well may we say after the completion of so many particulars. Blessed be the name of God for ever and ever for wisdom and might and His and He change the times and the seasons. He removeth kings and setteth up kings. He giveth wisdom unto the wise and knowledge to them that know understanding. He revealeth the deep and secret things. He knoweth what is in the darkness and the light dwelleth with Him, ver 20—22. Bp Newton

[Chap III ver 1 Nebuchadnezzar — made an image.] The statue was probably of Bel or some Assyrian deity see ver 14. It is thought to have been hollow within like that of the Colossus of Rhodes whose height exceeded that of the statue by ten cubits. The proportion of the height seems unequal to the breadth unless the pedestal, on which it was placed be included. Diodorus relates, that Xerxes took away an image of gold forty feet high when he demolished the temple of Belus in Babylon. Dean Prideaux supposes it may have been this statue and then the body of the image would hardly have been twenty-seven cubits high. The statue of Jupiter, made by Ixyppus at Larentum, is said to have been forty cubits high. Windle W Lenth

4 — O people nations and languages.] From whatever part of the empire ye come and whatever language ye speak see ver 29 and chap iv 1. This form of speech was necessary to set forth the largeness and extent of the Babylonish empire, which was subjects of so many different languages. The same phrase was afterwards used under the Medes and Persians chap vi 25. Lenth 1 22 in 1c xiii 9 W Lenth

5 — cornet, flute, harp &c.] There is much difficulty in determining the several musical instruments here intended. Though Dr Burney in his History of Music has one whole chapter on the musick of the ancient Hebrews yet he only enumerates the names of these instruments by quoting the verse and probably in his researches could not meet with sufficient data to explain them in a satisfactory manner. Windle

6 — the same hour.] This is the first place in the Old Testament where we meet with the division of time into hours. The Greeks ascribe the invention of hours to Anaximander, or Anaximenes who probably learned it from the Chaldeans. W Lenth

7 Therefore at that time, when all the people heard the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psalter, and all kinds of musick, all the people, the nations, and the languages, fell down and worshipped the golden image that Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up

8 ¶ Wherefore at that time certain Chaldeans came new, and accused the Jews

9 They spake and said to the king Nebuchadnezzar, O king, live for ever

10 Thou, O king, hast made a decree, that every man that shall hear the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psalter, and dulcimer, and all kinds of musick, shall fall down and worship the golden image

11 And whoso falleth not down and worshippeth, that he should be cast into the midst of a burning fiery furnace

12 There are certain Jews whom thou hast set over the affairs of the province of Babylon, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, these men, O king, I have not regarded thee they serve not thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up

13 ¶ Then Nebuchadnezzar in his rage and fury commanded to bring Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego Then they brought these men before the king

14 Nebuchadnezzar spake and said unto them, Is it true, O Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, do not ye serve my gods, nor worship the golden image which I have set up

15 Now if ye be ready that at what time ye hear the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psalter, and dulcimer, and all kinds of musick, ye fall down and worship the image which I have made, well but if ye worship not, ye shall be cast the same hour into the midst of a burning fiery furnace, and who is that God that shall deliver you out of my hands

16 Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, answered and said to the king, O Nebuchadnezzar, we are not careful to answer thee in this matter

17 If it be so, our God whom we serve is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace, and he will deliver us out of thine hand, O king

18 But if not, be it known unto thee, O king, that we will not serve thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up

19 ¶ Then was Nebuchadnezzar full of fury, and the form of his visage was changed against Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego therefore he spake, and commanded that they should heat the furnace one seven times more than it was wont to be heated

20 And he commanded the most mighty men that were in his army to bind Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, and to cast them into the burning fiery furnace

21 Then these men were bound in their coats, their hosen, and their hats, and their other garments, and were cast into the midst of the burning fiery furnace

22 Therefore because the king's commandment was urgent, and the furnace exceeding hot, the flame of the fire slew those men that took up Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego

23 And these three men, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, fell down bound into the midst of the burning fiery furnace

24 Then Nebuchadnezzar the king was astonished, and rose up in haste, and spake, and said unto his counsellors, Did not we cast three men bound into the midst of the fire? They answered and said unto the king, True, O king

6 Therefore made I a decree to bring in all the wise men of Babylon before me, that they might make known unto me the interpretation of the dream.

7 Then came in the magicians, the astrologers, the Chaldeans, and the soothsayers, and I told the dream before them, but they did not make known unto me the interpretation thereof.

8 ¶ But at the last Daniel came in before me, whose name was Belteshazzar, according to the name of my god, and in whom is the spirit of the holy gods, and before him I told the dream, saying,

When the whole creation is in flames, and all this world becomes one great fiery furnace, the faithful servants of Christ shall escape unhurt from that general conflagration. the relation of the Magi properly so called was received among the Babylonians is perhaps not altogether certain. The Magus or worshippers of fire were first established in Persia (Dr Hyde) hence it was propagated in Persia and India, and they remain here to this time Dean Prideaux. But it is not improbable, but their principles were well known also and partly received in Chalda and Babylon, especially as these nations were immersed in all sorts of superstition and the name 'Magi' seems to have belonged to the countries of the East in general. Windle — tell me the visions of my dream — and the interpretation thereof. — Nebuchadnezzar tells the dream himself in the following words — so the meaning of this sentence must be, Tell me the dream that is the interpretation thereof. The Greek translates it thus. Hear the vision of my dream and tell me the interpretation thereof. H. Foulth

10 — behold a tree in the midst of the earth &c ] The midst of the earth is probably meant as a centre from which the extensive circuit of his empire was described. The sovereigns of the world are often represented by large trees in the language of other nations as well as in the prophetick language of the Hebrews and by the shadow is denoted the protection which men may receive under government. Windle

11 — a watcher and an holy one ] See below the note on ver 17

12 Nevertheless leave the stump of his roots in the earth ] As when the root of himself is still alive there is a possibility of its growing again and there should still be hopes that the king might recover his former title and dignity see ver 26 H. Foulth

Though the tree was to be hewn down &c the stump of his roots which was to be left in the earth was to be secured with chains of iron and brass in the tender grass of the field. The words of menace which follow are applicable only to a man and mainly shew that the whole vision was typical of some heinous calamity to fall for a time but for a time only on some one of the sons of men. Bp Horsley

16 Let his heart be changed &c ] Compute ver 25. The plain interpretation of Nebuchadnezzar's case stripped of the prophetick narrative language appears to be that he should be punished with madness, should fancy himself a beast and live like a beast but after some time should recover his reason and resume the government. Bp Newton

— let seven times pass over him ] That is even years so the expression is taken, chap xi 13 where the Hebrew reads the king of the north shall come at the end of times that is years. So the 'time times and an half, mentioned chap vii 25 in 7 signify three years and a half, and are accordingly ex-

down the tree, and cut off his branches, shake off his leaves, and scatter his fruit let the beasts get away from under it, and the fowls from his branches

15 Nevertheless leave the stump of his roots in the earth, even with a band of iron and brass, in the tender grass of the field, and let it be wet with the dew of heaven, and let his portion be with the beasts in the grass of the earth

16 Let his heart be changed from man's, and let a beast's heart be given unto him, and let seven times pass over him

17 This matter is by the decree of the watchers, and the demand by the word of the holy ones to the intent that the living may know that the most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will, and setteth up over it the basest of men

18 This dream I king Nebuchadnezzar planned by 'forty and two months' Rev vi 2 and by 140 days Rev xii 6 both which reckonings of time are equivalent to three years and in half. H. Foulth

17 — the watchers — the holy ones ] It is the opinion of commentators in general that by these titles are to be understood angelick beings who are the instruments of God and messengers to execute God's judgments. And Stuckhouse observes after Calmét that from some expressions in this verse it looks as if the Chaldeans had a notion (for the king, we may suppose speaks according to the sentiments of the nation) that these watchers or 'holy ones' in heaven constituted an assembly of judges and were an order of blessed spirits who took under their cognizance and decision the fate of men. Bp Horsley however has suggested that the appellations denote the Persons in the Godhead the first describing Them by the vigilance of Their universal providence the second by the transcendent sanctity of Their nature and he observes that it is not the mere execution of the judgment upon Nebuchadnezzar but the decree itself which is ascribed to Them that the whole matter originated in Their decree and it is then commanded the decree was executed and that in perfect consistency with this exposition we find in the 24th verse that this decree of the watcher and the holy ones is 'the decree of the most High God' Idem

— to the intent that the living may know &c ] The intent of the matter was to give mankind a proof in the fall and restoration of this mighty monarch that the fortunes of kings and empires are in the hand of God that His providence perpetually interpose in the affairs of men distributing crowns and sceptres always for the good of the faithful primarily ultimately of His whole creation but according to His will by which we must understand a will perfectly independent and unbiassed by any thing external yet not in arbitrary will but a will directed by the governing perfections of the Divine intellect by God's own goodness and wisdom and as justice is included in the idea of goodness it must be a will governed by God's justice. Bp Horsley

— the basest of men ] This regards Nebuchadnezzar, either with respect to his present condition whose pride and cruelty rendered him a despicable in the sight of God, as his high estate made him appear honourable in the sight of men and therefore he was justly doomed to so low a degree of abasement or else it may be understood of his wonderful advancement and restoration after he had been degraded from his dignity and sent to herd with the beasts of the field. God thereby asserting that prerogative of His of 'bringing low and lifting up' and of 'raising the beggar from the dunghill, to set him among princes' 1 Sam ii 8, 9, Ps cxiii 7, 6. H. Foulth

have seen Now thou, O Belteshazzar, declare the interpretation thereof, forasmuch as all the wise men of my kingdom are not able to make known unto me the interpretation but thou art able, for the spirit of the holy gods is in thee

19 ¶ Then Daniel, whose name was Belteshazzar, was astonished for one hour, and his thoughts troubled him. The king spake, and said, Belteshazzar, let not the dream, or the interpretation thereof, trouble thee Belteshazzar answered and said, My lord, the dream be to them that hate thee, and the interpretation thereof to thine enemies

20 The tree that thou sawest, which grew, and was strong, whose height reached unto the heaven, and the sight thereof to all the earth,

21 Whose leaves were fair, and the fruit thereof much, and in it was meat for all, under which the beasts of the field dwelt, and upon whose branches the fowls of the heaven had their habitation

22 It is thou, O king, that art grown and become strong for thy greatness is grown, and reacheth unto heaven, and thy dominion to the end of the earth

23 And whereas the king saw a watcher and an holy one coming down from heaven, and saying, Hew the tree down, and destroy it, yet leave the stump of the roots thereof in the earth, even with a band of iron and brass, in the tender grass of the field, and let it be wet with the dew of heaven, and let his portion be with the beasts of the field, till seven times pass over him,

24 This is the interpretation, O king, and this is the decree of the most High, which is come upon my lord the king

26 — thy kingdom shall be sure unto thee] That a dispensation of judgment should be tempered with such signal mercy to a heathen prince, not like Cyrus, eminent for his virtues however distinguished by his talents, is perhaps in some degree to be put to the account of the favour he showed to many of the Jews his captives, and in particular to his constant patronage of the Prophet Daniel Ep Hordley

27 — break off thy sins by righteousness, &c] The plain meaning of this counsel given to the king is, that he should do justly, and love mercy, should practise those great duties of justice and charity towards mankind, in which he had been hitherto remarkably deficient, then, as it follows, Perhaps there shall be a prolongation to thy tranquillity or peace, that is, his punishment might be remitted and his felicity continued for a longer term, unlike the case of Hezekiah in Isaiah chap xxxviii or that of the Ninevites recorded by the Prophet Jonah See also Jer xvi Windle

28 All this came upon the king Nebuchadnezzar] Strange as it must seem, notwithstanding Daniel's weight and credit with the king notwithstanding the consternation of mind into which the dream had thrown him, this warning had no permanent

25 That they shall drive thee from men, and thy dwelling shall be with the beasts of the field, and they shall make thee to eat grass as oxen, and they shall wet thee with the dew of heaven, and seven times shall pass over thee, till thou know that the most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will

26 And whereas they commanded to leave the stump of the tree roots, thy kingdom shall be sure unto thee, after that thou shalt have known that the heavens do rule

27 Wherefore, O king, let my counsel be acceptable unto thee, and break off thy sins by righteousness, and thine iniquities by shewing mercy to the poor, if it may be a lengthening of thy tranquillity

28 ¶ All this came upon the king Nebuchadnezzar.

29 At the end of twelve months he walked in the palace of the kingdom of Babylon

30 The king spake, and said, Is not this great Babylon, that I have built for the house of the kingdom by the might of my power, and for the honour of my majesty?

31 While the word was in the king's mouth, there fell a voice from heaven, saying, O king Nebuchadnezzar, to thee it is spoken, The kingdom is departed from thee

32 And they shall drive thee from men, and thy dwelling shall be with the beasts of the field they shall make thee to eat grass as oxen, and seven times shall pass over thee, until thou know that the most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will

33 The same hour was the thing fulfilled effect He was not cured of his overweening pride until he was overtaken by the threatened judgment Ep Hordley

29 — he walked in the palace] Or, 'he was walking upon the palace' It is well known that the roofs of the buildings in the East were flat or plain, over which the inhabitants used to walk for pleasure Windle See the note on 2 Sam xi 2

30 — great Babylon, that I have built] It is frequently expressed in Scripture that a person has built a city, who has enlarged, repaired, or fortified it. See 2 Chron xi 6, 2 Kings xiv 22

Whatever we read of the original construction of Babylon by Nimrod or Belus, or of its enlargement by Semiramis, yet it was either of little account, or certainly not as one of the wonders of the world, till the walls with their hundred gates the temple of Belus, the monarch's most magnificent palace, the hanging gardens, and other grand works and improvements, were added by the king, who is said to have built it Windle

31 While the word was in the king's mouth, &c] So Herod was struck immediately, "because he gave not God the glory," Acts xii 23 Windle

37 Now I Nebuchadnezzar praise and extol and honour the King of heaven, all

34 — I Nebuchadnezzar lifted up mine eyes] The first indication of the recovery is noted by a reversal of the cause of the fall. At the expiration of the term, or at the end of seven years, Nebuchadnezzar lifted up his eyes unto heaven, and his understanding or mind returned he acknowledged against whom he had transgressed by his pride, and looked up unto Him, when he was restored. The following acts of praise are the suitable returns of a mind truly penitent, and deeply sensible of its faults and of the mercies it had received. Windle

37 Nebuchadnezzar praise and extol and honour the King of heaven,] We shall not find in history a more awful example and monument of Providence, than the vicissitudes of Nebuchadnezzar's life afford. Raised gradually to the pinnacle of power and human glory by a long train of these brilliant actions and successes, which man is tempted to ascribe to himself, (the proximate cause being in himself and in the instruments he uses, although evidence is always the prime efficient,) he was suddenly cast down from it, and, after a time, as suddenly restored, without any natural or human means. His humiliation was not the effect of any reverse of fortune, of any public disaster, or any mismanagement of the affairs of his empire. At the expiration of a twelvemonth from his dream, the king, still at rest in his house, and flourishing in his palace, surveying his city, and exulting in the monuments of his own greatness, which it presented to his eye, was smitten by an invisible hand. As the event stood unconnected with any known natural cause it must have been beyond the ken of any foresight short of the Divine, and it follows incontestably, that the prediction and the accomplishment of it were both from God. The king's restoration to power and grandeur had also been predicted, and thus took place at the predicted time, independently of any natural cause, and without the use of any human means. And the evidence of these extraordinary occurrences, of the prediction, the fall, and the restoration is perhaps the most undeniable of any thing which rests upon mere human testimony. The king himself, upon his recovery, published a proclamation in every part of his vast empire, giving an account of all which had befallen him, and in conclusion

3 Then they brought the golden vessels that were taken out of the temple of the house of God which was at Jerusalem, and the king, and his princes, his wives, and his concubines, drank in them

4 They drank wine, and praised the gods of gold, and of silver, of brass, of iron, of wood, and of stone giving praise and honour to the King of heaven acknowledging that 'all His works are truth, and His ways judgment and that those who walk in pride He is able to abase. The evidence of the whole fact therefore stands upon this public record of the Babylonian empire which was preserved word for word in this chapter, of which it makes indeed the whole. This chapter therefore is not Daniel's writing, but Nebuchadnezzar's. Bp Hosley

Chap V ver 1 Belshazzar the king made a great feast &c] This feast was made at a time of public rejoicing, being an annual festival, when the whole night was spent in revelling of which season Cyrus took the advantage to make himself master of the city, as Herodotus and Xenophon relate, and as was foretold by Jeremiah, chap li 39, 57. Windle

2 — while he tasted the wine] The expression seems to allude to that part of the libation in which the wine was tasted at the time of a sacrifice or a festal solemnity. This impious king as he is called by Xenophon, in making the libations, ordered the vessels of Jehovah to be introduced for these purposes thus impiously prostituting the most sacred instruments of the temple of the true God to the idolatrous services of pagan superstition, or, if the impiety was not so gross, at least the sacred vessels were applied to common uses, and to the purposes of intemperance and excess. Windle

— his father Nebuchadnezzar] Rather, his grandfather. Nebuchadnezzar was succeeded by his son Hinnodum according to Ptolemy, who is the Evil-metoch of Jeremiah. he married a discreet and prudent woman called Nitocris from whom was born Nabonadum or Belshazzar. Windle See the notes on Exod ii 15, and Jer xxvii 7

4 — praised the gods of gold,] As they drank their wine in these once hallowed vessels, they triumphed over that God, to whom they had been consecrated and magnified the power of their idols of gold and silver, &c as if by their might these victories had been achieved, and these rich spoils obtained. Bp Hall Such a wanton and sacrilegious insult deserved and called for exemplary punishment. Windle

20 — and they took his glory from him. Or, his glory was taken from him, according to the Hebrew phraseology. W Ionth The authority of Nebuchadnezzar was raised in the last verse to the highest pitch, and on that account we find here, that his heart was elated, and his spirit grown obdurate in pride and arrogant behaviour, instead of ascribing all his honours and advantages to the real giver of them, the true God, whom he had been brought to acknowledge; and in the neglect of whom, and of improvement from his instructive warnings, Belshazzar's fate is by the Prophet so justly and judiciously attributed. Windle

26 MENE, God hath numbered the kingdom, and finished it. MENE, to number; that is, to fix bounds to a thing, or the period of its continuance.

The determined number of years which God hath appointed for the continuance of thy reign, and the Babylonish monarchy, is finished. So God is said to number the months of man's life, and to appoint him "bounds that he cannot pass," Job xiv 5. The word "MENE" is doubled in the foregoing verse, to shew that the thing is certain, and "established by God," as Joseph tells Pharaoh in the like case, Gen xli 32. W Ionth

27 TEKEL, Thou art weighed in the balances, and art found wanting. Wicked men are often compared to silver adulterated, and alloyed with base metals, which makes it too light, when weighed in the balances, see Jer vi 30, Ezek xxii 18. W Ionth Tekel signifies to weigh. The meaning here is, that the Almighty had weighed, or made a due estimate of, the conduct of Belshazzar, according to the just and impartial measures of His providence, and had found him light or deficient, a man of no account, unworthy of a kingdom, and a fit object of Divine vengeance. Windle

28 PERES, The kingdom is divided, &c. The verb paras from whence "peres" is derived as an appellative signifies to divide or break. It is likewise the proper name of the Persians, who were to be sharers in the division of the Babylonish empire. Upharsin in the 25th verse literally signifies "and they divide." W Ionth from the presence of princes in a dress presented to the wearer as a mark of distinction is an honour still practised in the East. They are conferred sometimes merely as an honour, and sometimes as an ensign of office. Hameri Son of Chardin

30 In that night was Belshazzar the king of the Chaldeans slain. And from the next verse it appears that the Babylonian or Chaldean kingdom expired with him.

The punishment of Nebuchadnezzar, the death of Belshazzar and the expiration of the kingdom, may remind us of that fine passage of the wise Son of Sirach, contained in Eccles x 1 — Windle

31 And Darius the Median took the kingdom. This Darius is said to be of the seed of the Medes, chap ix 1, and is supposed by the most judicious chronologer to be the same with Cyaxares the son of Astyages. When Cyrus made king of the Chaldeans, as being his uncle by his mother's side, and his putter in carrying on the war against the Babylonians, did kill him the father of the king of Babylon to live there whenever he pleased, as Xenophon relate. The Chaldeans rendered him "took the kingdom" is translated "possessed the kingdom" chap vii 15, and means the same with succeeding to the kingdom. W Ionth Josephus says, that this Darius was the son of Astyages, and that the Greeks called him by another name, what this other name, given by the Greeks to the son and successor of Astyages was we learn from Xenophon, who tells us it was Cyaxares. Bp Hallifax

The judgment recorded in this chapter is a visible proof of the Divine vengeance on those, whose heart is lifted up by prosperity on the pious and ungodly who, instead of reverencing Him from whom they receive life and breath and all things, have the insolence to exult themselves against Him, and on those who do not improve the warnings He gives them, the afflictions He visits them with, nor the example He sets before their eye. Oswald

11 Then these men came and found Daniel praying and making supplication before his God

12 Then they came near, and spake before the king concerning the king's decree, Hast thou not signed a decree, that every man that shall ask a petition of any God or man within thirty days, save of thee, O king, shall be cast into the den of lions? The king answered and said, The thing is true, according to the law of the Medes and Persians, which altereth not

13 Then answered they and said before the king, That Daniel, which is of the captivity of Judah, regardeth not thee, O king, nor the decree that thou hast signed, but maketh his petition three times a day.

14 Then the king, when he heard these words, was sore displeased with himself, up himself and usual complement: "he knelt upon his knees three times a day." Nor did he pray only, but gave thanks, cutting off some part of the precious time of danger shorter, but performing the duty without ceasing or diminishing ought. "He prayed and gave thanks before his God, as he did aforetime." And, in short, he would not so much as shut his windows, but did all this, "his windows to his chamber being open toward Jerusalem." In order to show the meaning of this last circumstance, we must have recourse to a noble passage in king Solomon's prayer at the dedication of the temple, which Daniel had in his eye, and by which he directed his conduct. (See 1 Kings viii 46—56, especially the latter part of the 46th verse) The circumstance therefore of "praying toward Jerusalem" being thus enjoined, Daniel would by no means omit it. And now let us consider with ourselves, how clear the conscience, how holy the soul, how steadfast the faith, how lively the hope, how fervent the charity, how invincible the courage, of Daniel must have been, who, in such circumstances, could calmly and composedly go on in the regular and exact performance of his stated devotions. Let us consider of how great consequence the due performance of them is, if, with death in its most horrible form before his eyes, he thought he could not justify a single omission of them. And whenever we are tempted to neglect our prayers, let us remember that Daniel, though the den of lions was to be the consequence, "kneeled upon his knees three times a day, and prayed, and gave thanks before his God, as he did aforetime." Bp Horne

— his windows being open &c ] The like practice we find observed by Sara, the daughter of Raguel, in Tobit iii 11, that "she prayed toward the window," and we may presume, for the same devout reason. This was the custom of the Jews in their captivities and dispersions Wogan

the king establisheth may be changed.

16 Then the king commanded, and they brought Daniel, and cast him into the den unto Daniel, Thy God whom thou servest continually, he will deliver thee.

17 And a stone was brought, and laid upon the mouth of the den; and the king sealed it with his own signet, and with the signet of his lords, that the purpose might not be changed concerning Daniel.

18 Then the king went to his palace, and passed the night fasting: neither were instruments of musick brought before him: and his sleep went from him.

19 Then the king arose very early in the morning, and went in haste unto the den of lions.

20 And when he came to the den, he cried with a lamentable voice unto Daniel, and the king spake and said to Daniel, Daniel, servant of the living God, is thy God whom thou servest continually able to deliver thee from the lions?

21 Then said Daniel unto the king, O king, live for ever.

he will deliver thee. Rather, "My God deliver thee." The words express the king's anger and good wishes, but no certain expectation. See ver. 10. W. Lowth.

15 — a stone was brought, and laid upon the mouth of the den, &c. We see here the hand of Providence, whose goodness in preserving the servant, and power in defeating the malice of his enemies, were made the more conspicuous by the very method used to prevent the Prophet's escape. The stone is sealed, not only with the king's signet, but with the signet also of his lords, that no might not be in the power of either to change the purpose concerning Daniel. This deliverance therefore appeared to be the sole work of God, and not of man. And as by this accrued the greater glory to God, so it effectually established the honour and safety of His Prophet. Wogan

22 — forasmuch as before him innocency was found in me. ] The Prophet, having justly offended neither God nor the king, very truly sets the righteousness of his cause as the reason of the Divine interposition for his security, not from any ostentatious display of his own merit, but to direct the attention of the king to the power and providence of that great Being who is "mighty to save," and whose favour is more to be regarded than life itself.

24 — I have I done no hurt ] Though I disobeyed my superiors, it was not done out of contumacy or stubbornness, but to preserve a good conscience, which is the only true principle of loyalty and obedience. See Rom xiii 5. W. Lowth.

innocency was found in me; and also before thee, O king, have I done no hurt.

23 Then was the king exceeding glad for him, and commanded that they should take Daniel up out of the den. So Daniel was taken up out of the den, and no manner of hurt was found upon him, because he believed in his God.

24 ¶ And the king commanded, and they brought those men which had accused Daniel, and they cast them into the den of lions, them, their children, and their wives, and the lions had the mastery of them, and brake all their bones in pieces or ever they came at the bottom of the den.

25 ¶ Then king Darius wrote unto all people, nations, and languages, that dwell in all the earth, Peace be multiplied unto you.

26 I make a decree, That in every dominion of my kingdom men tremble and fear before the God of Daniel: for he is the living God, and stedfast for ever, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed, and his dominion shall be even unto the end.

27 He delivereth and rescueth, and he worketh signs and wonders in heaven and in earth, who hath delivered Daniel from the power of the lions.

28 So this Daniel prospered in the reign of Darius, and in the reign of Cyrus the Persian.

24. — and the lions had the mastery of them, &c. ] The ravenous seizure of these wretched criminals and their families by the lions, "or ever they came at the bottom of the den," proved at once the protection of God over His servant, in shutting their mouths that they hurt him not, and His vengeance against the accusers of Daniel, in permitting the lions to satisfy their hunger by devouring them so greedily. Wogan

The example of Daniel not only strips us of every excuse for not performing our devotions, but gives us likewise instructions how to perform them with regard to place, posture, time, and matter. And let the blessed effect and reward of his devotion fire our souls to an imitation of so great and glorious an example. Would we be delivered from the power of the devil, and the bitter pains of eternal death? would we be holy, and just, and good? would we be filled with wisdom and understanding in the counsels of God? would we be high in the favour of Heaven? nay, would we be saved from temporal calamities, and brought to honour, esteem, and reverence, in the sight of men? Constancy in prayer can open a way to all these blessings. Bp. Horne

IN the first year of Belshazzar king of Babylon Daniel had a dream and visions of his head upon his bed then he wrote the dream, and told the sum of the matters communicated to the Prophet himself. The interval of time from the first to the last of these visions, is about one or two and twenty years: that is, from the first year of Belshazzar, mentioned at the beginning of this chapter to the third year of Cyrus at the beginning of chapter 5. The first vision, or dream is contained in the seventh chapter, and is the only one that is written in the Chaldee language; and perhaps the similarity of it to the dream of Nebuchadnezzar, which the Prophet had related and expounded at chap. 4 might have been one reason why this same language was here adopted, and the benefit designed by it for the impious king, in whose reign it was delivered, another. What was there prefigured by a huge statue, composed of various metals, is here pointed at by a very different sort of emblem, each suited to the disposition and character of the persons to whom the communications were made. Four beasts are, in this dream, designed to signify the four great monarchies, or kingdoms, according to the interpretation of an angel, and some circumstances, relating to the fourth beast, we probably intended to shadow forth a series of events which were to reach to the latest ages of the world. W Lenth

Ver 1. In the first year of Belshazzar] This was about seventeen years before the history contained in the last chapter see the dates in the margin. W Lenth

— four great beasts came up from the sea,] These beasts are indeed monstrous productions, but such emblems were usual among the eastern nations, a winged lion, and such fictitious animals may still be seen in the ruins of Persepolis, according to Sir John Chardin and other travellers. Bp Newton

1. The first was like a lion &c] This is the kingdom of the Babylonians, and the king of Babylon is in like manner compared to a lion by Jeremiah, chap. 4 v. 7. and is said to fly as an eagle, chap. xlviii. 10. and he is also compared to an eagle by Ezekiel, chap. xvii. v. 10. The lion is esteemed the king of beasts, and the eagle the king of birds, and therefore the kingdom of Babylon, which is described as the first and noblest kingdom, and was the kingdom then in being, is said to partake of the nature of both. The eagle's wings denote its swiftness and rapidity, and the conquests of Babylon were very rapid, that empire being advanced to the height within a few years by a single person by the conduct and arms of Nebuchadnezzar. It further said, the wing thereof were plucked, and it was lifted up from the earth, that is, it was taken away from the earth as is commonly understood, and as it is translated in almost all the ancient versions, or it may be rendered thus, "the wings thereof were plucked wherewith it was lifted up from the earth, as a crown." plam 1, and as we read in the margin of our Bible. Its wing was beginning to be plucked at the delivery of this prophecy, for at this time the Medes and Persians were encroaching upon it. Belshazzar the king now reigning, was the last of his race, and in the seventeenth year of his reign Babylon was taken, and the kingdom was transferred to the Medes and Persians. Bp Newton

Though the dream of Nebuchadnezzar concerning the image and thus of Daniel's agree in their general sense and interpretation, yet there are circumstances added to the latter, as well as some points more plainly illustrated than they were in the former. Nebuchadnezzar saw his kingdom flourishing, Daniel saw it in its wings were plucked, and its end approaching. Other particulars will be readily observed by the attentive reader in the subsequent parts of the vision. W Lenth

— made stand upon the feet as a man, and a man's heart was given to it] The probable sense of this passage is, that, after the Babylonian empire was subverted, the people became more humane and gentle; their minds were enlarged with their fortune, and they, who vaunted as if they had been gods, now felt themselves to be but men. They were brought to such a sense as the Psalmist wishes such persons to have, "Put them in fear, O Lord that the nations may know themselves to be but men." Bp Newton

5. And behold another beast, &c] This is the kingdom of the Medes and Persians, and for their cruelty and greediness after blood they are compared to a bear, which is a most voracious and cruel animal: the resemblance is alluded to in the following words, "Arise, devour much flesh." A bear, saith Aristotle, is a voracious animal, and so, saith Strabo, the Medo-Persians were great robbers and spoilers according to Jeremiah, chap. li. 48. Bp Newton

— it raised up itself on one side] Or, it may be as in the margin, "it raised up its dominion" that is, it made an empire out of the joint powers of Media and Persia. W Lenth

— and it had three ribs in the mouth of it between the teeth of it] These are sometimes understood of the three kingdoms of the Assyrians, Medes, and Persians, reduced into one, but Sir Isaac Newton and Bp Chandler with greater propriety explain them to signify the kingdoms of Babylon, Lydia, and Egypt which were conquered by the second beast, but were not properly parts or members of its body. They might be called "ribs," as the conquest of them much strengthened the Persian empire, and they might be said to be "between the teeth of the bear," as they were much harassed and oppressed by the Persians. Bp Newton

— and they said thus unto it, Arise, devour much flesh] This was said, as before intimated, to denote the cruelty of the Medes and Persians. They are also represented as very cruel by Isaiah, chap. xiii. 18. Cambyses, Ochus, and others of that name, were indeed more like bears than men. Instances of their cruelty abound in almost all historians, who have written of their reigns. Bp Newton

6. — to another, like a leopard] This is the kingdom of the Macedonians, or Grecians, who under the command of Alexander the Great overcame the Persians, and reigned next after them. The leopard is remarkable for its swiftness, see Hab. i. 8, and for the impetuosity with which it springs upon its prey, and Alexander and the Macedonians were amazingly swift and rapid in their conquests. This rapidity is further intimated by the "four wings on the back" of the beast. The Babylonian empire was represented with two wings, but this with four, as St Jerome saith, nothing was written than his victory over Alexander. The "four heads of the beast" denotes the four kingdoms, into which the empire of Alexander was divided at his death by his four captains, Cassander reigning in Macedonia and Greece, Lysimachus over Thrace and Bithynia, Seleucus over Egypt, and Ptolemy over Syria. Bp Newton And if we reflect on the small beginnings of this power, the difficulties

it four wings of a fowl; the beast had also four heads; and dominion was given to it. - 7 After this I saw in the night visions, and behold a fourth beast, dreadful and terrible, and strong exceedingly; and it had great iron teeth. it devoured and brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with the feet of it; and it was diverse from all the beasts that were before it; and it had ten horns.

8 I considered the horns, and, behold, there came up among them another little which it surmounted, and the vast strides it made towards universal empire, extending its conquests as far as the Ganges in so short a space as twelve years, 1 Mac 1 7, we shall not be at a loss to assign a just interpretation to the last clause of this verse, and to conclude that such "dominion was given to it" by God, Wmle

7. — behold a fourth beast, dreadful and terrible, and strong exceedingly, ] Daniel was anxious to know particularly what this beast might mean, see ver 19, and was answered by the angel in the 24th verse. This fourth kingdom can be no other than the Roman empire, which was "dreadful, and terrible, and strong exceedingly, beyond any of the former kingdoms." It was "diverse from all kingdoms," not only in its republican form of government but likewise in strength, and power, and greatness, length of duration, and extent of dominion. "It devoured, and brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with the feet of it." It reduced Macedon into a Roman province about 168 years, the kingdom of Pergamus about 133 years, Syria about 65 years, and Egypt about 40 years, before Christ. And besides the remains of the Macedonian empire, it subdued many other provinces and kingdoms, so that it might by a very usual figure be said to "devour the whole earth, and tread it down, and break it in pieces," and became in a manner what the Roman writers delighted to call it, the empire of the whole world. Bp Newton

Daniel has not described the shape of this beast, but St. John has supplied the deficiency, representing it in the Apocalypse as compounded of all the parts of composing their destructive qualities, having "the body of the leopard, the feet of the bear, and the mouth of the lion," and exceeding them in having seven heads, but with the same number of ten horns, which marks its identity with Daniel's fourth beast, Rev. xiii 1, 2. Dr Hales

It stamped the residue with the feet of it. ] This alludes to the fury of wild beasts, which stamp upon that part of their prey that they cannot devour. W. Lank and it had ten horns. ] Another remarkable property of this fourth beast is, that "it had ten horns" and according to the usual interpretation, ver 24, "the ten horns out of this kingdom are ten kings, or kingdoms, that shall arise." Four kingdoms a little before, ver 17, signified four kingdoms; and so here "ten horns" are ten kingdoms, according to the usual phraseology of Scripture. We must look for these kingdoms amid the broken pieces of the Roman empire, represented under the fourth beast. The Roman empire was, by means of the incursions of the northern nations, dismembered into ten kingdoms, and Machiavel hath given us their names, 1 the Ostrogoths in Mesia; 2 the Visigoths in Pannonia, 3 the Sueves and Alans in Gasconne and Spain, 4 the Vandals in Africa, 5 the Franks in France, 6 the Burgundians in Burgundy, 7 the Heruli and Furingi in Italy, 8 the Saxons and Angles in Britain, 9 the Huns in Hungary, 10 the Lombards, at first upon the Danube, afterwards in Italy. Dr Newton

The names of these ten kingdoms have been enumerated by several writers of the most respectable authority and the few variations in their accounts may be readily explained from the confusion and uncertainty of the times of which they wrote. It is enough for us, and an illustrious verification of the prophecies of Holy Scripture, that such a partition was noticed long before horn, before whom there were three of the first horns plucked up by the roots and, behold, in this horn were eyes like the eyes of man, and a mouth speaking great things.

9 I beheld till the thrones were cast down, and the Ancient of days did sit, whose garment was white as snow, and the hair of his head like the pure wool his throne was like the fiery flame, and his wheels as burning fire

10 A fiery stream issued and came forth by Daniel; and that among other particularities mentioned is incident to the fourth beast, this of ten horns springing all together from its head was recorded as one, and that these horns were expressly interpreted to mean ten kings or kingdoms. Bp Hallifax

8. — behold, there came up among them another little horn. ] In all the several respects, which the Prophet notices, the Pope fully answers the character of the "little horn" so that if exactness of application may assure us of the true sense of the prophecy we can have no doubt concerning the person. He is here called "a little horn" and the power of the popes was originally very small, and their temporal dominions were little, and inconsiderable in comparison with others of the ten horns. Bp Newton For the several points of resemblance, see the notes on ver 20, 21, 24, 25.

— before whom there were three of the first horns plucked up by the roots. ] Three of the ten kingdoms, namely, those of the Heruli, the Ostrogoths, and the Lombards, were successively plucked up or eradicated before the little horn, in the way of which they stood and by the annexation of their dominions to the papacy, the Pope became also a temporal power. Hence he assumed the three keys in his arms and the triple crown or mitre, as a temporal prince, and "his look was more stout than his fellows," whom he frequently awed by his anathemas and excommunications. Dr Hales

— in this horn were eyes &c ] See below on ver 20

9 I beheld till the thrones were cast down &c ] That is till all the earthly kingdoms were brought to an end but the word may be rendered "were pitched or set down, for the reception of the Deity, and the saints who sat by Him." see Matt xix 28 and Rev iv 4, and this sentence the visions follow. Wmle

The fourth monarchy being to continue till the consummation of all things, the general judgment is described in this and the following verses, wherein sentence is to pass upon this fourth beast, and an end to be put to his dominion. Wmle

— the Ancient of days ] The eternal Judge of the world, see Rev xvi 5. He that was from the beginning 1 John ii 14 who is elsewhere described "covering himself with light" with a garment, Ps civ 2 and as a clear and unspotted brightness, 1 John i 5. Wmle

By this term is undoubtedly meant the Deity the supreme eternal Spirit, whom the Prophet thus describe to adapt himself to human apprehensions, and to make the following part of his descriptions more intelligible, but no man had is pointed out, nor ought we from hence to attempt to represent by any figure the invisible God. Image-worship was not allowed the Jews under a less perfect dispensation and therefore must be very ill-suited to the spirituality of the Christian service. The purity and sanctity of the Divine nature are next shadowed forth by similar allusions. The throne and wheels of fire at the conclusion of this verse may serve to denote His dread majesty, that pierces and penetrates all things, summons all to His judgment and execute in an instant His sovereign will and final determination. See Rev iv 2, &c and Ezek i 96. Crotius observes, the ancient throne and curule chairs had wheels. Wmle

10 A fiery stream issued and came forth from before him ] Lightnings and streams of fire were His harbingers to give notice of His speedy approach. Compare Ps i 3, xlviii 5. Wmle

22 Until the Ancient of days came, &c. ] Until the final judgment, when the saints shall sit as assessors with God, shall be seated on thrones, and reign as kings and priests with God and Christ, and possess the kingdom for ever, Rev xxi 4, 6 Windle.

24 — and another shall rise after them. ] Rather, "behind them" the meaning appears to be, that the ten horns were not aware of the growing up of "the little horn," till it overtopped them Jos. Mede.

— he shall be diverse from the first. ] The papal power being an ecclesiastical and spiritual, as well as a civil and temporal authority Bp Newton

— he shall subdue three kings ] See note on ver 8, "before whom there were three &c."

25 And he shall speak great words against the most High. ] See ver 8, 20; chap xi 36 St. John plainly alludes to this text, Rev xiii 5, 6 where the beast is said to "open his mouth in blasphemy against God." This he did by advancing his own authority above that of God, and in derogation to His laws, compare 2 Thess ii 4, as also by setting up the worship of images, and other idolatrous practices, which the Prophet Isaiah calls reproaching and blaspheming God, Is lxi 7 Windle

Or, as Symmachus interprets it, "he shall speak great words as the Most High," setting up himself above all laws divine and human, arrogating to himself godlike attributes and titles of holiness and infallibility, exacting obedience to his ordinances and decrees in preference to, and open violation of, reason and Scripture, insulting men and blaspheming God Bp Newton

times and half a time, or three years and a half, are reckoned in the Revelation as equivalent to "forty and two months" or "thousand two hundred and threescore days," chap xi 2 xii 6, 14 and a day in the style of the Prophet's seven, Ezek xlvi 8 and it is confessed, that the seventy weeks in the ninth chapter of Daniel are weeks of years, and consequently 1260 days are 1260 years So long the little horn, or the papal power will continue but from what point of time the commencement of these 1260 years is to be dated, is not so easy to determine And as Irenaeus saith in a like case, it is surer and safer to wait for the completion of the prophecy, than to conjecture and divine about it. When the end shall come, then shall we know better whence to date the beginning Bp Newton

26 But the judgment shall sit, &c. ] This being the list of the four earthly kingdoms or monarchies, when that is destroyed there will be an end of the present state of things when all human rule, authority, and power shall cease 1 Cor xxi 24 and "the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of His Christ, Rev xxi 15 Windle

After what manner these great changes will be effected we cannot pretend to say, since God hath not been pleased to reveal it We see the remains of the "ten horns," which now out of the Roman empire We see the "little horn" still subsisting though not in its full strength and vigour, but as we hope upon the decline, and tending towards a dissolution And having seen so many of these particulars accomplished, we can have no reason to doubt that the rest also will be fulfilled in due season though we cannot frame any conception, how Christ will be manifested in glory, how the little horn with the body of the fourth beast will be given to the burning flame or how the saints will take the kingdom and possess it for ever and ever It is the nature of such prophecies not to be perfectly understood till they are fulfilled The best comment upon them will be their completion Bp Newton

Chap VIII Hitherto the prophecies of Daniel, that is, from the fourth verse of the second chapter to this chapter, are written in Chaldean As they greatly concerned the Chaldeans, so they were published in that language But the remaining prophecies are written in Hebrew because they treat altogether of our subsequent to the times of the Chaldeans, and relate not at all to them but principally to the Church and people of God Bp Newton probably comprehended the whole country on each side of the river Euphrates, the one part being called Elymais, the other Susiana. Shushim, the metropolis, according to Pliny, was located on this river, or rather surrounded by it, and seems to have been the capital of both parts. Hunt. See the note on Num 11.

The Euphrates is the same as the Chorspes, according to Rennell's geography of Herodotus. Dr Hales.

— there stood before the river a ram]. The second empire in the former vision is the first in this, and what was there compared to a bear is here prefigured by a ram. This "ram having two horns" according to the explication of the angel Gabriel, is the empire of the Medes and Persians, ver 20, Cyrus, the under of this empire, was son of Cambyses, king of Persia, and his mother Maudine was grandson of Astyages king of Media, after wards marrying the daughter and only child of his uncle, Darius, king of Media, he succeeded to both crowns, and united the kingdoms of Media and Persia. The propriety of the emblem appears from hence, that it was usual for the king of Persia to wear instead of a diadem a ram's head made of gold, and adorned with precious stones. Bp Newton. Rams heads with horns one higher and the other lower, are still to be seen on the ruins of Persepolis. See J Chardin.

— the two horns were high &c]. This is said, because the empire of the Medes and Persians was a coalition of two very formidable powers, but one was higher than the other, and the higher came up last. The kingdom of Media was the more ancient of the two, and more famous in history. Persia was of little account till the time of Cyrus, but under Cyrus the Persians gained and maintained the ascendant. Bp Newton.

4 I saw the ram pushing westward and northward, and southward]. Daniel saw the ram standing or established in his strength after the succession of the Persian power under Cyrus, he then pushing westward, and northward, and southward, including Lydia, Babylonia, and Egypt, with their dependencies, represented in the former vision by three ribs in the bear's back. Dr Hales.

— he did according to his will, and became great]. None of the neighboring kingdoms being able to withstand its power, the Persian empire was increased and enlarged to such a degree, that it extended from India even unto Ethiopia, over an hundred and seven and twenty provinces. Isth 11. So that seven provinces were added to the hundred and twenty which it contained in the time of Cyrus, Dan vi 1. Bp Newton.

— he touched not the ground]. The interpretation of which is given in ver 21. A goat very properly made the type of the Grecian or Macedonian empire. The first king of the Macedonians, about 200 years before Daniel, instigated by an oracle, as it is said, made a goat his ensign, and called his capital city Agæa, or the goat's town. See Mede. It is also remarkable that Alexander's son by Roxana was named the son of the goat, and some of

6 And he came to the ram that had two horns, which I had seen standing before the river, and ran unto him in the fury of his power.

7 And I saw him come close unto the ram, and he was moved with choler against him, and smote the ram, and brake his two horns, and there was no power in the ram to stand before him, but he cast him down to the ground, and stamped upon him, and there was none that could deliver the ram out of his hand.

8 Therefore the he goat waxed very great, and when he was strong, the great horn was broken, and for it came up four notable ones toward the four winds of heaven.

his successors are represented on their coins with goat's horns. Bp Newton.

— came from the west &c]. He came "from the west," for Europe lies westward of Asia, he came "on the face of the whole earth, carrying every thing before him in all the three parts of the world then known," and he touched not the ground, alluding to the swiftness of his marches, and the rapidity of his conquests. For the same reason the same empire in the former vision was likened to a "leopard," which is a swift nimble animal, and, to denote the greater quickness and impetuosity, to "a leopard with four wings." Bp Newton.

— and the goat had a notable horn between his eyes]. The rough goat (see the 21st verse) "is the king of Grecia, that is, the kingdom; and the great horn between his eyes is the first king: not the first monarch, but the first kingdom, that which lasted during the reign of Alexander the Great, and his brother, Aridæus, and two young sons, Alexander and Hercules." See Isaac Newton.

6, 7 And he came to the ram &c]. In these two verses we have an account of the Grecians overthrowing the Persian empire. The ram had before "pushed westward" and the Persians, in the reign of Darius Hystaspes and Xerxes, had poured down with great armies into Greece, but now the Grecians in return carried their arms into Asia, and the he goat invaded the ram that had invaded him. Bp Newton.

— standing before the river, &c]. The first and principal engagement in which Alexander overthrew the Persians was at the river Granicus in Phrygia. The succeeding part of this description is a striking representation of his conquering the Persian monarch in repeated battles, subduing his whole kingdom, taking all his forts and strong cities, making the king himself, with his family, principal officers, &c prisoners, and thus utterly overturning the Persian empire. Bp Newton.

8 Therefore the he goat waxed very great, and when he was strong, &c]. This verse is interpreted by the angel in ver 22. Nothing is fixed and stable in human affairs, and the empire of the goat, though exceeding great, was perhaps for that very reason the sooner broken in pieces. It was in its full strength, when Alexander died of a fever at Babylon. He was succeeded in the throne by his natural brother Philip Aridæus, and by his own two sons, Alexander Agæus and Hercules, but in the space of about fifteen years they were all murdered, and then the first horn or kingdom was entirely broken. The royal family being thus extinct, the governors of provinces, who had usurped the power, assumed the title of kings, and, by the defeat and death of Antigonus in the battle of Ipsus, they were reduced to four, Cassander, Lysimachus, Ptolemy, and Seleucus, who partitioned Alexander's dominions among them, and divided and settled them into four kingdoms. These four kingdoms were the four notable horns which came up in the room of the first great horn, and are the same as the four heads of the leopard in the former

"I our kingdoms shall stand up out of the nation, but not in his power, they were to be kingdoms of Greeks, not of Alexander's own family, but only of his nation, and neither were they to be equal to him in power and dominion: an empire united is certainly more powerful than the same empire divided, and the whole is greater than any of the parts. They were likewise to send toward the four winds of heaven, and in the partition of the empire Cassander held Macedon, and Greece, and the western part, Lyfimachus had Thrace, Bithynia, and the northern regions, Ptolemy possessed Egypt, and the southern countries, and Seleucus obtained Syria, and the eastward provinces. Thus were they divided "toward the four winds of heaven." Bp Newton

9 And out of one of them came forth a little horn, &c.] This "little horn" has been supposed to mean Antiochus Epiphanes, king of Syria, who was a great enemy and cruel persecutor of the Jews. And at first sight he does indeed in some features very much resemble the "little horn," but on a nearer view it appears, that in other parts there is no similitude or correspondence between them. Sir Isaac Newton, with that sagacity which was peculiar to him, and with which he penetrated into Scripture as well as into nature, perceived plainly that the "little horn" could not be drawn for Antiochus Epiphanes, but must be designed for some other subject. Bp Newton. The description of it throughout is exactly applicable in all its parts to the Roman temporal power, and this application is sanctioned also by the prevailing opinion of the generality of commentators. Dr Hales. The Romans, who were prefigured by a great beast in the former vision, are here represented by the "horn of the goat" for nothing is more usual than to describe the same person or thing under different images upon different occasions: and besides in this vision the Roman empire is not designed at large, but only the Roman empire as the horn of the goat. When the Romans first got footing in Greece, then they became a horn of the goat. Out of this horn they came, and at first were a "little horn," but in process of time overtopped the other horns. From Greece they extended their arms, and overran the other parts of the goat's dominions: and their actions within the dominions of the goat and not their assaults in the western empire, are the principal subject of this prophecy. But their actions, which are most largely and particularly specified, are their great persecution and oppression of the people of God, which renders it probable that the appellation of the "little horn" might be given them for the same reason, that the great persecutor and oppressor of the saints in the western empire is also called the "little horn." It is the same kind of power, and therefore might be signified by the same name. Bp Newton which waxed exceeding great, toward the south, and toward the east, and toward the pleasant land.] This horn therefore was to rise up in the northwest parts of those nations, which composed the body of the goat, and from thence was to extend his dominion towards Egypt, Syria and Judea. Sir Isaac Newton

The actions of the little horn here described accord well with the Romans. He "waxed exceeding great," and so did the Roman empire even within the territory of the goat. "Toward the south," the Romans made Egypt a province of their empire, and kept possession of it for several centuries. "Toward the east," the Romans grew very powerful in this direction conquering and making a province of Syria, which was the eastern kingdom of the goat. "And toward the pleasant land," that is,

10 And it waxed great, even to the host of heaven, &c.] Or "against the host of heaven." This part of the prophecy relates mostly to the persecution and oppression of the people of God. "The host of heaven are the people and great men of the Jews." Sir Isaac Newton. Either the Jewish state in general, the mighty and the holy people, ver 24, or the priests and Levites in particular, who are called "stars," as being eminent for their station, and illustrious for their knowledge, and the host of heaven, is they watched and served in the temple, and their service is denominated "a warfare," Numb viii 21. Our Saviour makes use of the like expressions in speaking of the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans, Matt xxiv 29. Bp Newton

In this elevated language is the Jewish hierarchy shadowed out, after the manner of the Eastern writers. The Jewish polity, both civil and religious, was the work of Heaven. The government, laws, and worship, of the holy people were figured by the sun, moon, and stars. See Matt xxiv 29 Mark xiii 24. Thus the fall of Babylon is foretold in I xiii 10 and the destruction of Egypt in I xxi 7, 8, and that of Idumea in I xxiv 4, 5. Dr Zouch

11 Yea, he magnified himself even to the prince of the host.] Or "against the prince of the host." Bp Newton. The Messiah the Prince of the Jews whom he put to death. Sir Isaac Newton. See the note on ver 25 and by him the daily sacrifice was taken away, and the place of his sanctuary was cast down.] The Romans took away the daily sacrifice of the Jews, and utterly destroyed their temple. Bp Newton

In the 7th ver c the he goat is said to cast down the sun to the ground and to stamp upon him, by which is implied the total destruction of the sun. And here the expressions of casting down some of the host and of the stars to the ground and stamping upon them, of taking away the daily sacrifice, and casting down the place of the sanctuary, seem to prefigure the most grievous miseries the utter demolition and extinction of the Jewish state the dreadful devastation made by the Romans under Titus Vespasian, when the stars fell from heaven, and the powers of the heavens were shaken. Dr Zouch

12 And an host was given &c.] Or as we said in the margin, "the host was given over for the transgression against the daily sacrifice, and he cast down the truth to the ground, and he practised and prospered." Or, as the same thing is expressed by the angel, "He shall destroy wonderfully &c." see ver 24, 25. The Romans carried their conquest and their revenge so far, as to put an end to the government of the Jews, and entirely to take away their place and nation. Bp Newton

— How long shall be the vision &c ] Moses had predicted, that the desolation to follow the Roman captivity would be of very long continuance, Deut xxviii 59 And Isaiah had inquired from the Oracle, in vision, How long it should continue? Is vi 11 to which no definite answer was then given. That was reserved for the highly favoured Daniel in this remarkable episode introduced into the midst of the second vision, and intimately connected therewith immediately following the account of the destruction of the temple by the Romans Dr Hales

— the vision concerning the daily sacrifice &c ] In the original there is no such word as concerning, and Mr Lowth rightly observe that the words may be rendered more agreeably to the Hebrew thus: For how long a time shall the vision last, the daily sacrifice be taken away, and the transgression of desolation continue? &c Thus it is rendered in several translations. The answer is: Unto two thousand and three hundred days, then shall the sanctuary be cleansed. In the original it is: unto two thousand and three hundred evenings and mornings, in evening and morning being in Hebrew the notation of time for a day, and in allusion to this expression it is said afterwards, The vision of the evening, and the morning is true.

The days without doubt are to be taken agreeably to the style of Daniel in other places, not for natural but prophetic days, that is years, and is the question was asked, not only how long the daily sacrifice should be taken away, and the transgression of desolation continue, but also how long the vision shall last, so the answer is to be understood, and these two thousand and three hundred days denote the whole time from the beginning of the vision to the cleansing of the sanctuary. The sanctuary is not yet cleansed, and consequently these years are not yet expired. When the year shall be expired then their end will clearly show from whence the beginning is to be dated, whether from the vision of the ram, or of the he goat, or of the little horn. It is difficult to fix the precise time, when the prophetic dates begin, and when they end, till the prophecies are fulfilled, and the event declares the certainty of them. Bp Newton

The Person who utters this voice seems to be the same who is called "the wonderful Numberer," ver 13, because He speaks as one that had authority over the angel Gabriel. W Louth

Daniel was so overpowered by the Divine presence, that he fell on his face in a deep sleep or trance towards the earth, till Gabriel touched him, and restored him to his senses, and set him upright, and then explained to him more particularly the former historical part of the vision, concluding with a reference to the latter chronological part, or "vision of the evening-mornings," that it was "true, or would be verified by the accomplishment, but that the accomplishment was remote, or "for many days, and that "the vision was shut up," or sealed, and its further disclosure hidden for the present. Dr Hales

17 — O son of man ] This title is given to none of the Prophets, but Ezekiel and Daniel. Probably it is here given to the Prophet, either to put him in mind that he was but flesh and blood, that he might not be exalted for having these heavenly visions imparted to him, or else it may be interpreted to be a mark or title of honour, implying something more than an ordinary man, even such an one as was highly favoured and beloved of God. — a king of fierce countenance, and understanding dark sentences ] A king in the prophetick style is the same as "a kingdom, and a kingdom is any state or government. Bp Newton

What follows is a description of the Roman power and policy in subduing the world by force and fraud. That peculiar characteristic of the Romans, "the fierce countenance, first noticed by Moses, Deut xxviii 50, is here repeated, so as to leave no doubt of its application. Dr Hales. The classical reader will doubtless recollect numberless instances of that peculiar trait in the person of a Roman citizen, which the Prophets Moses and Daniel have conveyed by the term of "a fierce countenance. Dr Zouch

The latter phrase is translated in the Syriack, 'skilful in ruling' and in the Arabick, 'skilful of disputations'. It may mean, that this would be a politick and artful, as well as a formidable power. Bp Newton

The policy, with which the Romans conducted their designs, is thought to be meant in this passage, in allusion to their adroitness and penetration in discovering the designs of their enemies, their knowledge of the parties and interests that prevailed in the courts and councils of different princes, in short, their consummate skill in the intricacies of political intrigue. The contrivances of artful and subtle statesmen may very justly be called "dark sentences". In the art of unravelling their covert and secret machinations, consisted the singular address, which distinguished the character of the Roman people. Their arms were victorious but their victories were ensured only by the artifice and prudence with which they conducted themselves on every occasion. Dr Zouch

24 And his power shall be mighty, but not by his own power ] The strength of the other kingdoms consisted in themselves, and had its foundation in some part of the goat, but the Roman empire, as a horn of the kingdom of the goat, was not mighty by its own power, was not strong by virtue of the goat, but drew its nourishment and strength from Rome and Italy. There grew the trunk and body of the tree, though the branches extended over Greece, Asia, Syria, and Egypt. Bp Newton. Or, it may mean, that the singular progress of the Roman greatness was to be attributed not so much to their own strength, as to the assistance of their allies and not seldom to the feuds and divisions of their enemies, of which they were always on the watch to take advantage. Dr Hales. It was the consummate policy of the Romans to use the resources and strength of every conquered nation in still further conquest, and thus to make the world as it were, the great instrument of its own subjection. Dr Zouch

— and he shall destroy wonderfully, &c. ] See the note on ver 12. The Romans destroyed wonderfully both by their arms and then arts, and even in times of peace by their cruel and bloody combats of gladiators and captives. Dr Hales

Rome was the seat of perpetual wars. Mithridates, when he saw the Romans eager to watch every opportunity of embroiling themselves in war, said of them, "These conquerors of mankind seem to be really descendants of a wolf, such is their rapacity, such their insatiable avidity. In wars with foreign nations they were not springing of the blood of their enemies. Their cruelty excites our indignation. The effusion of blood in their civil combats, the dreadful carnage which followed their odious processions, the savage massacres of their best and most virtuous citizens can only tend to inspire sentiments of honour and aversion. And, as to their humanity in the administration of justice, practise, and shall destroy the mighty and the holy people. Before CHRIST about 553

25 And through his policy also he shall cause craft to prosper in his hand, and he shall magnify himself in his heart, and by many of their laws may be said, like those of Draco, to have been written in blood. Dr Zouch

— and shall prosper. ] What nation was ever so successful as the Romans? Even their temporary disappointments and defeats gave fresh vigour to them. They continually renewed their strength, after the most violent and rude attacks, and then for a short time deep sunk in calamity and distress, they laboured not but with redoubled efforts exerted their wonted prowess. They seem to have been thoroughly sensible of their own good fortune as appears from the inscriptions on their coins, indicating in various phrases their sense of the prosperity of their empire. It may be added, that this good fortune peculiarly attended them in their eastern conquests. Dr Zouch

— and practise. ] That is, shall perform great actions. The great and splendid actions of the Romans have commanded the admiration of all ages. To this subject the punyrist finds himself unequal. So long as the volumes of history are read the achievements of this wonderful people will be viewed with astonishment and applause. Dr Zouch

— and shall destroy the mighty and the holy people. ] And thus fully accomplish the direful imprecation of the Jews, when they urged Pontius Pilate to hasten the death of Jesus Christ. "His blood be on us and on our children." Dr Zouch. Concerning the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans see the notes on Deut xxviii, Matt xxiv.

25 And through his policy also he shall cause craft to prosper in his hand. ] The original word rendered 'craft' is always taken in a bad sense, and implies every kind of fraud, injustice, and deception. This strong lineament is exemplified by the insincerity, artifice, and injustice of the Roman patricians in their conduct towards the plebeians, but it peculiarly belongs to the character of the Romans, if we consider those scenes of fraud and injustice, which were exhibited by them towards the conquered nations, when reduced to the form of a province. Dr Zouch

— and he shall magnify himself in his heart. ] See 1 Mac viii 13. This expression is strictly applicable to the insolent conduct of Rome after a successful and destructive war. The epithets so liberally bestowed on the city of Rome upon ancient coins and medals, imply much vanity and presumption. Proud and arrogant titles were conferred upon the Roman emperors. Indeed their poets, their orators, and their historians seldom omit an opportunity of exulting in the boasted universal empire of the city. The citizens held themselves equal to kings and princes. They confounded their dominion with the extent of the globe of the earth. Cicero speaks of Rome in all the language of punyry, and by one of her own historians, Rome is pronounced to be the city destined for the habitation of men and gods. Dr Zouch

— and by peace shall destroy many. ] Or rather in peace shall destroy many. Even in times of tranquillity and peace he shall delight in scenes of cruelty and slaughter. As the character of a people may be deduced from their diversions, when we consider the entertainments to which the Romans were principally addicted we must, I fear, pronounce them a people estranged from the sentiment of humanity in peace destroying many. What can fix them in a more unpleasant point of view than the sneers of their gladiators? Even in the most flourishing and polished periods of their state they left their theatres, to become spectators of cruel and bloody combats. Nor has a single writer among them intimated his disapprobation of such a conduct except Seneca the philosopher. Their other diversions, such as the sight of their fellow creatures torn in pieces by wild beasts did not discover marks of a more mild and merciful temper. Lipsius has observed, that no war brought such slaughter and devastation on the human race as these diversions, and that one month has cost Europe twenty or thirty thousand lives. Dr Zouch

— he shall also stand up against the Prince of princes ] It was by the malice of the Jews but by the authority of the Romans that the Messiah was put to death and He suffered the punishment of the Roman malefactors and slaves Bp Newton "He shall stand up against, that is, shall become the judge of "the Prince of princes" The word rendered "shall stand up against," is probably used here as in other passages of Scripture, in a forensic sense and thus expresses, in vivid colours, the judicial proceedings of the Roman judge against Jesus Christ For that by "the Prince of prince" is here meant Jesus Christ will admit I think of little doubt This splendid title is properly applied to Him who is called the "Prince of the kings of the earth," Rev xix 15 Lord of lords and king of kings Rev xix 14 The Prince of Peace, Isa ix 6 whose "dominion is an ever-lasting dominion which shall not pass away," Dan vii 14, "to whom all power was given in heaven and in earth," Matt xxviii 18, who like a triumphant conqueror, "led captivity captive," 1 Ph ii 8 who is the "Star that was to come out of Jacob," and the "Seed" that was to arise out of Israel Numb xix 17, before whom "all kings shall fall down," and whom "all nations shall serve" Psa lxxii 11 the "Prince or Captain of our salvation," Heb ii 10 Or, "to stand up against the Prince of princes" may be interpreted, to oppose His authority, by persecuting His faithful servants and depreciating their merit and thus to wage war against Him and His religion The page of history is stained with deeds of exquisite cruelty and inhuman barbarity exercised by the Romans against the first professors of Christianity and while the supreme magistrate of Rome indulged himself in the various modes of torture the zeal of the historians was equally exerted in debasing the characters of innocent men and branding their religion with odious appellations Dr Louth

— but he shall be broken without hand ] As the stone, in Nebuchadnezzar's dream, was "cut out of the mountain without hands" that is not by human, but by supernatural means so the little horn shall be broken without hand not die the common death nor fall by the hand of men, but perish by a stroke from Heaven And this agrees perfectly with other predictions of the fatal catastrophe of Rome See chap ii 31 vii 11, 26 All which implies that the dominion of the Romans shall be finally destroyed with some extraordinary manifestation of the Divine power Bp Newton

To a reader conversant in the history of Rome the character of the Romans will appear to be most accurately defined in this justly celebrated prophecy a being 1 A people of fierce countenance of great personal courage 2 Noted also for their policy and wisdom 3 Rising to dominion and power, not so much by their own strength as by the assistance of their enemies 4 Engaged in almost perpetual wars and making dreadful havoc and slaughter on the earth 5 Generally successful in their designs 6 Performing great and illustrious actions and, 7 Appointed by Providence as an instrument for the punishment of the Jews the holy people of God 8 Corruption soon prevailed among the Romans, fraud and extortion prospered in their provinces 9 This people assumed high and lofty titles, treating their conquered enemies with great insolence and pride, and considering themselves as sovereigns of the universe 10 In times of peace fastening their eyes with cruel and bloody spectacles 11 And to complete the whole, we see a Roman magistrate judging the Messiah, and passing the sentence of death upon "the Prince of prince" It must be allowed that the annals of Rome are adorned with noble examples of genuine and disinterested virtue Yet whatever encomium is due to the great and splendid qualities of several illustrious individuals, displayed both in publick and in private life, perhaps the national character of the Romans cannot be more clearly delineated than in the portrait, which is here presented to us Dr Louth

— wherefore shut thou up the vision ] The same thing is expressed by "shutting up the words," and "sealing the book" chap xii 4 The expression in both places denotes the concealing of the sense of it from common understandings or the deferring of the accomplishment of the events therein foretold So we find "shutting and "opening," "sealing and "unfolding," are opposed in the prophetic language and import the same as concealing and revealing, delaying the accomplishment of a prophecy, and bringing it into effect See Isa xxix 11 Rev v 1—5, xii 10 The words instruct us, that prophecies are never fully understood till they are accomplished, and the nearer the time approaches of their accomplishment, the more light shall diligent searchers have for explaining them See chap vii 4 H Louth

Chap IX This chapter contains a very affecting and fervent prayer of Daniel on a near view of the expiration of the seventy years allotted for Judah's captivity, the success of his prayer is pointed out at the conclusion of it, and the deliverance of his brethren is communicated to the Prophet in a very extraordinary revelation by the angel Gabriel but the misconduct and ingratitude of the Jews would occasion the utter destruction of their restored city, after a period, and by reason of an event, which the prophecy plainly indicates Wright

4 And I prayed unto the Lord my God, and made my confession, and said, O Lord, the great and dreadful God, keeping the covenant and mercy to them that love him, and to them that keep his commandments,

5 We have sinned, and have committed iniquity, and have done wickedly, and have rebelled, even by departing from thy precepts and from thy judgments

6 Neither have we hearkened unto thy servants the prophets, which spake in thy name to our kings, our princes, and our fathers, and to all the people of the land

7 O Lord, righteousness belongeth unto thee, but unto us confusion of faces, as at this day, to the men of Judah, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and unto all Israel, that are near, and that are far off, through all the countries whither thou hast driven them, because of their trespass that they have trespassed against thee

8 O Lord, to us belongeth confusion of face, to our kings, to our princes, and to our fathers, because we have sinned against thee

9 To the Lord our God belong mercies and forgivenesses, though we have rebelled against him,

10 Neither have we obeyed the voice of the Lord our God, to walk in his laws, which he set before us by his servants the prophets

11 Yea, all Israel have transgressed thy law, even by departing, that they might not obey thy voice, therefore the curse is poured upon us, and the oath that is written in the law of Moses the servant of God, because we have sinned against him

12 And he hath confirmed his words, which he spake against us, and against our judges that judged us, by bringing upon us a great evil for under the whole heaven hath not been done as hath been done upon Jerusalem

13 As it is written in the law of Moses, all this evil is come upon us yet we made not our prayer before the Lord our God, that we might turn from our iniquities, and understand thy truth

14 Therefore hath the Lord watched upon the evil, and brought it upon us for the Lord our God is righteous in all his works which he doeth for we obeyed not his voice

Daniel here sets himself to confess his sins, and those of his countrymen and to entreat for mercy on Jerusalem with a fervour and affection never to be exceeded Our devotions, according to this model should consist of confession of sins deprecation of the punishments and judgments acknowledged to be justly due to them supplication for pardon, deliverance and grace, and intercession for the Church, and all included in her our relations, friends countrymen and fellow Christians, and more especially for all the sons and daughters of affliction the whole to be concluded with thanksgiving, concerning which we may observe, that no situation in this world can exclude the necessity, and take away the ground of it, since we find Daniel giving thanks, when the city and temple of God were in ashes, and him (1st captiv in Babylon) Even then he not only "prayed, but also

This expression, "for the Lord's sake," seems to point out a personal distinction in the Deity, and to refer to the promised Redeemer, who says of Himself, "I am in the Father, and the Father in Me." John xiv 11. that Lord, for whose sake alone the petition of the Prophet seems to be heard and accepted. Many similar passages occur in the Old Testament, showing a plurality of Divine Persons so clearly that no one who has not "the veil upon his heart," can well mistake their meaning. See particularly Zech ii 10 11 see also Ps cx 1 Waldo

To the same effect with this supplication of Daniel are those petitions in our litany where we pray God to "deliver us for His name's sake" and presently after for His honour. In both which petition we implore the aid and protection of Almighty God not for any merit of our own, but from a deep sense of His boundless mercy and goodness, not merely that we may be delivered but that His honour and glory may be displayed, that men may know, that "He, whose name alone is Jehovah, is the Most High over all the earth." carefully to what is said, for this prophecy contains in it truths of the greatest importance. Our Saviour plainly refers to these words, which are repeated ver 25, when, explaining the latter part of this prophecy of the final destruction of Jerusalem He adds, "Whoso readeth &c shall understand," Matth xxii 15 W Louth

This prophecy, like all the rest of Daniel's, consists of two parts, an introductory prophecy, and an explanation thereof. See Isaas lxxxi.

21 Seventy weeks are determined upon thy people &c ] By seventy weeks we are to understand seventy weeks of years or seventy times seven years, that is, 490 years each day being accounted for a year, according to the prophetic way of reckoning see Numb xiv 34, Ezek iv 6. Daniel, by examining the prophecy of Jeremiah, had discovered, that the seventy years of the captivity were nearly expired, and here the angel reveals to him another line of time, reporting that Jerusalem, after its restoration, should be destroyed again, and that the time of its destruction should be seventy times seventy years, which being added, it should be finally destroyed W Louth

Here, by putting a week for seven years, are reckoned 490 years from the time that the dispersed Jews should be reincorporated into a people and a city, until the death and resurrection of Christ, where the transgression should be finished and sin should be brought to an end, and everlasting righteousness brought in, and the time should be accomplished, and the Prophet (as in the Hebrew) 'consummated,' that Prophet whom the Jews expected and whereby the Most Holy should be anointed, He who is therefore in the next verse called "the Anointed," that is, the Messiah, or the Christ. For by joining the accomplishment of the vision with the expiation of sins, the 490 years are ended with the death of Christ. Now the dispersed Jews became a people and city, when they first returned into a polity or body polittick and this was in the seventh year of Darius Iongimanus, when Ezra returned with a body of Jews from captivity, and revived the Jewish worship, and by the king's commission created magistrates in all the land to judge and govern the people according to the laws of God and of the king, Ezra vii 26. From this year to the death of Christ was just 490 years. See Isaac Newton See the note on ver 26. Some chronologers date the seventy weeks from the twentieth of Nisan, whereas the date here assigned appears preferable.

— upon thy people and upon thy holy city ] Daniel, in his prayer to God, speaking of the Jews and Jerusalem, had used these expressions, "Thy people, and thy holy city," ver 18, 19, as if their title to God's favour was undefeasible. To correct this mistake, the angel, directing his discourse to Daniel, returns him his own expressions, as if the people of the city were rather his than God's. In the same phrase God speaks to Moses after the sin of the Israelites in making the golden calf, Exod

At the expiration of this time, which God had punctually determined, or allotted for the people of the Jews, they were to be no longer His peculiar people, nor the once holy city Jerusalem nor the Mosiac worship, any longer to be owned as His peculiar city or worship; and then "the most Holy should be anointed, the Messiah, or Christ, be manifested, 'to finish the transgression, restrain impiety by the Gospel' "and to make an end of sins, by taking away the guilt thereof through His death, instead of the Jewish offerings, which were to cease, and thereby "to make reconciliation with God the Father "and to bring in everlasting righteousness, not like that of the Law, but of the Gospel, to endure for ever, and so "to seal up the vision and prophecy, fully to complete and finish all that by former visions and prophecies had been revealed" (Collyer

25 — from the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem] Daniel had besought God to "behold their desolations, and the ruins of "the city which was called by His name ver 18 In answer to this his supplication, the angel acquaints him that the city, both the streets and the wall thereof, should be rebuilt W Louth

Darius had this prophecy in the same year that Darius the Mede and Cyrus took Babylon, which was the 538th year before Christ. Some time after this a decree must be found for building Jerusalem that now lay in the ruins wherein Nebuchadnezzar left it. Cyrus's decree two years after was not such an one, for that appears to be only a liberty to return and rebuild the temple, Ezra i 1 & 2. The next decree we read of was in the second year of Darius, which was no more than a reinforcement of Cyrus's former decree, Ezra vi 5. A few houses were then hastily constructed, to accommodate the builders and the worshippers. But the people were like a rope of sand, without the bands of laws and civil sanctions to knit them into a political body, before the seventh year of Artaxerxes, Ezra vii 11 there was no face of a city, the walls were broken down, and the gates lay, as they had been burnt with fire by the Chaldees. By Chandler See the note on ver 26.

That is, after the sixty-two added to the seven foregoing weeks or after the termination of the 483 years Hille. The common interpretation is that in the seventieth or last week the Messiah should be put to death W. Lomth.

The commencement of the whole period of seventy weeks or 490 years, being reckoned from the seventh year of Artaxerxes ~~falls~~ upon the 477th year before the Christian era. To 457 years before the birth of Christ, add twenty six years after the birth of Christ, which twenty-six is the number that 483 years or sixty nine weeks exceed 457 years, and we are brought to the beginning of John the Baptist's preaching of the advent of the Messiah adding seven years, or one week, to the former we come to the thirty-third year of our Lord which was the year of Jesus Christ's death. In other words, compute 490 years the whole seventy weeks, from the seventh of Artaxerxes, by subtracting 457 years (the space of time between that year and the beginning of the Christian era) from 490, there remain thirty-three the year of our Lord's death Bp Chandler Dean Pridmore. It was in consequence of this prophecy of Daniel concerning the seventy weeks, or 490 years, that the coming of the Messiah towards the end of that period was generally expected among the nations of the East Bp Hallgar.

— and for the over spreading of abominations he shall make it desolate, even until the consummation ] He shall cause the sinful city Jerusalem to be overrun with the abominable legions of the Roman conquerors to the utter desolation thereof Bp Hall

The Romans after they had set the temple on fire, placed the idolatrous ensigns of their army over against the eastern gate of the temple, and offered sacrifice to them, as Josephus expressly tells us The word 'abominations' is commonly used for idols see 1 Kings xi 5 7 2 Kings xxiii 19 And the 'abomination of desolation, set upon the altar by Antiochus, 1 Mac i 54, is explained by the idol altar, ver 59. So the 'abominations' here spoken of properly signify the ensigns or standards of the Roman legions each standard having stamped upon it the image of the tutelary god to which the legion offered sacrifice W Lenth

— and that determined shall be poured upon the desolate ] All the judgments, which are determined, shall be fully consummated, and poured out upon this miserable city Bp Hall

The words briefly allude to those terrible calamities which made in entire destruction of that city and people, and were executed upon them in the most dreadful manner, that any nation ever suffered and with the most evident tokens of the Divine vengeance W Lenth See the notes on Deut xxviii

The events which preceded and followed the coming and sufferings of the Messiah, having been so punctually fulfilled, afford a double confirmation of His being the very same Person prophesied of and afterwards crucified nor can they, with any probability of truth be applied to any other So that we may well say This is the clearest and most express prediction in the whole Bible concerning the time of His coming and death Wogan Sir Isaac Newton justly represents this illustrious prophecy as the foundation of the Christian religion Dr Hak And Archbishop Secker has recorded the declaration of a writer upon the weeks that if he had hitherto lived an infidel, the conviction wrought in him by a just consideration of the certain sense and perfect completion of this Divine oracle was so full, that he should think it his duty to do and suffer all that was possible for human nature supported by Divine grace rather than forfeit his faith Windle

Chap X This last vision in the third year of Cyrus, not long before the Prophet's death was ushered in with circumstances of peculiar solemnity with the presence of Christ Himself and His angel, both appearing in human form First the spiritual High Priest, clothed in linen is on the 21st day of tuncment appeared in glory to Daniel, and spoke to him and when he heard the voice of His words, he fell into a trance with his face to the ground The Prophet alone saw this great vision for his trembling attendants fled to hide themselves, ver 1—10 Dr Hak

Ver 1 — he understood the thing and had understanding of the vision ] He had a clear view of the succession of the Persian and Grecian monarchies, and of the series of the kings of Syria and Egypt under the latter of them although the remaining parts of the vision were obscure especially with respect to their final event See chap xii 8 W Lenth

2 — I Daniel was mourning ] The reason seems to have been the interruptions that were caused in the building of the temple according to the decree of Cyrus two years before, and the disposition of some of his brethren, who chose rather to continue in the land of their captivity, than to go up to Jerusalem to hasten and forward that work Windle

— three full weeks ] In the Hebrew is in the margin 'three weeks of days' probably to distinguish them from the weeks of years prophesied of in the last chapter W Lenth

3 I ate no pleasant bread &c ] Meaning that he kept a fast by abstaining from better sorts of food Windle

5 — behold a certain man clothed in linen &c ] Behold, the Son of God stood before me in the form of a man clothed in pure white linen, to signify His perfect holiness, and His loins were girt about with a girdle of the finest gold Bp Hall

He appeared in the habit of an high priest see 1 Cor xxviii 4, 39 xxix 5 The description which St John gave of Christ as High Priest of the Church, Rev i 13 corresponds with this place of Daniel which proves, that the Person here described can be no other than the 'Son of God' which may be further confirmed by comparing the Person described here, and chap xii 5 6, with Rev x 2 3, who is there represented as 'setting His right foot upon the sea, and His left upon the land' 'sovereign Lord of both elements' Compare Matt xxviii 18 W Lenth

— Uphaz ] See note on Jer 1 9

6 His body also was like the beryl &c ] His body was of a bright celestial colour and His face glorious and shining, like the appearance of lightning, His eyes, from which nothing could be hid were beamy and piercing, like flames of fire His arms and feet were resplendent, like to polished brass, to signify the pureness and unquestionable perfection of His proceedings, and the voice of His words was mighty and forcible Bp Hall

8 — there remained no strength in me ] See the note on Gen xi 12 'My comeliness is better rendered in the margin 'my vigour' W Lenth

— Michael one of the chief princes.] The context will lead to a discovery of the Personage, who is here named Michael.
This Personage is superior to Gabriel for He comes to help him in the greatest difficulties, and Gabriel the servant of the Most High God, sent forth, as such spirits are used to be to minister for the elect people of God declares that this Michael is the only supporter he has He is also called "one of the chief princes," or one of the chief princes, or "one of the princes that are at the head of all" for this is the full, and not more than the full, import of the Hebrew words Now the Princes, that are "first or at the head of all" are clearly no more than the Three Persons in the Godhead Michael therefore is one of them and which of them there can be no doubt Gabriel, speaking of Him to Daniel calls Him "Michael your Prince, ver 21, and the great Prince which standeth for the children of thy people, chap xii 1, that is not for the nation of the Jews in particular, but for the children, the spiritual children, of that holy seed, the elect people of God a description, which applies particularly to the Son of God and to no one else And in perfect consistence with this description of Michael in the book of Daniel, is the action assigned to Him in the Apocalypse, in which we find Him fighting with the old serpent, the deceiver of the world, and victorious in the combat That combat who was to maintain, in that combat who was to be victorious, but "the Seed of the woman" From all this it is evident, that Michael is a name for our Lord Himself

17 For how can the servant of this my lord talk with this my lord?] How can thy servant, a poor mortal man maintain a discourse with a person of thy rank and dignity? The words may be translated thus, "How can the servant of this my lord talk with that my lord?" that is, with the other Person that first appeared to me with so majestic a presence, at whose sight I was perfectly confounded ver 5—9 W Lenth

20 — the prince of Persia — the prince of Grecia.] There is some doubt who are the persons here intended by the princes of Persia and of Grecia But since they fight with Michael to those who are conversant with the prophetic style, and have observed the uniformity of its images it will seem highly probable, that the angels which fight with Michael in the book of Daniel, are of the same sort with those who fight with Michael under the banners of the devil, in the 12th chapter of Revelation "There was war in heaven Michael and His angels fought against the dragon, and the dragon fought and his angels The vision of the war in heaven, in the Apocalypse, represents the vehement struggles between Christianity and the old idolatry in the first ages of the Gospel The angels of the two opposite armies represent two opposite parties in the Roman state, at the time the vision more particularly regards Michael's angels are the party which espoused the side of the Christian religion, the friends of which had for many years been numerous, and became very powerful under Constantine the Great, the first Christian emperor The dragon's angels are the party which endeavoured to support the old idolatry And in conformity with this imagery of the Apocalypse, "the princes of Persia," in the book of Daniel, are to be understood, I think, of a party in the Persian state, which opposed the return of the captive Jews, first after the death

21 — in the scripture of truth ] Or, “in the writing of truth,” that is, what is certain and irrevocable God’s decrees are spoken of as if they were committed to writing, and registered in a book See Deut xxxiii 21 Ps lvi 8, Isa lxi 6, Mal iii 16 W Lenth

Chap VI This and the following chapter contain the substance of Daniel’s last vision or a series of prophetic story from the third year of Cyrus to the end of time The dominion is soon made to pass from the Persians to the Grecians, the state of the Greek empire is continued through various changes and revolution and particularly with respect to Syria and Egypt, till it length it yields to the Roman Several particulars afterwards follow that must relate to the fate of the Church of Christ, and the last chapter has a peculiar respect unto the time of the end to the end of all prophecy, or to the grand consummation of all things W Lenth

It is the usual method of the Holy Spirit, to make the latter prophecies explanatory of the former and revelation is “as the shining light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day, Prov ix 18 The four great empires of the world, which were shown to Nebuchadnezzar in the form of a great image were again more particularly represented to Daniel in the shape of four great wild beasts In like manner the memorable events, which were revealed to Daniel in the vision of the ram and the he goat are here again more clearly and explicitly revealed in this vision by an angel so that this latter prophecy may not improperly be said to be a comment and explanation of the former Bp Newton

Vers 1 Also I in the first year of Darius &c ] This verse could have been joined to the last chapter the angel adds that is he now joins in defending the cause of the Jewish nation, so at the time of the overthrow of the Babylonish monarchy he assisted in advancing Darius to the succession which was the occasion of ending the Jewish captivity W Lenth

— I told thee shall stand up &c ] The angel first prophesied of the Persian empire, which was then subsisting There shall stand up yet that is after Cyrus, the founder of the empire who was then reigning three kings in Persia these were Cambyses, Smerdis the Magian and Darius the son of Hystaspes

And the fourth shall be far richer than they all The fourth after Cyrus was Xerxes of whom Justin truly remarks, that his riches were so abundant that when rivers were dried up by his army yet his wealth remained unexhausted And by his strength through his riches he shall stir up all both subjects and allies against the realm of Grecia The expedition of Xerxes into Greece is one of the most memorable events in ancient history far richer than they all and by his strength through his riches he shall stir up all against the realm of Grecia Before CHRIST about 480

3 And a mighty king shall stand up, that shall rule with great dominion, and do according to his will

4 And when he shall stand up, his kingdom shall be broken, and shall be divided toward the four winds of heaven, and not to his posterity, nor according to his dominion which he ruled for his kingdom shall be plucked up, even for others beside those

5 ¶ And the king of the south shall be strong, and one of his princes, and he shall be strong above him, and have dominion, his dominion shall be a great dominion

Herodotus informs that in raising his army he searched every place of the continent and computes that the whole number of his armament amounted to more than five millions of men After him no mention is here made of any other king of Persia It is to be noted, saith St Jerome, “that the Prophet, having enumerated four kings of the Persians after Cyrus shippeth over nine and passeth to Alexander for the prophetic spirit did not care to follow the order of history but only to touch upon the most famous events Xerxes was the principal author of the long wars and inveterate hatred between the Grecians and Persians and as he was the last king of Persia who invaded Greece, he is the last mentioned The Grecians then in their turn invaded Asia and Xerxes expedition being the most memorable on one side as Alexander’s was on the other, the reigns of these two are not improperly connected together Bp Newton

A farther reason may perhaps be assigned, why these kings of Persia only are mentioned, because they were all that should reign before Artaxerxes Longimanus, by whom the decree was issued, according to the prophecy of the seventy weeks for rebuilding Jerusalem W Lenth

3 And a mighty king &c ] That Alexander was ‘a mighty king and conqueror, that he not only ruled with great dominion over Greece and the whole Persian empire but likewise added India to his conquests, and that he ‘did according to his will, no one, not even his friends daring to contradict and oppose him, or if they did, like Citus and Callisthenes paying for it with their lives are facts too well known to require any particular proof or illustration Bp Newton See the notes on chap vii 6, viii 5, 6

4 And when he shall stand up &c ] When he shall be in the height of his prosperity W Lenth The particulars foretold in this verse, were in a good measure suggested before chap viii 8 see the note there Thus was Alexander’s kingdom broken and divided, not to his posterity, but ‘was plucked up even for others beside those Bp Newton

5 And the king of the south shall be strong &c ] Though the kingdom of Alexander was divided into four principal parts yet only two of them are here mentioned Egypt and Syria partly because these two were by far the greatest and most considerable but more particularly because Judea lying between them was sometimes in the possession of the kings of Egypt, and sometimes of the kings of Syria It is in respect of their situation to Judea that they are called the kings “of the south” and “of the north”

And the king of the south shall be strong and one of his princes (as the passage may be rendered after the Greek version) that is, of Alexander’s princes “shall be strong above him” The “king of the south” was indeed very “strong” for Ptolemy annexed Cyprus, Phenicia Canaan, and many islands cities and regions to Egypt, and likewise enlarged the bounds of his empire by the acquisition of Cyrene But still the king of the north or Seleucus Nicator, was “strong above him, or stronger than he

 6 And in the end of years they † shall join themselves together, for the king's daughter of the south shall come to the king of the north to make † an agreement but she shall not retain the power of the arm, neither shall he stand, nor his arm but she shall be given up, and they that brought her, and † he that begat her, and he that strengthened her in these times

7 But out of a branch of her roots shall one stand up in his estate, which shall come with an army, and shall enter into the fortress of the king of the north, and shall deal against them, and shall prevail

8 And shall also carry captives into Egypt their gods, with their princes, and with † their precious vessels of silver and for having annexed the kingdoms of Macedon and Thrace to the crown of Syria, he became master of three parts out of four of Alexander's dominions, and is represented by historians as 'the conqueror of the conquerors,' and "the greatest king after Alexander" Bp Newton

6 And in the end of years they shall join themselves together &c] After many years of hostility between the kings of Egypt and Syria Ptolemy Philadelphus the second king of Egypt, and Antiochus Theus, the third king of Syria, agreed to make peace upon condition, that Antiochus should put away his former wife Laodice and her two sons, and should marry Berenice the daughter of Ptolemy "For the king's daughter of the south shall come to the king of the north to make rights or agreements and accordingly Ptolemy Philadelphus brought his daughter to Antiochus Theus, and with her an immense treasure, so that he received the appellation of the dowry-giver" "But she shall not retain the power of the arm that is her interest and power with Antiochus, for after some time he brought back his former wife Laodice with her children to court again" "Neither shall he stand, nor his arm, or his seed, for Laodice fearing the little temper of her husband, lest he should recall Berenice, caused her husband to be poisoned and neither did his seed by Berenice succeed him in the kingdom, but Laodice contrived and managed matters so that her eldest son Seleucus Callinicus was fixed on the throne of his ancestors" "But she shall be given up, for Laodice, not content with poisoning her husband caused also Berenice to be murdered" And they that brought her for her Egyptian women, in endeavouring to defend her, were many of them slain with her "And he that begat her, or rather, as it is in the margin "he whom she had brought forth for the son was murdered as well as the mother by order of Laodice" And he that strengthened her in these times her husband Antiochus, as St Jerome conceives, or those who took her part and defended her or rather her father who died a little before and was so very fond of her that he took care continually to send her fresh supplies of the water of the Nile, thinking it better for her to drink of that than of any other river as Polybius relates Bp Newton

7, 8, 9 But out of a branch of her roots &c] Such wickedness was not to pass unpunished and unrevenged Out of the same root with Berenice sprung Ptolemy Puergetes her brother who no sooner succeeded his father Ptolemy Philadelphus in the kingdom than "he came with an army, and entered into the fortress, or fenced cities of the king of the north that is, of Seleucus Callinicus, who with his mother Laodice reigned in Syria and he dealt or acted "against them and prevailed so far that he took Syria, and Cilicia, and the upper parts beyond the Euphrates and almost all Asia" And when he had heard that a rebellion was raised in Egypt, he plundered the kingdoms of Seleucus, and took 10,000 talents of silver, and precious vessels, of gold, and he shall continue more years than the king of the north

9 So the king of the south shall come into his kingdom, and shall return into his land

10 But his sons † shall be stirred up, and shall assemble a multitude of great forces and one shall certainly come, and overflow, and pass through then shall he return, and be stirred up, even to his fortress

11 And the king of the south shall be moved with choler, and shall come forth and fight with him, even with the king of the north and he shall set forth a great multitude, but the multitude shall be given into his hand

12 And when he hath taken away the multitude, his heart shall be lifted up, and and images of their "gods two thousand and five hundred" So the king of the south came into the kingdom of the north and then returned into his own land He likewise continued more years than the king of the north, for Seleucus Callinicus died in exile of a fall from his horse and Ptolemy Puergetes survived him about four or five years Bp Newton

10 But his sons shall be stirred up, &c] The sons of the king of the north should endeavour to vindicate and avenge the cause of their father and their country The sons of Seleucus Callinicus were Seleucus Ceraunus and Antiochus the Great The former who succeeded his father on the throne, was indeed "stirred up, and assembled a multitude of great forces in order to recover his father's dominions, but was poisoned by two of his generals after an inglorious reign of two or three years Upon his decease his brother Antiochus was proclaimed king The Prophet's expression is very remarkable, that "his sons should be stirred up, and assemble a multitude of great forces but then the number is changed, and only "one should certainly come, and overflow, and pass through Accordingly Antiochus came with a great army, and took Seleucia, and recovered Syria Then after a truce, wherein both sides treated of peace, but prepared for war Antiochus "returned, and overcame in battle Nicolaus the Egyptian general, and had thoughts of invading Egypt itself Bp Newton — then shall he return and be stirred up even to his fortress] Or, "he shall again be stirred up &c At the spring of the next year he shall take the field again and encamp at Raphia, a frontier town upon the borders of Egypt Bp Newton

11 And the king of the south shall be moved with choler &c] Ptolemy Philopator the king of Egypt though a luxurious prince, was at length roused by the near approach of danger And he "came forth he marched out of Egypt with a numerous army to oppose the enemy, and encamped not far from Raphia which is the nearest town to Egypt after Rhinocorura And there he "fought with him, even with the king of the north for thither likewise came Antiochus with his army and a memorable battle ensued "And he the king of the north set forth a great multitude, amounting to 62,000 foot 6,000 horse and 10 elephants But yet "the multitude was given into his hand that is, into the hand of the king of the south for Ptolemy obtained a complete victory and Antiochus, having lost about 10,000 foot 500 horse and 1,000 prisoners was obliged to solicit a peace Bp Newton

12 And when he hath taken away the multitude &c] Ptolemy knew not how to make a proper advantage of his victory but his heart was lifted up by success Being denied from his father he now more freely indulged his lusts that instead of being strengthened by his victory, he provoked even his own subject to rebel against him but the Prophet in the passage more particularly foretold the case of his own countrymen After the return of Antiochus Ptolemy visited the cities of Coele-Syria and Palestine which had submitted to him, and among others in his progress he came to Jerusalem. He there offered sacrifices, and was desirous of entering into the holy of holies contrary to the custom and religion of the place, being, as the writer of Maccabees says greatly lifted up by pride and confidence. His curiosity was restrained with great difficulty, and he departed with heavy displeasure against the whole nation of the Jews. At his return thence to Alexandria he began a cruel persecution upon the Jewish inhabitants of that city, who had resided there from the time of Alexander and enjoyed the privileges of the most favoured citizens. And he cast down many ten thousands, for it appears from Iosephus that about this time forty thousand Jews were slain or sixty thousand, as they are reckoned in St Jerome's Latin interpretation. No king could be "strengthened by the loss of such a number of useful subjects. The loss of so many Jews and the rebellion of the Egyptians added to the maladministration of the state must certainly very much weaken, and almost totally ruin the kingdom. By Newton

19 For the king of the north shall return, &c.] After a peace of about fourteen years in the course of which Ptolemy Philopator had died of intemperance and was succeeded by his son Ptolemy Epiphanes, a child of four or five years old, Antiochus having acquired great riches and collected many forces in an eastern expedition which enabled him to "set forth a greater multitude than the former, returned not doubting to have an easy victory over a infant king. By Newton

14 And in those times there shall many stand up &c.] Not only Antiochus rose up against young Ptolemy, but others also confederated against him. The provinces, which were before subject to Egypt rebelled and Egypt itself was disturbed by seditious Philip too the king of Macedon entered into a league with Antiochus to divide Ptolemy's dominions between them. "Also the robbers of thy people it is literally the sons of the breakers the sons of the rioters the factious and refractory ones, of thy people, the Jews, who were at that time much broken into factions. These were to exalt themselves to establish the vision accordingly they revolted from Ptolemy, and thereby contributed greatly, without knowing it, to the accomplishment of this prophecy concerning the calamities, which should be brought upon the Jewish nation by the succeeding kings of Syria. But they shall fall for Scopas came with a powerful army from Ptolemy and in the absence of Antiochus soon reduced the cities of Coele Syria and Palestine to their former obedience. By Newton

15 So the king of the north shall come, &c.] Antiochus, wishing to recover the cities and countries which Scopas had taken from him into those parts and having defeated Scopas, pursued him to Sidon which he closely besieged and at length compelled to surrender. This event probably was principally intended by his "casting up a mount and taking the city of munitions as in the margin for Sidon was an exceeding strong city both in situation and fortifications besides which he took other the most fenced cities, as in the text as recited by the Greek and Roman historians. "The arms of the south could not withstand him, neither his chosen people neither Scopas nor the other great generals, nor the choicest troops that were sent against him but he did according to his own will and none was able to "stand before him, for he soon rendered himself master of all Coele-Syria and Palestine. Among others the Jews also readily submitted to him and thus he "stood in the glorious land and his power was established in Judea, which by his hand was consumed, the Jews suffering many things and their country being wasted, during these hostilities. By Newton

17 He shall also set his face to enter with the strength of his whole kingdom.] Antiochus not contented with having rent the principal provinces from Egypt was forming schemes to invade the country itself with all his forces "and upright ones with him, that is, the Jews, who marched under his banners and are so called to distinguish them from the idolatrous soldiers. And so Antiochus would have seized upon Egypt by force but, as he was meditating a war with the Romans, he judged it better to proceed by stratagem, and to carry on his designs by treachery, rather than by arms. For this purpose "he shall give him the daughter of women his daughter so called, as being one of the most eminent and beautiful of women accordingly Antiochus married his daughter Cleopatra to Ptolemy, and gave in dowry with her the provinces of Coele-Syria and Palestine upon condition of the revenues being equally divided between the two kings. All this he transacted with a fraudulent intention to "corrupt her and induce her to betray her husband's interests to her father. But his design did not take effect "she shall not stand on his side, neither be for him Ptolemy and his generals were aware of his artifice and therefore stood upon their guard and Cleopatra herself affected more the cause of her husband than of her father inasmuch that she joined with her husband and invited him to the Romans to congratulate them upon their victories over her father and to exhort them, after they had expelled him out of Egypt to prosecute the war in Asia issuing them at the same time that the king and queen of Egypt would readily obey the commands of the senate. By Newton

18 After this shall he turn his face unto the isles.] Antiochus having fitted out a formidable fleet, "turned his face unto the isles of the Mediterranean, subdued most of the maritime places on the coasts of Asia, Thrace, and Greece and took Samos, Rhodes and many other islands. This was a great indignity and reproach offered to the Romans, when their confederates were thus oppressed, and the cities, which they had lately restored to liberty were enslaved. "But a prince, or rather "a leader, a general, meaning the Roman generals, repelled the injury and caused his "reproach to cease. to cease but greatly to their own honour, "caused it to turn upon him" Bp Newton

19 Then he shall turn his face toward the fort of his own land ] After the battle that decided his fortunes, Antiochus fled away to Syria and thence into Syria, to Antioch "the fort of his own land" Then marching into the eastern provinces, to collect there the arrears of tribute, and amass what treasure he could, in an attempt to plunder the rich temple of Jupiter Belus in Elymais, he was assaulted by the inhabitants of the country, and himself and all his attendants slain. Thus by an inglorious death he "stumbled and fell and was no more found" Bp Newton

It is observable, that during the reign of Antiochus the Great the Romans began to extend their conquests in the East, and they are by his means imperceptibly, as it were introduced into the narration, of which they make so considerable a part in the sequel. This prince in many instances favoured the Jews yet during the whole of his wars was generally the occasion of great distresses amongst them and hence we have so long an account of him, from the tenth verse to the nineteenth Went

20 Then shall stand up in his estate a raiser of taxes in the glory of the kingdom ] Or rather, as in the margin, one that causeth in exaltation to pass over the glory of the kingdom. Seleucus Philopator succeeded his father Antiochus the Great in the throne of Syria, but he performed nothing worthy of the empire of Syria, and of his father. The tribute of a thousand talents, which he was obliged to pay annually to the Romans, was indeed a grievous burden to him and his kingdom and he was little more than raiser of taxes all his days. He was tempted even to commit sacrilege for being informed of the money that was deposited in the temple of Jerusalem, he sent his treasurer Heliodorus to seize it. This was literally causing an exaltation to pass over the glory of the kingdom, when he sent his treasurer to plunder that temple which "even kings did honour and magnify with their best gifts, and where Seleucus himself of his own revenues, bore all the costs belonging to the service of the sacrifices." But within few days or rather years according to the prophetic style he was destroyed, and his reign was of short duration in comparison of his father's for he reigned only twelve years, and his father thirty seven. Or perhaps the passage may be better expounded thus that within few days, or "years, after his attempting to plunder the temple of Jerusalem, he should "be destroyed" and not long after that he was "destroyed, neither in anger nor in battle" as all chronologists agree, neither in rebellion at home nor was abroad, but by the treachery of his own treasurer Heliodorus. The same wicked hand that was the instrument of his sacrilege, was also the instrument of his death Bp Newton

21 And in his estate shall stand up a vile person, ] Antiochus Epiphanes who succeeded to the kingdom was at Athens, when his brother Seleucus died by the treachery of Heliodorus and the honour of the kingdom was not given to him, for Heliodorus attempted to get possession of it himself, another party declared in favour of Ptolemy Philometor, king of Egypt, whose mother Cleopatra was the daughter of Antiochus the Great, and sister of the late king Seleucus and neither was Antiochus I p iphanes the right heir to the crown, but his nephew Demetrius, the son of Seleucus, then an hostage at Rome. However he obtained the kingdom by flatteries. He flattered Eumenes king of Pergamus and Attalus his brother, and by fair promises engaged their assistance. He flattered the Syrians and with great show of clemency obtained their concurrence. He flattered the Romans also, and sent ambassadors to court their favour by presents and promises of fidelity. Thus he "came in peaceably" and as he flattered the Syrians, the Syrians flattered him again and bestowed on him the title of Epiphanes or the illustrious but the epithet of "vile," or rather "despicable," given him by the Prophet, agrees better with his true character. For he disgraced himself by such prodigal, low ridiculous, and indecent conduct, as induced Polybius, who was a contemporary writer and others after him, instead of Epiphanes, or the illustrious, more rightly to call him Epimanes, or the madman Bp Newton

He is called here "a vile person" not for any want of wit or parts, but for the extravagance of his life and actions Went

22 And with the arms of a flood shall they be overflowed from before him, ] Heliodorus, the murderer of Seleucus and his partisans, as well as those of the king of Egypt, who had formed designs upon Syria were vanquished by the forces of Eumenes and Attalus, and dissipated by the arrival of Antiochus, whose province disconcerted all their measures. "The prince also of the covenant was broken" that is the high priest of the Jews. As soon as Antiochus was seated on the throne, he removed Onias from the high priesthood, and preferred Jason, the brother of Onias to that dignity but though he had made a league with Jason the new high priest, he did not adhere to it faithfully, but acted "deceitfully," and having deposed Jason, substituted Jason's younger brother, Menelaus, in his room Bp Newton

23, 24 — for he shall come up, ] Rather, "and he shall come up, and shall become strong with a small people." Antiochus Epiphanes had been many years in hostage at Rome, and coming from thence with only a few attendants he appeared in Syria little at first, but soon received a great increase and became strong with a small people. By the friendship of Eumenes and Attalus he "entered peaceably" ver 24 upon the upper provinces as likewise upon the provinces of Coele-Syria and Palestine. And wherever he came, he outdid his fathers and his fathers' fathers in liberality and profusion. He "scattered among them the prey and spoil and riches." The "prey of his enemies, the 'spoil of temples, and the 'riches of his friends as well as his own revenues, were expended in publick shows, and bestowed in largesses among the people. The writer of the first book of Maccabees affirms, that, in the liberal giving of gifts, "he abounded above the kings that were before him," 1 Mac iii 90. After some time, apprehensive of a war with Egypt, he went into Phenicia, to fortify his own "strong holds," and to "forecast his devices against those of the enemy" thus he did "even for a time, and employed some years in his hostile preparations" Bp Newton

their hearts

27 And both these kings' hearts shall be to do mischief, and they shall speak lies at one table, but it shall not prosper for yet the end shall be at the time appointed

25, 26 And he shall stir up his power &c.] The transactions here foretold, are thus related by the writer of the first book of Maccabees: "Now when the kingdom was established &c see chap i ver 16-19 "He shall stir up his power against the king of the south with a great army," says the Prophet "he entered into Egypt with a great multitude," says the historian "The king of the south shall not stand," says the Prophet, "Ptolemy was afraid and fled," says the historian "Many shall fall down slain," says the Prophet, "and many were wounded to death," says the historian The misfortunes of Ptolemy Philometor are by the Prophet ascribed principally to the treachery and baseness of his own ministers and subjects "for they shall forecast devices against him, yea, they that feed of the portion of his meat shall destroy him And it is certain that Iulius was a very wicked minister, and bred up the young king in luxury and effeminacy contrary to his natural inclination Ptolemy Macron too, who was governor of Cyprus, revolted from him and delivered up that important island to Antiochus, and for the reward of his treason was admitted into the number of the king's principal friends and was made governor of Calcutyria and Palestine Nay even the Alexandrians, seeing the distress of Philometor renounced their allegiance and taking his younger brother Euergetes or Physcon proclaimed him king instead of the elder brother Bp Newton

27 And both these kings' hearts shall be to do mischief, &c.] Ptolemy Philometor by some means, of which history does not inform us came into the hands of Antiochus and after Antiochus was come to Memphis and the greater part of Egypt had submitted to him, he and Philometor did frequently eat and converse together at one table, but notwithstanding this appearance of peace and friendship, "their hearts were really bent to do mischief, and they" spoke lies the one to the other For Antiochus pretended to take care of his nephew Philometor's interest and promised to restore him to the crown, at the same time that he was plotting his ruin, and was contriving means to weaken the two brothers by a war against each other, that the conqueror, worried and exhausted, might fall an easy prey to him On the other side, Philometor laid the blame of the war on his governor Iulius, professing great obligations to his uncle and seemed to hold the crown by his favour, and at the very same time that he was resolved to take the first opportunity of breaking the league with him, and of being reconciled to his brother and accordingly as soon as ever Antiochus was withdrawn, he made proposals of accommodation, and by the mediation of their sister Cleopatra a peace was made between the two brothers, who agreed to reign jointly in Egypt and Alexandria But still this artifice and dissimulation did not prosper on either side For neither did Antiochus obtain the kingdom neither did Philometor utterly exclude him and prevent his returning with an army, as each intended and expected by the measures which were taken, for these wars were not to have an end till the "time appointed," which was not yet come Bp Newton

29, 30 At the time appointed] Namely, the time hinted at before, ver 28 "he shall return &c Antiochus, perceiving that the two brothers had provided for their mutual safety and interest by making peace, was so offended that he again invaded Egypt But this expedition was not so successful as his former ones, because the ships of Chittim, which brought the Roman ambassadors from Italy, to command a peace between the contending kings came against him Antiochus was terrified, and withdrew his army "Therefore he grieved and returned" He led back his forces into Syria and had indignation against the holy covenant, for he vented all his anger upon the Jews slaying great multitudes, plundering and burning the city, pulling down its walls and houses, shedding the blood of those who came to worship at the temple defiling the sanctuary, and causing the whole service to be omitted "So he did, and after his return to Antioch he published a decree, which obliged all persons upon pain of death to conform to the religion of the Greeks and so the Jewish law was abrogated, the heathen worship was set up in its stead, and the temple itself was consecrated to Jupiter Olympius In the transacting and ordering of these matters he had intelligence with them that forsook the holy covenant, Menelaus and the other apostate Jews of his party who were the king's chief instigators against their religion and their country Bp Newton

31 And arms shall stand on his part, &c.] The last attack of Antiochus on the city and people of the Jews has been already noticed Another power was introduced at the thirtieth verse, in the term "ships of Chittim," and so this the narrative most probably now turns, and will be found applicable to the affairs and consequences of this fourth beast or kingdom to the end of the book, although there are various opinions concerning the application of this part of the prophecy Hynth, Bp Newton

In the same year that Antiochus by command of the Romans retired out of Egypt, and set up the worship of the Greeks in Judaea, the Romans conquered the kingdom of Macedonia, the fundamental kingdom of the empire of the Greeks, and reduced it into a Roman province, and thereby began to put an end to the reign of Daniel's third beast This is thus expressed by Daniel And after him arms, that is, Romans "shall stand up" Arms are every where in this prophecy put for the military power of a kingdom, and they "stand up, when they conquer

33 And they that understand among the people shall instruct many, yet they shall fall by the sword, and by flame, by captivity, and by spoil, many days

and grow powerful. Hitherto Daniel described the actions of the kings of the north and south, but upon the conquest of Macedonia by the Romans, he left off describing the actions of the Greeks, and began to describe those of the Romans in Greece. They conquered Macedonia, Illyricum and Epirus, in the year of Nabonassar 580 thirty-five years after, by the last will and testament of Attalus the last king of Pergamus, they inherited that rich and flourishing kingdom, that is, all Asia westward of mount Iaurus, sixty-nine years after they conquered the kingdom of Syria and reduced it into a province, and thirty-four years after they did the like to Egypt. By all these steps the Roman arms stood up over the Greeks, and after ninety-five years more, by making war upon the Jews, they polluted the sanctuary of strength, and took away the daily sacrifice, and then placed the abomination of desolation. For this abomination was placed after the days of Christ, Matt xxiv 15, in the sixteenth year of the emperor Adrian, in the year of our Lord 132, they placed this abomination by building a temple to Jupiter Capitolinus where the temple of God in Jerusalem had stood. Thereupon the Jews under the conduct of Barchochab rose up in arms against the Romans, and in the war had fifty cities demolished, nine hundred and eighty-five of their best towns destroyed and eighty thousand men slain by the sword, and in the end of the war in the year 136, were banished Judea upon pain of death, and thenceforward the land remained desolate of its old inhabitants. Sir Isaac Newton, Bp Newton

32, 33 And such as do wickedly against the covenant &c.] The Roman magistrates and officers in the use of the most alluring promises, as well as of the most terrible threatenings, to prevail upon the primitive Christians to renounce their religion, and offer incense to the statues of the emperors and images of the gods. Many were induced to comply with the temptation, and apostatized from the faith, but the true Christians, "the people that knew their God were strong, remained firm to their religion, and gave the most illustrious proofs of the most heroic patience and fortitude. It may be said also with the strictest truth and propriety of the primitive Christians, that being dispersed every where, in preaching the Gospel in all the parts of the Roman empire, they "instructed many, and gained a great number of proselytes to their religion, yet they fell by the sword, and by flame, by captivity, and by spoil, many days," for they were exposed to the malice and fury of a general persecution, and suffered all manner of injuries, afflictions, and tortures, with little intermission for the space of three hundred years. Bp Newton

34, 35 Now when they shall fall, &c.] The Church had now laboured under long and severe persecutions from the civil power. The tenth and last general persecution was begun by Diocletian, it raged, though not at all times equally, ten years, and was suppressed entirely by Constantine, the first Roman emperor who made open profession of Christianity, and then the Church was no longer persecuted but was protected and favoured by the civil power. But still this is called only "a little help" because, though it added much to the temporal prosperity, yet it contributed little to the spiritual graces and virtues of Christians. It was attended with this peculiar disadvantage, that "many clave to them with flatteries. Many became Christians for the sake of temporal emolument, and pretended to be of the religion, only because it was the religion of the emperor. This is also called "a little help," because the temporal peace and prosperity of the Church lasted but a little while. The spirit of persecution presently revived, and no sooner were the Christians delivered from the fury of their heathen adversaries, than they began to quarrel among themselves, and to persecute one another. Such, more or less, has been the condition of the Church ever since, and, generally speaking, "those of understanding have fallen" a sacrifice to others, some of the best and wisest men to some of the worst and most ignorant. These calamities were to befall the Christians, "to try them and to purge and to make them white, not only at that time, but even to the time of the end, because it is yet for a time appointed. Bp Newton

36 And the king shall do according to his will &c.] The prophecy now proceeds to describe the principal author of the persecutions which should be permitted for the trial of the Church. A "king" or "kingdom" as before noticed, signifies any government, state, or potentate, and the meaning of this verse appears to be, that, after the empire was become Christian, there should spring up in the Church an antichristian power that should act in the most absolute and arbitrary manner, exalt itself above all laws divine and human, dispense with the most solemn and sacred obligations, and in many respects enjoy what God had forbidden, and forbid what God had commanded. This power began in the Roman emperors, who summoned, counselled, and directed their determinations almost as they pleased. After the division of the empire, this power still increased, and was exerted principally by the Greek emperors in the East, and by the bishops of Rome in the West, as we shall see in the several particulars hereafter specified by the Prophet. This power too was to continue in the Church, and "prosper till the indignation be accomplished, for that that is determined shall be done. This must denote some particular period. Bp Newton

37 Neither shall he regard the God of his fathers, &c.] He shall apostatize in some measure from the religion of his Christian fathers, as he actually did, both in the Greek and Latin Church by worshipping Mahuzza instead of the true God blessed for ever. Nor shall he regard the desire of women, or conjugal affection, the meaning is, he shall neglect and discourage marriage, as both the Greeks and Latins did, to the great detriment of human society, and to the great discredit of the Christian religion. Thus did the power here described "magnify himself above all, even God himself, by contradicting the primary law of nature, and making that dishonourable which the Scripture hath pronounced "honourable in ill, Heb xiii 4. Bp Newton

38 But in his estate shall he honour the God of forces.] Or "Mahuzza, that is, properly, "military bulwarks, fortifications, &c."

So the martyrs are described as having a share in the first resurrection. Rev xx 5 Our Saviour's words plainly allude to this text Matt xiii 43 W Lenth

The Judge of all the earth will certainly do right. He hath given the fullest assurance that there is a reward for the righteous, and it is certain, that this reward will be augmented in proportion as men have been more extensively useful, or have advanced the real and best interest of their fellow creatures. In the last verse the reward and punishment are expressed generally as to their degree and merely said to be perpetual in their duration, in this they are exalted to the highest pitch of distinction in their degree and their duration is expressed in the strongest terms of pointing out eternity. The design of which is to convince the eminently virtuous, that they are in a more especial manner the favourites of Heaven and may with greater confidence expect their reward. The glories of the future world are shadowed forth in Scripture by the loftiest and most splendid images in this, but after all, so inadequate is language and so inferior the conceptions of the human mind to this great subject that the finest description of the joys of eternity is that negative one of St Paul, which he hath in some measure borrowed from Isaiah 'I've hath not seen nor ear heard neither have entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him' 1 Cor ii 9 W Lenth

<sup>4</sup> But thou O Daniel shut up the words &c ] To 'shut up' a book, and to 'seal' it is the same with concealing the sense of it from common understanding. see chap viii 26 The same reason is assigned for this command in both places, namely, because there would be a long interval of time between the date, and the final accomplishment of the prophecy compare chap x 1 But the nearer that time approached, the more light should men have for understanding the prophecy itself as is implied in the following words 'many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased' many shall be inquisitive after truth, and keep correspondence with others for their better information and the gradual completion of some prophecies shall direct observing readers to form a judgment concerning those particulars which are yet to be fulfilled W Lenth

One cannot help observing here the analogy between God's word and works not only operations of nature have been unravelled, but every useful art and invention traced out and brought to perfection by the continual labour and successive industry of man. And the like gradual process is observable with respect to the word of God in its early communication it was wrapped up in mystery, and surrounded by obscurity, for this among other purposes, to excite the attentive observation of men and engage their diligence, so that by affording proper employment for our active spirits it may serve to train and habituate them to that temper and frame which will be a suitable qualification for them in the future world, where we shall be continually exercised in acts of devotion and praise and be making constant advances in knowledge, goodness and happiness W Lenth

— that it shall be for a time, times, and an half ] That is, as hath been before noticed, for three prophetick years and an half, and three prophetick years and in half are 1260 prophetick days, and 1260 prophetick days are 1260 years. The same time therefore is prefixed for the desolation and the oppression of the Eastern Church as for the tyranny of the little horn in the Western Church and it is most remarkable that the doctrine of Mohammed was first forged at Mecca, and the supremacy of the Pope was established by virtue of a grant from that wicked tyrant Phocas, in the very same year of Christ 606. There is a further notation of the time in the following words 'And when he shall have accomplished to scatter the power of the holy people, all these things shall be finished when the Jews shall be recalled from their dispersion then all these things shall receive their full and final completion. The Prophet not sufficiently understanding this answer, inquired, ver 8 What or how long shall be these latter times or latter wonders? And it is answered again, ver 11 that from the time of the taking away the daily sacrifice, and setting up the abomination that maketh desolate, there shall be a thousand two hundred and ninety days.

The 'setting up of the abomination of desolation' appears to be a general phrase and comprehensive of various events. It is applied by the writer of the first book of Maccabees chap i 51, to the profanation of the temple by Antiochus and his setting up the image of Jupiter Olympus upon the altar of God. It is applied by our Saviour, Matt xxiv 15 to the destruction of the city and temple by the Romans, under the conduct of Titus, in the reign of Vespasian. It may for the same reason be applied to the Roman emperor Adrian's building a temple to Jupiter Capitolinus in the same place where the temple of God had stood and to the misery of the Jews, and the desolation of Judea that followed. It may with equal justice be applied to the Mohammedans invading and desolating Christendom, and converting the churches into mosques and this latter event seemeth to have been particularly intended in this passage. If this interpretation be true the religion of Mohammed will prevail in the East the space of 1260 years, and then a great and glorious revolution

Blessed is he that waiteth, and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days." Here then are three different periods assigned, 1260 years, 1290 years, and 1385 years and what is the precise time of their beginning and consequently of their ending, as well as what are the great and signal events, which will take place at the end of each period, we can only conjecture time alone can with certainty discover Bp Newton

8 And I heard, but I understood not &c.] The full discovery was not made to the Prophet, but reserved for future ages, till time should bring it to light The question that follows, What shall be the end of these things? alludes to the like expression having been used in the preceding parts of this book, and especially at chap x 14 The inquiry is checked at the next verse, and in intimation given, that it is not so much for the use of the present as of future ages, that this revelation is made The prophecy is of distant reference and interpretation, it is necessary therefore that it should be involved in obscurity What is delivered may satisfy the minds of the pious and faithful, but it is not meant that the curious should be gratified, that human pride should be indulged, or that the counsels of God should be made subservient to the ambition of princes, or any sinister designs of man Wintle

9 And he said, Go thy way, Daniel &c.] Such prophecies, as belong to things yet future especially to the times and circumstances of those things, are few, if any of them, fit for the unlearned to pry into particularly Nay, the learned themselves, if they are prudent also, will observe what answer the angel gave to the Prophet Daniel "And I heard, but I understood not then said I O my Lord, what shall be the end of these things? And he said Go thy way, Daniel for the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end When the proper season comes, possibly in some cases not before the event hath interrupted them the prophecies will prove their own reality by their clearness and strengthen, perhaps in an hour of much need, the patience and the faith of the saints, Rev xiii 10 Thus it happened to the Apostles They understood not beforehand our Saviours prediction, "Destroy this temple, and in three days I will raise it up But "when He was risen from the dead, they remembered that He had said this unto them and they believed the Scripture, and the word which Jesus had said, John ii 19, — Bp Secker

ful are designed for the trial of their faith, and the purification of their lives see chap xi 15 But as for those, who are obstinately bent upon following the corrupt practices, to which they have been accustomed, neither the exhortations nor the threatenings of Gods word, nor the judgments, which they see overtake others, will prevail with them to forsake their wicked practices See Rev ix 20, xiii 11 W Louth

— and none of the wicked shall understand &c.] The holy writers often repeat this maxim, that an honest and good heart is a necessary qualification for receiving and understanding Divine truths See Is vi 9 &c, Hos xiv 9, John viii 47, x 27 xviii 37 W Louth

It is not less our duty to subject all our vicious inclinations to the authority of holy writ, than our vain prejudices I or if we indulge but one, it will naturally bias us to reject, or misinterpret, whatever is inconsistent with it and besides, we shall lose the hope of that illumination, without which we can apprehend nothing to good purpose This is what the angel saith to Daniel, "None of the wicked shall understand, but the wise shall understand And our Saviour promises only, that 'if any man will do the will of God, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, John vii 17 Abp Secker

The Prophet had been making inquiries after the end of these wonders, the angel had given him all the information that was needful either for himself or future times, and with this he dismisses him, subjoining at the same time a short epitome of his own fate, that as he was now far advanced in life, he must expect soon to retire from this world, that he should rest in peace to the time of the end, when he should again be raised up and restored to life, and receive his final allotment from his righteous Judge, before whom he should stand in judgment at the last day, or "at the end of the days

The word "lot must here be meant in the good sense that the Prophet should be ranked among the blessed, and partake of the heavenly inheritance, when the mystery of God shall be perfected The expression seems to indicate a long space of time Wintle

GENERAL INTRODUCTION

TO THE TWELVE MINOR PROPHETS.

THE writings of the twelve Minor Prophets were in the Hebrew canon comprised in one book, which was called by St. Stephen "the Book of the Prophets," Acts vii 42 compared with Amos v 25. By whom they were so compiled is uncertain, probably however they were collected together in that form by Ezra, or by some member of the Great Synagogue, but certainly above 200 years before the birth of Christ.

The twelve Minor Prophets were so called, not in respect to any supposed inferiority in their writings as to matter or style but in reference to the brevity of their works. The shortness, indeed, of these prophecies seems to have been one reason for joining them together, by which means the volume of their contents was swelled to a greatness in some degree correspondent to their importance.

These twelve Prophets furnish us in scattered parts with a lively sketch of many particulars relative to other kingdoms, they describe in prophetick anticipation, but with historical exactness, the fate of Babylon, of Nineveh, of Tyre, of Sidon, and of Damascus. The three last Prophets especially illustrate many circumstances at a period when the historical pages of Scripture are closed, and when profane authors are entirely wanting. They describe, under the most striking representations, the advent and character of the Messiah and His kingdom, and endeavour, by the most admirable instruction, to excite those religious sentiments, which would facilitate the reception of the Gospel. Dr Gray

INTRODUCTION

HOSHA has been supposed to be the most ancient of the twelve Minor Prophets, and indeed by some writers he is represented as having preceded all the Prophets, since he flourished about the middle of the reign of Jeroboam the Second, the son of Joash, king of Israel, and towards the commencement of that of Uzziah who began to reign over Jerusalem about the year of the world 3194. According to some accounts of no great authority he was of the tribe of Issachar, and of the city of Belesnor, others represent him to have been of the tribe of Judah. He was the son of Beeri, and entered on the prophetick office some time between the years of the world 3194 and 3219. He continued to prophesy above sixty years during the successive reigns of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah, and probably to about the third year of the reign of the last, or, if we reckon by the kings of Israel, he may be described as having flourished during the reign of Jeroboam and his successors, to the sixth year of Hoshea, which corresponds with the third year of Hezekiah. Hosea was therefore nearly contemporary with Isaiah, Amos, and Jonah. It is probable that he resided chiefly in Samaria, and that he was the first Prophet, of those at least whose prophecies we possess, that predicted the destruction of that country, which was effected soon after the Prophet's death by Salmanneser, king of Assyria. Dr Gray

Hosea's principal subject is that which is the principal subject indeed of all the Prophets, the guilt of the Jewish nation in general, their disobedient refractory spirit, the heavy judgments that awaited them, their final conversion to God, their reestablishment in the land of promise, and their restoration to God's favour, under the immediate protection of the Messiah, in the latter ages of the world. He confines himself more closely to this single subject than any other Prophet. Comparatively, he seems to care little about other people. He wanders not, like Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel, into the collateral history of surrounding heathen nations. He mingles not, like Daniel, with the revolutions of the great empires of the world. His own country seems to engross his whole attention: her privileges, her crimes, her punishment, her pardon. He predicts, indeed, in the strongest and the clearest terms, the ingrafting of the Gentiles into the Church of God, but he mentions it only generally, he enters not, like Isaiah, into minute detail of the progress of the business. He alludes to the calling of our Lord from Egypt, and to the resurrection on the third day, and he celebrates, in the loftiest strains of triumph and exultation, the Saviour's final victory over death and hell. But yet, of all the Prophets, he certainly enters the least into the detail of the mysteries of redemption. We have nothing in him descriptive of the events of the intercalary between the two advents of our Lord, nothing diffuse and circumstantial upon the great and interesting mysteries of the Incarnation, and the Atonement. His country, and his kindred, is the subject next his heart. Their crimes excite his indignation, their sufferings interest his pity, their future exaltation is the object on which his imagination fixes with delight. It is a remarkable dispensation of Providence, that clear notices, though in general terms, of the universal redemption, should be found in a writer so strongly possessed with national partialities. Thus Judaism, if I may so call it, seems to make the particular character of Hosea is a Prophet. Not that the ten tribes are exclusively his subject. His country is indeed his particular and constant subject, but his country generally, in both its branches, not in either taken by itself.

Hosea delights in a style, which always becomes obscure when the language of the writer ceases to be a living language. He writes in short, detached, disjointed sentences, not wrought up into artificial periods. His transitions from reproof to persuasion, from threatening to promise, from terror to hope, and the contrary, are rapid and unexpected. His similes are brief, accumulated, and often introduced without the particle of similitude. Yet these are not the vices, but the perfections of the holy Prophet's style. For to these circumstances it owes that eagerness and fiery animation, which are the characteristic excellences of his writings, and are so peculiarly suited to his subject. Bp Horsley

The book of Hosea is cited by St Matthew as unquestionably the inspired production of a Prophet, Matt ii 15 as likewise by St Paul, Rom ix 25, 26, 1 Cor xv 9, and, indeed by Christ, Himself, Matt ix 12, 13 and 7. Dr Gray

CHAP I

1 Hosea to shew God's judgment for spiritual whoredom taketh Gomer 4 and keth by her Jezebel 6 Io-roboam 8 and Io-ammi 10 The restoration of Judah and Israel

THE word of the LORD that came unto Hosea, the son of Beeri, in the days of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah, and in the days of Jeroboam the son of Joash, king of Israel.

2 The beginning of the word of the LORD by Hosea. And the LORD said to Hosea, Go, take unto thee a wife of whoredoms and children of whoredoms for the land

[Chap I Under the figure of a wife living in adultery and bearing illegitimate children, is represented the great idolatry of the children of Israel, which provoked God to cast them off, yet with the promise of repairing that loss, by bringing in the Gentiles into the Church and afterwards uniting Israel and Judah under one head the Messiah. The Prophet likewise foretells the extinction of Jehu's family. W Lenth

Ver 1 — in the days of Uzziah, — and in the days of Jeroboam] Jeroboam, the son of Joash the second king of Israel of that name and contemporary with Uzziah, is here mentioned because this prophecy very nearly concerns the kingdom of Israel. There was no need of enumerating any of the succeeding kings of Israel, because from the Prophet's mention of his prophesying from the times of Uzziah to those of Hezekiah, it follows that he prophesied all the reigns of Jeroboam's successors, the reign of Hezekiah bearing date from the third year of Hosea, the last of the kings of Israel. W Lenth

— by Hosea] To speak to Hosea, ver 1, and "by Hosea," in this verse, are phrases of different import. To speak to expresses, that to him the discourse was immediately addressed. To speak by, that through him it was addressed to others — and that the speech, so addressed to others, was not the Prophet's own but God's, God using the Prophet as His organ of speech to the people. Bp Horsley

— Go take unto thee a wife of whoredoms and children of whoredoms] That is, Marry a wife, who will afterwards, namely, after the birth of her first child prove unfaithful to thy bed, and bear children begotten by others, for hereby will be most fitly, and even sensibly represented to the people of Israel their like behaviour with Me — inasmuch as the people of the land have committed the like great spiritual whoredom departing from the Lord and worshipping idols. Dr Wells, W Lenth

Some commentators understand by "a wife of whoredoms" a wife that had heretofore been noted for unchastity, howsoever now reclaimed. Bp Hall Junius

3 So he went and took Gomer — which conceived, &c] After the marriage the Prophet's wife bore three children. These children represent certain distinct parts or descriptions of the Jewish nation of the whole of which the mother was the emblem. Of the three children the eldest and the youngest were sons, the intermediate child was a daughter. The eldest appears to have been the Prophet's son, but the two last were illegitimate. Bp Horsley hath committed great whoredom, departing from the LORD. Before

3 So he went and took Gomer the daughter of Diblaim, which conceived, and bare him a son.

4 And the LORD said unto him, Call his name Jezreel, for yet a little while, and I will †avenge the blood of Jezreel upon the †house of Jehu, and will cause to cease the †kingdom of the house of Israel.

5 And it shall come to pass at that day, that I will break the bow of Israel in the valley of Jezreel.

6 ¶ And she conceived again, and bare a

4 — Call his name Jezreel,] The names imposed upon the children by God's direction, sufficiently declare what particular parts of the Jewish nation were severally represented by them. The name of the first was Jezreel, importing "seed of God," and the persons, represented by the Prophet's proper son to whom the name is given were all those true servants of God, scattered among all the twelve tribes of Israel, who, in the time of the nation's greatest depravity, worshipped the everlasting God, in the hope of the Redeemer to come. These were a holy seed, the genuine sons of God, begotten of Him to a lively hope, and the early seed of that Church, which shall at last embrace all the families of the earth. These are Jezreel typified by the Prophet's own son and rightful heir, as the children of God, and heirs of the promises. Bp Horsley

— I will avenge the blood of Jezreel upon the house of Jehu] That is, the blood of the holy seed, the faithful servants of God shed by the idolatrous princes of Jehu's family in persecution and the blood of children shed in their horrible rites upon the altars of their idols. Bp Horsley

— and will cause to cease the kingdom of the house of Israel] It is said, that what is here threatened shall be done after "a little while" upon the house of Jehu — and it is added, as a consequence on it or what should be effected together with it "or by it that the kingdom of Israel should cease." So he saith "yet a little while." The time was not yet come that it could be done, because God's promise to Jehu was that "his children the fourth generation should sit on the throne of Israel" — and the present king Jeroboam was but the third from him. In the time of Zachariah, who succeeded Jeroboam, and reigned but six months, what is here said was effected. And so both the promise before made, and the curse now denounced were in their due time fulfilled. Dr Edward Pocock

5 And it shall come to pass at that day,] Quickly after the extinction of Jehu's family. W Lenth

— I will break the bow of Israel in the valley of Jezreel] See 2 Kings xv 29, and xvii 5, 6. The taking of several cities successively, and at last of the capital itself, was a "breaking of the bow of Israel," a demolition of the whole military strength of the kingdom "in the valley of Jezreel," where all those cities were situated. Bp Horsley

The bow, being in those times of great use in war, was figuratively and proverbially taken for all sorts of military arms and instruments, and also for all strength of war. Dr Pocock

<sup>Before CHRIST about 85</sup> daughter. And God said unto him, Call her name Lo-ruhamah for †I will no more have mercy upon the house of Israel, ‡but I will utterly take them away. §7 But I will have mercy upon the house of Judah, and will save them by the Lord their God, and will not save them by bow, nor by sword, nor by battle, by horses, nor by horsemen. ||8 ¶ Now when she had weaned Lo-ruhamah, she conceived, and bare a son.

6 — [Call her name Lo-ruhamah] All of the Jewish people that were not Leziel the “seed of God,” those who were not Israel though they were of Israel are typified by the two illegitimate children. The first of these the daughter was called Lo-ruhamah. The sex of the child is the emblem of weakness. Her name signifies “unloved, or ‘unpitied’ or, as it is paraphrased in the margin of our Bible, in conformity with all the ancient versions, “not having obtained mercy. This daughter typifies the people of the ten tribes in the enfeebled state of their declining monarchy, torn by intestine commotions and perpetual revolutions, harassed by powerful invaders, impoverished by their tyrannical exactions, and condemned by the just judgment of God to utter excision as a distinct kingdom, without hope of restoration for so the type is explained by the Holy Spirit Himself. Bp Horsley

7 [But I will have mercy upon the house of Judah,] It was an aggravation of the guilt of Israel, that idolatry was the very foundation of her polity. Her very existence, is a distinct kingdom was founded on the worship of the calves, which was instituted by Jeroboam for preventing the return of the ten tribes to their allegiance to the house of David. The two tribes, on the contrary, remained loyally attached to David's family, and the idolatry into which from time to time they fell was rather the lapse of individuals, than the premeditated policy of the nation. Except in the reigns of one or two of their very worst kings, the public religion was the worship of the true God according to the rites of His own appointment, by a priesthood of His own institution. And thus was probably the reason that the kingdom of Judah though severely punished was however treated with longer forbearance, and, when the dreadful judgment came, in some respects with more lenity. Bp Horsley

— and will save them by the Lord their God, &c.] This promise may be principally referred to their deliverance from captivity not by human means, but by God's moving the heart of Cyrus to restore them, Ezra i. 1 &c. Dr Pocock

In the different treatment of the house of Judah and the house of Israel, we see the prophecy hitherto remarkably verified. After the excision of the kingdom of the ten tribes, Judah, though occasionally visited with severe judgments, continued however to be cherished with God's love, till they rejected our Lord. Then Judah became Lo-ammī (see note on ver 9) but still continues to be visibly an object of God's love, preserved as a distinct race for gracious purposes of mercy. Bp Horsley

— by the Lord their God.] Interpreters observe, that this expression may allude to the salvation to be accomplished by the Messiah, who is God as well as man the Lord being spoken of as a distinct Person from the principal Author of the salvation here promised. Compare Isa xxxiv. 4, xl. 9. W Lomax

There is one certain deliverance, promised to the Jews in one Prophet after another, by the name of “salvation by the Lord,” by “the Lord God Himself,” as superior to and different from their former deliverances by flesh and blood and this the Jews appropriate to the redemption of the Messiah. God saves, and God judges, by Him. And He is therefore termed “the Lord” in Mat iii. 1, as being Emmanuel, the God, the Saviour with us. Bp Chandler

8 9 — she conceived, and bare a son. Then said God, Call his name Lo-ammī.] The child conceived after Lo-ruhamah was 9 Then said God, Call his name Lo-ammī for ye are not my people, and I will not be your God.

10 ¶ Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured nor numbered, and it shall come to pass, that in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not my people, there it shall be said unto them, Ye are the sons of the living God. 11 ¶ Then shall the children of Judah weaned must typify the people of the kingdom of Judah, in the subsequent periods of their history. Or rather the child typifies the whole nation of the children of Israel, reduced in its external form, by the captivity of the ten tribes to that single kingdom. The sex represents a considerable degree of national strength and vigour remaining in this branch of the Jewish people very different from the exhausted state of the other kingdom previous to its fall. Not have the two tribes ever suffered so total an excision. The ten were absolutely lost in the world soon after their captivity. But the people of Judah have never ceased totally to be. In captivity at Babylon they lived a separate race, respected by their conquerors. From that captivity they returned. They became an opulent and powerful state, formidable at times to the rival powers of Syria and Egypt, and held in no small consideration by the Roman people, and the first emperors of Rome. And even in their present state of ruin and degradation without territory and without polity of their own such is the masculine strength of suffering with which they are endued, they are still extant in the world, as a separate race, but not as God's people, otherwise than as they are reserved for signal mercy, God grant it may be at no very distant period! But at the present they are Lo-ammī, “Not My people.” And so they have actually been more than seventeen centuries and a half, and to this condition they were condemned when this prophecy was delivered. Bp Horsley

9 — for ye are not my people,] That is “Ye, O men of Judah, are not My people.” Bp Horsley

10 Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, &c.] We learn from St Paul, that Israel is a name, not only belonging to those, who are so according to the flesh, but comprehending all that rightly believe in God, all the seed of Israel and Abraham, as well that which is of the faith of Abraham, who is the father of all believers, as that which is of the flesh and of the law, Rom iv. 11, 16, Gal iii. 7. So that by the multitude of believers, as well of the Gentiles as of the Jews, is this to be made good, that “the number of the children of Israel should be as the sand of the sea.” Dr Pocock

— and it shall come to pass, that in the place &c.] That is, at Jerusalem, or at least in Judea, where this prophecy was delivered, and where the execution of the sentence took place. This prophecy appears to promise the restoration of the natural Israel of the house of Judah to their own land. Bp Horsley

• Or, the promise may extend to others, as well as to them even to as many of other nations, who had ever been looked on as “not God's people,” as the whole Gentile world were, and that any where, in any place even to as many as the Lord our God should call, Acts ii. 39. Dr Pocock

11 Then shall the children of Judah and the children of Israel be gathered together, &c.] When “the fulness of the Gentiles is come in,” this will be a means of converting the Jews, and bringing them into the Church. See Rom ix. 20, 26. Either the prediction signifies, that upon this will follow the restoration of the Jewish nation, when they shall return into their own country from the several dispersions, where they were scattered, and become one nation or kingdom under the Messiah, then He will be King. Compare Ezek xxxvii. 21, 22, Mic ii. 12. W Lomax Or, the being “gathered together” denotes, not so much their coming together into one place, as consent and agreement of

— and appoint themselves one head,] The title of "Head" is often given to Christ in the New Testament see Eph 1:22, iv 15, v 29, Col 1:18, so that in Him, who is our peace, all farther difference and enmity being taken away, both Jews and Gentiles are made one, Eph 2:15, 16, as one body under one head Dr Pocock

— and they shall come up out of the land.] Jerusalem being situated on an eminence, and in the heart of a mountainous region, which rose greatly above the general level of the country to a great distance on all sides, the sacred writers always speak of persons going to Jerusalem, as "going up" Bp Horsley

This mountain being a type of the Church of Christ, it is very proper and significant language to say of those, who should come into the Church, that they should "come up out of the land" Dr Pocock

— for great shall be the day of Jezreel.] Great and happy shall be the day, when the holy seed of both branches of the natural Israel shall be publicly acknowledged of their God, united under one head, their King Messiah, and restored to the possession of the promised land, and to a situation of high preeminence among the kingdoms of the earth Bp Horsley Or, taking the words in a spiritual sense, we may understand "the day of Jezreel," as comprehending the whole time of grace and salvation, all the time since the appearance of Christ, that "one Head," in whom they, of whom it is said "ye are not My people," are called the sons of the living God, and are all gathered together, and ascend out of the world Dr Pocock

Chap II ver 1 Say ye unto your brethren, Ammi, and to your sisters, Ruhamah.] Although the Israelites, in the days of Hosea, were in general corrupt and addicted to idolatry, yet there were among them in the worst times some, who had not bowed the knee to Baal These were always Ammi, and Ruhamah, God's own people, and a darling daughter It is probable that God here commissions these faithful few to admonish the inhabitants of the land in general, of the dreadful judgments that would be brought upon them by the gross idolatry of the Jewish Church and nation Speak to your brethren, O Ammi, (O My people,) and to your sisters, O Ruhamah, (O darling daughter) Bp Horsley

— and make her as a wilderness, &c.] When a woman is the image of a country, or of a Church, that may be said of the woman, which, in unfigured speech, might be said of the country, or the Church she represents The country might literally be made a waste wilderness, by unfruitful seasons, by the devastations of war, or of noxious vermin; a Church is made a wilderness and a parched land when the living waters of the Spirit are withheld Bp Horsley

5 — she said, I will go after my lovers.] I will go after others, whom I esteem as my lovers that is, I love rather to worship idol gods, as thinking them the gods that give me my bread, &c Dr Wells

— my drink.] "My liquors" such as milk, honey, wine, &c Bp Horsley

The base and degraded state of the Israelites is here very remarkable, in that they make no mention of those high spiritual privileges, which distinguished them from all other nations, of their laws and statutes, of God's grace and favour, and the light of His countenance, but have regard only to those things which concern their inferior part, and are common to them with beasts Those, whom Israel supposes to give her those things, are "her lovers," and to them she will surrender her affections It is a farther proof of her stupidity and aggravated ingratitude, that whereas it was God, who had furnished her with all these favours, as well as those of a more excellent nature, being glutted and intoxicated with abundance, she forgets God, and plainly denies Him to be the Author of them Dr Pocock

6 — I will hedge up thy way &c.] See the like expressions in Lam iii. 7, 9, Job xix 8 Whence this appears to be a proverbial kind of speech, taken from what is usually done among men, when they would stop up a way, and hinder others from going in it, to put before it an hedge of thorns, or to cross it with a wall Dr Pocock

— which they prepared for Baal. Which they offered or consecrated to Baal Abp Newcome

It was a grievous charge, which God here preferred against the Israelites, that His corn, and wine, and oil, and silver, and gold, which He had given them, they employed in the service of Baal, an abominable idol. If, when God giveth us wit, wealth, power, authority, health, strength, liberty, or any other good things, instead of using these things to His glory, and the relief of His servants, we abuse them to the service of those idols, which we have set up in our hearts, to our idols, our covetousness, or our sensuality, we are as liable to the charge as the Israelites were, as unjust, as profane, as unthankful in every respect as they Bp Sanderson.

9 Therefore will I return, and take away my corn &c.] That is, I will again take away My coin &c. The happy and prosperous condition of the people shall be changed into a general want and penury of all things necessary for their well being Dr Pocock. It appears from all the Prophets, and particularly from Amos and Joel, that the beginning of judgment upon the refractory, rebellious people, was in unfruitful seasons, and noxious vermin, producing a failure of the crops, dearth, murrain of the cattle, famine, and pestilential diseases. Bp Horsley

10 And now will I discover her lewdness.] Or, as in the margin, "her folly," or "villany" By hiding My face from them, and depriving them of My blessings, I will make it appear how foolish, how shameful, how lewd, how vile and base they were in forsaking God and following idols. And this God threatens to do, "in the sight," or presence, "of her lovers," that is, of her idols. Dr Pocock

11 I will also cause all her mirth to cease, her feast days, &c.] The public festivals are frequently called days of joy and gladness the observation of several of these festivals was retained in the worship of the golden calves: see 1 Kings xii. 32; Amos viii. 5. God here threatens them, that under their captivity they should have no opportunity to celebrate these festivals, since they had so much abused those solemn seasons of Divine worship. See chap. ix. 4, 5; Amos viii. 10 W Lowth with the preceding, should be understood in this manner "I will allure her," by means of the persuasive doctrine of the Gospel "and for that end, or in order to produce that effect, "I will bring her into the wilderness," meaning that this was the way or method by which He would prepare them to receive His persuasions. As the method, which God had used with the Israelites of old, for withdrawing them from the corruptions of Egypt, and making them His peculiar people, was by disciplining them in the wilderness; so He now says that He will employ the like method for weaning them from their idolatry, and inclining their hearts to Him, namely, by bringing them into a condition, as painful as that of their forefathers in the wilderness, a condition of captivity among the heathen, in which they should be disciplined in the knowledge of God, and their dependence upon Him. Dr Pocock

— and speak comfortably unto her.] Speak what shall touch her heart, in her outcast state in the wilderness of the Gentile world, by the profusion of mercy in the Gospel Bp Horsley

15 And I will give her her vineyards from thence.] I will not only speak kindly and comfortably to her, but by deeds also and benefits, actually bestowed upon her, will testify My favour towards her. These words of promise seem opposed to the former threat, "I will take away My wine in the season thereof," ver. 9 and "I will destroy her vines," ver. 12. "From thence" may signify either from that place, or from that time Dr Pocock

— the valley of Achor for a door of hope.] "The valley of Achor," that is, of tribulation, or consternation, alluding to the vale near Jericho, where the first Israelites, first setting foot within the Holy Land, were thrown into trouble and consternation, but immediately afterwards found it "a door of hope," for from that time, Joshua having received fresh encouragement from God drove on his conquests with uninterrupted success. In like manner the tribulations of the Jews, in their present dispersion shall open to them the door of hope, and "she shall sing there," that is, in the wilderness, and in the vale of tribulation, under those circumstances of present difficulty mixed with cheering hope Bp Horsley — and she shall sing there, as in the days of her youth, &c.] These words are a continued allusion to the history of the Israelites of old, and to the great deliverance wrought for them in the time of Moses; "in the days of her youth," when, as Jeremiah limits the term, "she went after God in the wilderness," Jer. ii. 2. The promise "she shall sing," appears opposed to what was threatened in her state of rebellion, "I will also cause all her mirth to cease," ver. 11. Dr Pocock

19 And I will betroth thee unto me for ever, yea, I will betroth thee unto me in righteousness, and in judgment, and in lovingkindness, and in mercies.

20 I will even betroth thee unto me in faithfulness, and thou shalt know the Lord.

21 And it shall come to pass in that day, I will hear, saith the Lord, I will hear the heavens, and they shall hear the earth,

22 And the earth shall hear the corn, given us the spirit of fear, but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind." 2 Tim 1:7 See Jer. xxiii. 27 Bp Horsley

The word "Baal" often signifies an husband, and is particularly spoken of God, as He was by His covenant-relation an husband to His people, see Isa. liv 5, Jer. iii. 14. But the word 'Baal' having been so much profaned by being given to idols, He forbade it to be applied any more to Himself. As it follows, according to the sense of the next verse, He would utterly abolish the idols, the "Baalim," which they had before served, and leave no occasion for further remembrance of them, such as the very use of the name, by which they were called, might be in danger of causing W Lomth, Dr Pocock

17 For I will take away &c.] He, from whom is both to will and to do, here promises His help and the assistance of His grace for the conversion of Israel, so that she, who was before wholly addicted and wedded to her Baals, might conceive a detestation of them, and an abhorrence even of their names. Compare Deut xxx 6, Zech xiii 2 Dr Pocock

18 And in that day will I make a covenant for them with the beasts of the field, &c.] That is, I will cause that they shall not do any injury, but shall be as harmless, as if they were bound by a covenant or league of peace. These expressions are figurative, and relate to the times of the Gospel. Compare Matt xvi 17, 18, Luke x 19 Dr Pocock

I will break — the battle] The Hebrews often use a verb, which is applicable to some of the substantives placed after it, but not to all. See Mic vi 13, Zeph i 17, Mal iii 6 Abp Newcome

19 And I will betroth thee unto me &c.] I will enter into a new covenant with My Church, consisting of the converted Jews and increased by the coming in of the fulness of the Gentiles, wherein I will eminently display My attributes of righteousness and equity, of lovingkindness, mercy, and faithfulness W Lomth

20 — and thou shalt know the Lord] That is, by thy experience of His goodness and lovingkindness, "thou shalt know Him to be the Lord Jehovah, the powerful God, who always makes good what He hath said, which is the chief meaning of the name Jehovah" or, thou shalt have, not only a bare knowledge of God, but at the same time such a due acknowledgment of Him, as influences the practice, and produces love correspondent to that which He displays. Such knowledge comprehends all the fruits of faith, and sincere obedience to His commandments. "Is not this to know me?" saith the Lord, Jer xxii 16 Dr Pocock

the heavens shall answer the wants of the earth, in sending down seasonable showers, and the earth shall answer the wants of mankind, in bringing forth corn, and wine, and other necessities of life, and the very fruits of the earth shall answer the wishes of My people, now returned into their own land, by giving them due nourishment. The same sense is more plainly expressed in Zechariah, chap viii 12, "The seed shall be prosperous, &c. W Lomth. In short, all second causes shall, by God's appointment, duly concur for the welfare and happiness of His then Christian Church, which may be fitly styled "Jezreel," according to their prayers, and upon their steady obedience to Him Dr Wells

23 And I will sow her unto me in the earth.] Here is a plain allusion to the word "Jezreel," mentioned just before, which signifies the seed of God. The Prophet foretells a plentiful increase of true believers, like that of corn sown in the earth. Compare Zech x 9 W Lomth

The myriads of the natural Israel, converted by the preaching of the Apostles, were the first seed of the universal Church. And there is reason to believe, that the restoration of the converted Jews will be the occasion and means of a prodigious influx of new converts from the Gentiles in the latter ages, Rom xi 12, 15. Thus the Jezreel of the natural Israel from the first have been, and to the last will prove, a seed sown of God for Himself in the earth Bp Horsley

Chap III ver 1 — Go yet, love a woman &c.] This was probably the same woman, mentioned Chap. i. 9, who upon her infidelity was parted from her husband. Still he had a kindness for her, and was willing to receive her on condition of her reformation. The Hebrew word, rendered "friend," is used for an husband, Jer iii. 20, Cant. v 16 W Lomth

— the children of Israel.] "Children of Israel," and "house of Israel," are two distinct expressions to be differently understood. W Lowth, Dr Pocock The condition of the woman, restrained from licentious courses, owned as a wife, but without restitution of conjugal rites, admirably represents the present state of the Jews, manifestly owned as a peculiar people, withheld from idolatry, but as yet without access to God through the Saviour Bp Horsley.

4. — let no man strive, nor reprove another ] Because the case of the people was desperate, and it would be lost labour to reprove them W Lowth

— strive with the priest ] To "strive," or contend, with the priest, the authorised interpreter of the law, and the typical intercessor between God and the people, was the highest species of contumacy and disobedience, and by the law was a capital offence see Deut xxv 12. God tells the Prophet, that contumacy and perverseness, even in this degree, were become the general character of the people That the national obstinacy and contempt of the remonstrances and reproofs of the Prophets were such as might be compared with the stubbornness of an individual who at the peril of his life would arraign and disobey the judicial decisions of God's priests Bp Horsley

It was in the prophetic times an expression signifying height of impiety, "Thy people are as they that strive with the priest" Seeing then God hath no less regard to His peculiar servants now than he had then, seeing they no less represent Him, and act by His authority now, than any did then, seeing their service is as precious to Him, and as much tendeth to His honour now, as the Levitical service then did, seeing He no less loveth order and peace in the Church, than He did in the Synagogue, we may well suppose it a no less heinous sin, and odious to God, to despise the ministers of Christ's Gospel, than it was before to despise the ministers of Moses's law Dr Isaac Barron

— because thou hast rejected &c ] These denunciations are addressed to the high priest for the time being, as the representative of the whole order The priests are taxed with negligence of their duty, in not teaching the people, and in suffering a general ignorance to prevail, and for this crime they are threatened with the abolition of their order Bp Horsley

It is very observable how the sin and the punishment run parallel, and are proportioned one to the other The crimes objected are, that they "rejected knowledge," and that they "forgot the law of their God" The punishment proportioned to the first, that He also would "reject them, that they should be no priests to Him" to the second, that He would also "forget their children" Dr Pocock

7 As they were increased, so they sinned against me ] The priesthood among the Jews was, by God's appointment, a situation of the highest rank and authority The complaint is, that, in proportion as they were raised in dignity and power above the rest of the people, they surpassed the rest in impiety Bp Horsley

8 They eat up the sin of my people and they set their heart on their iniquity ] The meaning is, that it was their ordinary custom, under pretence of the right of their office, to receive from the people their sin offerings, and to feed upon them At the same time, they set their heart on their iniquity, that is, they were desirous that the people should commit sin, that so the sin offerings might come in to them Dr Pocock

10 The princes of Judah were like them that remove the bound ] Literally, the landmark, concerning which came, see Deut xix 14, and for the curse annexed to it, and its heinousness in God's sight, Deut xxvii 17 By the phrase in this place "like them that remove the bound," we may understand that the princes of Judah put away, and passed over, all bounds prescribed to them both by the law of God, and by the laws of men Dr Pocock

11 Ephraim is oppressed and broken in judgment, ] He is oppressed with a heavy weight of calamity he is crushed in his judicial contest with Me Abp Newcome

because he willingly walked after the commandment ] This is commonly explained of Jeroboam's command to his subjects of forsaking the worship of the true God, which command they readily complied with Of the same kind "were the statutes of Omri mentioned by Micah, chap vi 16 IV Lowth God permitted or ordered those evils, which they suffered to befall them, because they willingly and obstinately forsook His commandments, to follow commandments contrary to His Dr Pocock

12 — as a moth, — as rottenness ] The Hebrew word, rendered 'a moth' means a worm that breeds in clothes and eats them that rendered "rotteness, or "a worm, in the margin, means a worm that breeds in wood, when it is old and rotten, or, as some think, rottenness itself Dr Pocock The sense is, that God would, from small and unperceived beginnings, work a slow, but certain and complete destruction Bp Horsley

13 — and sent to king Jareb ] It is probable as commentators in general agree, that Judah is understood here before the verb "sent" the sense seems to require it as Judah is expressed before, in mentioning the evils that they felt, and after, ver 14, in mentioning what should befall them The person, to whom he sent is uncertain our translators shew that they thought the original capable of different interpretations, by rendering it 'king Jareb in the text and "the king of Jareb, and "the king that should plead in the margin Dr Pocock

Jareb was either the name of an Assyrian king, or of an Assyrian city see chap x 6 Abp Newcome Or, the phrase describes some powerful monarch "the king, who takes up all quarrels, as it may be translated that is a king who took upon him to interfere in all quarrels between inferior powers, to arbitrate between them and compel them to make up their differences upon such terms as he thought proper to dictate, whose alliance was of course anxiously courted by weaker states Such was the Assyrian monarch in the times to which this prophecy relates His friendship was purchased by Menahem, king of Israel, 2 Kings xv 19, 20, and in a later period solicited by Ahaz chap xvi 5—9 Bp Horsley

1 An exhortation to repentance 4 A complaint of their unrepentance and iniquity

COME, and let us return unto the LORD about 780 for he hath torn, and he will heal us, he hath smitten, and he will bind us up

2 After two days will he revive us in 1 Cor 15 the third day he will raise us up, and we shall live in his sight

— yet could he not heal you, &c ] We have here the usual scriptural change of persons from "them to "you For an illustration of the facts alluded to, see the history, 2 Chron xxviii 16—20 Dr Pocock

15 I will go and return to my place ] The sense is that Jehovah will withdraw the tokens of His presence from the Jewish temple Bp Horsley till they acknowledge their offence, ] This is a proof of what God elsewhere declares, "that He hath no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but that the wicked turn from his way, and live God withdraws Himself from His people not that He would finally reject them, but that they might know their wickedness and folly in rejecting and forsaking Him and so acknowledge their offence and seek His face Dr Pocock

Chap VI The three first verses of this chapter should be joined to the preceding The Prophet speaks in his own person to the end of the third verse He takes occasion, from the intimation of final pardon to the penitent, given in the conclusion of God's awful denunciation of judgment, to address his countrymen in words of mild pathetic persuasion Bp Horsley

Ver' 2 After two days — we shall live in his sight ] There appears in this place a very plain allusion to Christ lying dead in the grave for two days and on the third rising again to life The reference in the margin shews this to have been the opinion of our translators Dr Pocock

Jehovah, who had departed will return, and again exhibit the signs of His presence among His chosen people So the Jews, converted and restored, will live in His sight, or in His presence, and attain the true knowledge of God, which they never had before The "two days and the "third day seem to denote three distinct periods of the Jewish people The first day is the captivity of the ten tribes by the Assyrians, and of the two under the Babylonians, considered as one judgment upon the nation beginning with the captivity of the ten, and completed in that of the two The second day is the whole period of the present condition of the Jews, beginning with the dispersion of the nation by the Romans The third day is the period yet to come, beginning with their conversion and restoration This I take to be the sense of the prophecy, in immediate application to the Jews Nevertheless whoever is well acquainted with the allegorical style of prophecy, when he recollects, that our Saviour's sufferings were instead of the sufferings and death of sinners, that we were baptized into His death, and, by baptism into His death, we buried with Him, and that He, rising on the third day, raised us to the hope of life and immortality, will easily perceive no very obscure, though but an oblique, allusion to our Lord's resurrection on the third day, since every believer may speak of our Lord's death and resurrection, as a common death and resurrection of all believers Bp Horsley

5 Therefore have I hewed them by the prophets, I have slain them by the words of my mouth and thy judgments are as the light that goeth forth

3 — his going forth is prepared as the morning ] His appearance as our Deliverer is fixed as the return of the morning we shall be restored by Him from our calamities, as certainly as the rising of the sun chase away darkness Abp Newcome

— and he shall come unto us as the rain, &c ] See Deut xi 14 The periodical rains being looked upon as necessary causes of great blessings, other things also, which produced blessings in other kinds, whether temporal or spiritual are often compared to such rains See Deut xxxii 2, Ps lxxii 6, Prov xvi 15, Is li 10, &c Dr Pocock

4 O Ephraim, what shall I do unto thee? ] Here Jehovah takes up the discourse again in His own person Bp Horsley God declares that the true cause of the impending evils was not any defect of mercy or providence in Him, who had used all probable means for bringing the people home to Himself, but was to be found in their own inveterate wickedness If at any time, desiring to be relieved from some affliction, they made a shew of reformation, their goodness was not real, sincere, and permanent, but it soon failed they were quickly weary of it, and returned to their evil ways Dr Pocock

5 Therefore have I hewed them by the prophets, &c ] It is agreeable to the language of Scripture to represent the Prophets of God as doing that which they foretold should be certainly done Dr Pocock See Jer i 10, and the note there — and thy judgments are as the light that goeth forth ] God having admonished, reprov'd, and threatened the people, in order to recall them, but without effect, they cannot accuse Him of cruelty in inflicting the judgments which He threatens such judgments are evidently deserved, their justice is as clear as the sun, as the light that goeth forth, as manifest as that is to all, Dr Pocock

6 For I desired mercy and not sacrifice, ] That is, rather than sacrifice I am better pleas'd with true goodness, than with the exactest observance of the external duties of religion, unless they proceed from a sincere principle of obedience, see Mic vi 6—8 The Jews are accustomed to express comparisons by negatives, or rejecting the things less worthy Compare Joel ii 13, and John vi 27 W Iowth The parallel line clearly shews that by "not sacrifice" is to be understood in preference to sacrifice Abp Newcome

The words appear to anticipate an answer of the people, that they were not so unworthy as they were accused of being, since they were constant in offering all sorts of sacrifice to God, but God replies, that sacrifices were not all that was required of them, for that He delighted not in such things for themselves, but only in respect to other things, which by them were testified, and with which they ought to be accompanied. WHEN I would have healed Israel, about 780.
then the iniquity of Ephraim was discovered, and the wickedness of Sa-rightly offered, were acceptable to Him, appears from His numerous precepts concerning them in the law Dr Pocock

— the knowledge of God ] Not in inactive speculative knowledge, but such knowledge as testifies itself by the keeping of God's commandments By "mercy" may be understood all the duties of the second table, and by "the knowledge of God" all those of the first Dr Pocock This is the general rule, comprehending the sum of all the practical precepts of the Prophets Bp Horsley

7 But they like men have transgressed the covenant ] Either "like men" in general, whose quality it is to be false and treacherous in observing covenants which aggravates the accusation, that they, God's peculiar people, should be as regardless of their plighted faith, as other nations, that were strangers to Him and aliens from His covenant or, "like Adam, as in the margin Dr Pocock

— there have they dealt treacherously against me ] "I here in the covenant, that is, in that matter wherein they ought to have been especially faithful Dr Pocock

8 Gilead is a city of them that work iniquity, ] Gilead or Ramoth Gilead, was a city of refuge Deut iv 43, and such also was Sichem, Josh xx 7 both therefore inhabited by priests and Levites. The Prophet means to represent the priests as seducers of the people to that idolatry, which proved the ruin of the nation Bp Horsley

9 — murder in the way by consent ] That is, they associate themselves for murdering such as fall in their way as troops of robbers lay wait for any passenger to spoil him One of the marginal readings, "with one shoulder, imports the same thing, namely, "by consent, like men putting their shoulders together to move some great weight But if the other reading in the margin, "in the way to Shechem, be taken, it describes the place where such murders and outrages were committed by those idolatrous priests and their associates from Gilead Dr Pocock See the foregoing note

11 Also, O Judah, he hath set an harvest for thee ] Also, O Judah, corrupted Israel hath prepared a harvest of revenge for thee, in sowing the seeds of idolatry in thee Bp Hall "When I returned the captivity of My people or, more plainly, "When, or whereas, I would have turned away the captivity of My people that is, I would upon their repentance have averted My judgments, which will end in their captivity W Iowth, Dr Wells

the like then their wickedness farther appeared, in that they would not hearken to His word, nor be amended, but more obstinately persisted in their evil courses. Israel, Ephraim, and Samaria design altogether, as either of them might do singly, the whole body consisting of both prince and people Dr Pocock

3 They make the king glad with their wickedness, &c] They study to please their kings and great men, by complying with the idolatry which they have set up W Lenth "Their lies mean their perfidies towards God in deserting His service for idolatry Bp Horsley

1 They are all adulterers, &c] They are as much inflamed with lust "as an oven heated or over-heated," by the baker, who (therefore) ceaseth from rising or making any more fire, "after he hath kneaded the dough, until it be leavened" Dr Wells

5 In the day of our king &c] On the king's birth-day, or his coronation-day, or some other solemn festival kept in his honour, the great men gave themselves to immoderate drinking, enticing their king to do the same, till he so far forgot himself, as to give the hand of fellowship to vain persons Dr Pocock Those, who in their cups made a jest of the true religion, and derided the denunciations of God's Prophets, he distinguished with the most familiar marks of his royal favour Bp Horsley Some recent and notorious act of contempt to God or to His Prophets, or to publick justice appears here to be alluded to Bp Newcome

6 For they have made ready their heart like an oven, &c] As an oven conceals the lighted fire all the night while the baker takes his rest and in the morning vomits forth its blazing flame, so all manner of concupiscence is brooding mischief in their hearts, while the ruling faculties of reason and conscience are lulled asleep and their wicked designs wait only for a fair occasion to break forth Bp Horsley

7 They are all hot as an oven, &c] "All, that is, the whole body of the people. Of this general corruption the pernicious effects are such as concern not only private persons, but the publick welfare to the disturbance of all order and government which must necessarily result from the destruction and untimely end of the judges by which none understand the inferior magistrates others the kings who are presently more particularly mentioned Dr Pocock

— all their kings are fallen] The prophecy looks forward to the fall of the six last kings in uninterrupted succession Zechariah, Shallum, Menahem, Pekahiah, Pekah, Hoshea Bp Horsley

8 Ephraim, he hath mixed himself among the people &c] For Ephraim he hath mixed himself with heathens and is a professed associate with them Ephraim is grown irresolute in his religion like a cake that is half dough, and half baked, so is he half Israhel half Pagan Bp Hall One thing on one side another on the other burnt to a coal at bottom raw dough at the top An apt image of a character that is all inconsistencies Bp Horsley

— a cake not turned] All along the Black sea, from the Maotic lake to the Caspian sea in Chaldaea, and in Mesopotamia except in towns, the people often make their bread about an inch thick this they lay on a corner of the hearth, and cover it with hot embers and when in a quarter of an hour they turn it Bp Pocock

9 Strangers have devoured his strength] Such nations as either violently assaulted or spoiled him, or such as he applied to for help as the Assyrians, chap v 13, and in this chapter, ver 11 the Egyptians Assyrians and others These "devoured his strength," his wealth his riches and treasure the flower also of his men, and the fruits of his land Dr Pocock Yet all these afflictions do not make him sensible of the disastrous state of his affairs, and that the hand of God is against him W Lenth

11 Ephraim also is like a silly dove without heart] That is without understanding see Jer v 21 As a silly dove, at frighted at her nest, flies to one place and to another for security and there often falls into one net or snare and meets with greater danger than she would have found at home so Ephraim, being troubled with the great evils which he felt or feared at home forsook God and His protection and called on Egypt and Assyria for help, but instead of it met with greater injury Dr Pocock

12 — I will chastise them as their congregation hath heard] As they have heard their punishments declared in the prophetic denunciations in the books of Moses, which were read in their synagogues every sabbath day Bp Horsley

13 — though I have redeemed them, yet they have spoken lies against me] Though I have redeemed them out of Egypt, (see Mic vi 4,) and afforded them many other signal deliverances yet they have not given Me the glory but have represented Me by their golden calf and have "changed My truth into a lie, Rom i 25 W Lenth See the note on ver 3

11 And they have not cried unto me with their heart &c.] Though they have made shew of some great repentance and humiliation howling and crying upon the beds of their distress, yet they have not with their hearts unfeignedly sought unto me. Bp Hall Even when they assembled themselves for fear of dearth and famine to pray for plenty, for corn and wine, even then did they continue to rebel against God. Dr Pocock

15 Though I have bound and strengthened their arms, &c.] Though I have bound up their wounds, and given them new strength and vigour, yet they are continually devising some new idolatrous invention whereby they may dishonour Me. H Louth Or is in the margin 'though I have chastened, &c.' Whether I have inflicted punishment on them or shewed them favour, they rejected Me for their idols. Abp Newcome

16 They return but not to the most High.] A distinction is here made between a true and a false or hypocritical conversion. It is not said that they returned not at all, that they made no shew of repentance: but that they returned not home to the Lord which is what He requires of true converts. 'If thou wilt return O Israel saith the Lord, return unto Me, Jer iv 1. This is well given notice of by our translators, in supplying the word "but," which is not in the original, "They return but not to the most High." Dr Pocock

— they are like a deceitful bow.] Like an ill-contrived bow, which never directs the arrow to the mark. H Louth Their intentions, which are pretended to be directed to God are indeed carried quite another way. Dr Pocock

— this shall be their derision in the land of Egypt.] Their blasphemies and other enormities shall be a just cause of reproach to them, when they are exiles in Egypt, whither many of them fled or were carried away captive. See chap ix 3, Compare chap viii 13 and see the note on Ezek xxxvi 20 H Louth

Chap VIII ver 1. 'Set the trumpet to thy mouth.] This is a mistaken illusion to the custom of calling the people together by this means. It is not necessary to suppose, that the Prophet was really to sound a trumpet, but rather that he should call upon the people with all possible earnestness and vehemence. 5 They call, O Samaria hath cast thee off.] The calf or idol that the Israelites worshipped, is said to cast them off, inasmuch as it was of no avail to them. Dr Pocock Dr Wells

6 For from Israel was it also.] This, their calf and calf-worship, is, as all other idols and idolatry, of mere human invention, framed by the Israelites, according to the thoughts of their own hearts, and the device of their own heads and not agreeable to the will and command of God. Dr Pocock

7 For they have sown the wind, &c.] And as for them, they shall even reap as they have sown: they have sown the wind and they shall reap a whirlwind: they have trusted to vanity, and they shall receive loss and disappointment: a famine shall come upon them: the grain that they have sown, shall yield no stalk, or, if it have a stalk yet that stalk shall yield no ear, or if an ear, yet that ear shall yield no substance of meal: or, if it do yield any, the strangers, their enemies shall swallow it up. Bp Hall

8 Israel is swallowed up.] Though they be not brought to utter destruction and annihilation yet they shall be so "swallowed up," as it were, by other nations among whom they shall be dispersed, that they shall retain neither the constitution, nor the name of Israel, as the people of God, or a people at all of their own jurisdiction. This hath been long since plainly verified in the ten tribes which have been for so many years so lost among the Gentile nations that even the very name of them is perished and no one can say where they are. Dr Pocock

With respect to the expression "alone by himself," at may be observed, that though wild asses be often found in the desert in whole herds, yet it is usual for some one of them to break away, and separate himself from his company, and run alone at random by himself Dr Pocock See also the note on Job xxxix 6

— Ephraim hath hired lovers ] This alludes to the general profusion of the government in forming foreign alliances, in which the latter kings, both of Israel and Judah, were equally culpable as appears by the history of the collateral reigns of Ahaz and Pekah. — as other people ] Those national successes, which might be just cause for rejoicing to other people, are none to thee for thou hast incurred the heavy sentence of God's wrath for thy disloyalty to Him, and all thy bright prospects will vanish, and terminate in thy destruction. The Gentiles were not guilty in an equal degree with the Israelites, for although they sinned, it was not against the light of Revelation, in contempt of the warnings of inspired Prophets, or in breach of any express covenant Bp Horsley

2 The floor and the winepress shall not feed them, &c ] The Prophet here tells them, they might think they had obtained their "reward" For their crops were indeed abundant, nevertheless they would not be the better for the plenty of their land Bp Horsley

3 — the Lord's land, ] The land, which the Lord swore to their fathers to give them, Deut xxv 20, and which He did accordingly give them, still reserving the ownership of it to Himself. See Lev xxv 23 Dr Pocock

— Ephraim shall return to Egypt, &c ] This returning of theirs into Egypt seems to be the flight of several of them thither, to avoid the destruction brought by the Assyrians upon their nation, when the rest were either slain, or carried captives from the Lord's land into Assyria and other countries, where they were "wanderers among the nations," ver 17 Dr Pocock

— and they shall eat unclean things in Assyria ] Their circumstances in captivity shall not permit them to observe the rule of the law relating to unclean meats and they will be forced to eat of such meats as have been offered to idols. Compare Dan 1 8, Ezek iv 13 W Lenth

† Or against 8 The watchman of Ephraim was with my God but the prophet is a snare of a fowler in all his ways, and hatred † in the house of his God

Explanation of that threatening denounced chap iii 4 that they should be "without a sacrifice" they should have no opportunity in their captivity to offer meat offerings or drink offerings to God, as they did upon the high places, or in their idolatrous temples, see Amos iv 4, 5 and sometimes, perhaps in the temple at Jerusalem see Jer 17 They themselves shall be in the condition of mourners for the dead, and by that means be unqualified to offer any thing to God, nor will their offerings be acceptable see Deut xxvi 14 W Lenth

— the bread of mourners ] See the note on Jer xvi 7
— for their bread for their soul shall not come into the house of the Lord ] Either they shall not offer in the house of the Lord oblations for making atonement or expiation for their souls or by "bread for their soul" may be understood such as is necessary for preserving and keeping them alive, and then the meaning is, their bread shall be for their eating, but shall not come into the house of the Lord Dr Pocock

5 What will ye do in the solemn day, &c.] Ye shall have no opportunity of observing any of your solemn feasts in your captivity see chap ii 11 W Lenth

6 For, lo, they are gone &c.] They shall flee into Egypt, hoping there to find refuge and safety from destruction but they shall die there, Egypt shall gather them up, for burial, as the words appear to be explained in the following, "Memphis shall bury them" Memphis, or Moph in the Hebrew, was a chief city or metropolis of Egypt, called Noph in Isaiah, chap xix 18, Jer ii 16, Ezek xxx 18, &c Some suppose it to be the place now called Cairo For the sense here given to "gather," see Jer viii 2, Ezek xxix 5 Dr Pocock The Arabs call Cairo Menoph at this day Abp Newcome

— the pleasant places for their silver, ] The closets or cabinets, where they were wont to hide their treasures and jewels Bp Hall The general sense of this passage is very clear It describes the extreme devastation of the country by the Assyrian conquest, under the image of weeds growing up in the dwellings, deserted by their owners, and stripped of their costly and elegant furniture of silver Bp Horsley

7 — the prophet is a fool, the spiritual man is mad, ] The days are at hand which shall make the Israelites sensible, that not a word of God shall want its effect, and that His Prophets were true Prophets, but their false prophets, to whom the Israelites hearkened, were indeed "fools" and "madmen" And this should come to pass "for the multitude of their iniquity," whereby they

8 The watchman of Ephraim was with my God &c.] The Prophet, whom God sent to them, such as Hosea himself, or any other formerly sent, and by them rejected was "with God" a true Prophet of His, and faithful in the discharge of His commission Dr Pocock The true Prophet, like a watchman sent by God, gave warning to Israel of their approaching calamities see Jer vi 17, Ezek lii 17, xxiii 2 Micah vii 4 But the words of the false prophet are like "a snare" laid on purpose to entrap men into mischief and destruction See chap v 1 And his false prophecies he utters purely out of "hatred" to God and His worship, and to deter those that hearkened to him from attending upon God's service at the temple W Lenth

9 — as in the days of Gibeah ] The men of Gibeah are described in the same characters as those of Sodom are, compare Judges xix 22, with Gen xix 4 to which they added the villainy of forcing the Levites concubine, Judges xix 21 W Lenth

10 I found Israel like grapes in the wilderness &c.] Israel was no less pleasing to Me at the first, than ripe grapes would be to a thirsty traveller in a dry wilderness I esteemed your forefathers, those fruitful Patriarchs, as the most choice and firstripe figs, but their sinful progeny fell off and degenerated to idolatry, applying themselves to that shameful idol, and chose to themselves several abominable deities, according as they were affected to the parties that worshipped them Bp Hall

"The wilderness" is rightly connected with "grapes," and is not to be connected with "Israel" Bp Horsley

— as the firstripe ] The early figs are very desirable, and much esteemed in those countries see Jer xxiv 2, Is xxviii 4 Dr Pocock

— unto that shame, ] See the note on Jer iii 24

11 As for Ephraim, their glory shall fly away &c.] Barrenness is threatened with peculiar propriety, as the judgment for the worship of the idol here mentioned Bp Horsley

13 Ephraim, as I saw Tyrus, is planted in a pleasant place ] The situation of Ephraim, and particularly of the royal city of Samaria, situate in that tribe, is as pleasant as that of Tyre see Ezek xxvii 9 W Lenth

14 Give them, O Lord what wilt thou give? give them &c.] Give them, O Lord what shall I intreat Thee to give them? even that, which they would think to be a judgment miscarrying

wombs and dry breasts that they may never bring forth or nourish up children to idolatry or slaughter Bp Hall

15 All their wickedness is in Gilgal These words may seem a reply from God to the Prophet's petition, shewing that His deserved judgments should not in any degree be taken off from them, by reason of their unworthiness and great provocations Dr Pocock

— for there I hated them Rather, “therefore there I hated them, He hated them there, because they sinned there on surely there I hated them The word “there” is emphatical In that very place where heretofore I shewed them such tokens of My love and gracious presence, even there I have since hated them or now hate them Dr Pocock

Gilgal was the place where the armies of Israel, upon their entering Canaan, first encamped where Joshua set up the twelve stones taken by God's command out of the midst of Jordan, in memorial of the miraculous passage through the river There the first passover was kept, and the fruits of the promised land first enjoyed There the captain of the host of Jehovah appeared to Joshua There the rite of circumcision, which had been omitted during the forty years of the wandering of the people in the wilderness, was renewed And, in the days of the Prophet Samuel, Gilgal appears to have been in approved place of worship and burnt offering But in latter times, it appears from Hosea and his contemporary Amos, that it became a place of great resort for idolatrous purpose And these are the wickednesses in Gilgal, of which the Prophet here speaks Bp Horsley

16 — yet will I slay &c The scope of these words is to set forth the diminution of Israel as to their glory, number, strength, and power, by a firm decree from God This is according to the curc unchangeably denounced against them in the law that, if they should become disobedient, and walk contrary to Him, then He would make them “be left few in number” Lev xxvi 21 Deut iv 27 xxviii 62 Dr Pocock

17 My God] A if He were only the God of the Prophet who chose to Him not of the people who had by their disobedience departed from Him Dr Pocock

— and they shall be wanderers among the nations And so they became and so they continue to this day wandering among the nations so a curse to be found out being no settled place of their own so where that they can be called a people or are so much acknowledged Dr Pocock See the notes on Deut xxviii 61 65 66

for the advancing of his own profit and pleasure as his wealth and abundance increaseth so doth his idolatry look how much he is pampered with his store so much more doth he spend upon his goodly images Bp Hall

The fruit here spoken of is not the fruit of good works, but the fruit of national prosperity increasing population, abundant crops, numerous flocks and herds, publick opulence, military strength Bp Horsley

2 Their heart is divided] between God and their idols pretending to worship God but not cleaving in sincerity to Him nor giving Him their whole heart halting between Him and Baal 1 Kings xviii 21 Dr Pocock

3 For now they shall say, We have no king &c] It shall shortly come to pass, that the enemy prevailing against them and their king, despising men rather than true penitents, they shall be constrained to say We have no king or are as if we had none none that can save us he being taken and not able to defend himself see ver 7 and 2 Kings xviii 4 and deservedly is this happened unto us, because we feared not the Lord we have forsaken Him, and made Him our enemy and what good “then shall a king do to us?” Dr Pocock

4 They have spoken words] I vil words (Dr Pocock) empty words Abp Newcome What follows may be understood as taxing them generally with swearing falsely such as swearing by false gods, or binding them selves to something needless, impossible, or unlawful for breaking the promises which they had ratified by oaths Dr Pocock

— thus judgment springeth up &c] In consequence of their wickedness about their covenants is a punishment of their fraudulent dealings, the judgment of God falls upon them as severe and bitter as “hemlock” Dr Pocock

5 The inhabitants of Samaria shall fear &c] Samaria here signifies the kingdom of Israel of which Samaria was the capital city See chap viii 5 6 The inhabitants of that kingdom shall be seized with fear and confusion, when the calf of Beth-el (see Jer iv 15) shall be carried away as a present to Shalmaneser ver 6 when he made the king and kingdom tributary, 2 King xvii 18 Dr Pocock

— because of the calves of Beth-aven] There is little doubt but the same is here meant as “the calf of Samaria” chap viii 6 Dr Pocock The plural number is used, because the calf of Beth-el (here called Beth-aven as having become the temple of an idol) was in its size and the riches of the temple, the principal image The word therefore may be rendered, the great calf Bp Horsley

7 As for Samaria her king is cut off &c The king spoken of is with reason generally understood to have been Hoshea the son of Elah under whom and with whom Samaria was destroyed, see 2 Kings xxii Dr Pocock

8 The high places also of Aven That is of Beth-aven ver 5 and chap iv 15 or Beth-el which, being by reason of the great wickedness there committed so unworthy of its first name, the house of God, is in contempt first called the house of iniquity and now iniquity itself in the abstract this being the signification of Aven Dr Pocock

— and they shall say to the mountains, Cover us &c The inhabitants shall be so terrified with the sword of the enemy that they shall wish themselves under ground, and speak to the hills and mountains to fall upon them and shelter them from that fury Bp Hall This sublime description of fear and distress our Lord had in view Luke xxiii 30 which may be a reference and not a quotation Abp Venome

9 O Israel thou hast sinned from the days of Gibeah See chap ix 9 Some render it more than in the days of Gibeah W Lenth The sin of Israel now exceeds the sins of those sinful times, when “every man did what was right in his own eyes, and it seemed right in the eyes of the whole tribe of Benjamin to protect the outrage of the Sodomites of Gibeah” See Judges xix Bp Horsley

— there they stood There that is, upon that occasion, namely, the quarrel with the tribe of Benjamin on account of the outrage of the men of Gibeah They stood that is, the Israelites set themselves in array for the attack Bp Horsley

— the battle in Gibeah against the children of iniquity did not overtake them Notwithstanding some losses, small in comparison with that of the tribe of Benjamin, which was all but cut off, God gave the Israelites success in that righteous war Bp Horsley

10 It is in my desire that I should chastise them Though God had hitherto spared them and they thereon grew insolent and secure yet He now declares His determinate purpose of punishing them, and shews by what means and where or why He would do so Dr Pocock

— when they shall bind themselves in their two furrows The Greek translation gives a plainer and easier sense, according to the reading in the margin, “When I shall bind them as it were, hand and foot to deliver them into the hands of the Assyrians who shall be gathered against them,” for their two transgressions namely the calves of Dan and Beth-el Dr Wells, W Lenth

11 And Ephraim is as an heifer that is taught, &c The sense would run easier if we read it, Ephraim is as an heifer that is teachable so I passed over her fair neck I cursed Ephraim to ride, Judah did plow, and Jacob did break the clods God will make Ephraim to ride; Judah shall plow, and Jacob shall break his clods

12 Sow to yourselves in righteousness reap in mercy, break up your fallow ground for it is time to seek the Lord, till he come and rain righteousness upon you

13 Ye have plowed wickedness, ye have reaped iniquity, ye have eaten the fruit of lies because thou didst trust in thy way, in the multitude of thy mighty men

14 Therefore shall a tumult arise among thy people, and all thy fortresses shall be spoiled, as Shalman spoiled Beth-el in the day of battle the mother was dashed in pieces upon her children.

15 So shall Beth-el do unto you because here sets forth the gentle and easy methods He used to bring both Israel and Judah to a sense of their duty treating them with gentleness, as a husbandman does young bullocks or horses stroking them and encouraging them, till they are accustomed to the yoke then He gave them His laws and prescribed them rules for the several duties and offices of life and expected they should bring forth fruit answerable to the several helps and advantages which He had given them W Lenth

— I will make Ephraim to ride Rather I rode upon Ephraim, after the manner of husbandmen who are used to ride upon their bullocks Grotius

12 Sow to yourselves in righteousness He proceed in the same figure of language, expressing in terms belonging to common husbandry such duties as were required of them in their spiritual husbandry, or service of God The people who were before compared to an heifer, are here spoken to as the husbandman, the sower, and reaper We may understand, is introductory to this verse some such words as, And I said Sow &c Dr Pocock

— reap in mercy This is a promise that if they did sow in righteousness, they should “reap in mercy” that is they should experience that measure of mercy, whereby God above their desert rewards those, who sincerely endeavour to do His commandments Dr Pocock The whole verse may be thus paraphrased Give yourselves to all holy and conscientious endeavours sow to yourselves in holiness and righteousness, and reap mercy and lovingkindness from the Lord break up the fallow grounds of your hearts by a true and serious repentance, for it is time for you to turn to the Lord and to seek to recover His favour so far, as that He may rain upon you the showers of His grace and mercy, whereby ye may appear righteous in His sight Bp Hall

13 Ye have plowed wickedness, ye have reaped iniquity In the former verse he shewed, what God commanded them to do here in the like figurative expressions, he shews what they had done Dr Pocock But alas, contrary to My commandments, ye have ploughed up deep furrows of wickedness and have reaped a huge crop of iniquity Bp Hall As your thoughts and designs have been evil such has been the fruit and reward of your labours compare chap viii 7 And ye have eaten the fruit of lies ye have received the just reward of your idolatries See the note on chap vii 8 W Lenth

14 — as Shalman spoiled Beth-el The allusion is to a military exploit not elsewhere recorded or mentioned in Scripture but doubtless well known in Hosea's time in which some powerful conqueror prosecuted his victory with extreme cruelty and spared neither sex nor age The Israelites are threatened with a like calamity Dr Pocock, Bp Horsley

— in a morning shall the king of Israel utterly be cut off] * suddenly shall Hoshea be deprived of his kingdom, and an end put to the whole state and government of Israel. See Ps xlvii 5, xl 14, cxliii 8, Jer vii 13, xxxv 15. W Louth

[Chap. XI. ver. 1 When Israel was a child, then I loved him] When the people was in the state of childhood; that is, in the patriarchal times, and during their continuance under the Egyptian bondage. W Louth

— and called my son out of Egypt] Israel is called God's son, and His firstborn, Exod iv 22, 23, and therein was an eminent figure of the Messiah in whom all God's promises are fulfilled. This prophecy is applied by St Matthew, chap. ii 15, to our Lord's return out of Egypt, after His flight thither in His infancy: and the literal sense of the words does more properly belong to Him, than to Israel, which is observable in many other prophecies, which can but improperly be applied to those, of whom they were spoken, and, taking them in their true sense, are only fulfilled in Christ. See particularly Ps xxii 16, 18. W Louth

2 As they called them &c] The more earnestly the Prophets called on them to cleave steadfastly to the true God, ver. 7, the more they were bent to depart from Him to the worship of idols. W Louth

3 I taught Ephraim also to go,] See Deut i 31, vii 2. W Louth

— but they knew not that I healed them] They considered not that the health and safety they enjoyed was bestowed by Me. W Louth

4 I drew them with cords of a man,] That is, such cords as are proper to draw men with, as they are men, endued with reason, to discern between good and evil, and with freedom of will to choose the one before the other, and with such a temper and agreement of both that what we apprehend to be good, that we freely choose and refuse what we think to be evil. Accordingly God sets before us good and evil, and both in such a light that we may clearly discern the difference between them, and choose the good before the evil. Thus He draws us with cords, suitable to man's constitution: in explanation He adds, "with bands of love" or with expressions of His love and kindness towards us. In this way, one man commonly draws another: how much more can Almighty God do it who hath the hearts of all men in His hand, and the greatest favours to bestow which man can possibly desire? This is the meaning of the Apostle "that the goodness of God leadeth us to repentance, Rom. ii 4. It doth not force or drag us, but it leads us to repentance, and so to Christ. Bp Beveridge. Not violently forcing them into His service, but striving to win them over with gentle invitations, and great favours and benefits, such as usually most powerfully work on reasonable men, and bind them to their benefactor. Dr Pocock — take off the yoke] Or, "lift up, as in the margin. The expression of lifting up the yoke refers as is well observed by Abp Newcome, and before him by Bishop Louth on Isaiah chap. i 3, to the custom of raising the yoke forward, to cool the neck of the labouring beast. Bp Horsley

5 He shall not return into the land of Egypt,] They were desirous of making their escape thither, and many families perhaps effected it: see chap. ix 6. But here it is threatened, that the nation in a body should not be permitted so to escape, because they refused to return to God. Bp Horsley

6 — his branches,] That is, his people. Dr Wells
8 How shall I give thee up, Ephraim? &c] God's mercies are here pathetically described as contending with His justice, to shew that He does not willingly afflict or grieve the children of men, Lam. iii 33. W Louth

When nothing will do, with what difficulty and reluctance does God deliver up His people into the hands of their enemies? "How shall I give thee up, Ephraim? &c. What a conflict is here! What tenderness and yearning of His bowels towards them! He cannot find in His heart to give them up, till He is forced to it by the last necessity. Abp Tillotson — mine heart is turned within me, &c] These words would seem to import a change of mind and purpose in any but God, whose counsels man's words cannot duly express, nor his understanding fully comprehend. Dr Pocock

9 I will not execute the fierceness of mine anger,] I do not give way to a blind rage, as men often do: but as God, am unchangeable and will still fulfil My gracious promises made to Abraham and his people, of being their God. Compare Mal. iii 6. W Louth

— I will not return to destroy] When I come a second time, it will not be to destroy. An indirect promise of coming again, not for judgment, but for mercy. Bp Horsley — and I will not enter into the city] A second time, in order to make an utter destruction. W Louth, Dr Wells

10 They shall walk after the Lord] They shall follow God's call, and comply with His commands, when He shall convert them by an efficacious call of His providence, or powerful preaching of the Gospel. W Louth. These words may be understood

1 A reproof of Ephraim, Judah, and Jacob 3 By former favours he exhorteth to repentance 7 Ephraim's sins provoke God about 725 EPHRAIM feedeth on wind, and followeth after the east wind he daily in-

is a prophecy of the conversion of the remainder of Israel to Christ and the settling of them in a spiritual kingdom which prophecy has been already in great measure made good, by the calling in of many of them at Christ's first coming, and the preaching of the Gospel and is still fulfilling, and to be fulfilled, till His second coming, by the conversion of as many of them as the Lord shall call in the interval between His two comings. Near his second coming it is a received opinion, that there shall be a signal conversion of them Dr Pocock

— he shall roar like a lion ] "He," that is, Christ, "the Lion of the tribe of Juda," Rev v 5 The same, whom it is said that they shall walk after, that is to say, Jehovah, the Lord, the true and essential God Dr Pocock The roaring is unquestionably the sound of the Gospel, and that sound was to begin to be uttered by the voice of the incarnate God Himself Bp Horsley

— then the children shall tremble from the west ] At this efficacious call of God, His children shall come in haste from the several places of their dispersion, and particularly from the western parts of the world, see Zech viii 7, called "the sea in the original, and expressed in Isaiah by "the islands of the sea" see Is xi 11, xxiv 14 W Lenth The children mean primarily and more immediately the Israelites in dispersion abroad out of their own country, Deut xiv 1, and together with them such of the Gentiles, as with them should be called by "the roaring of the lion, the preaching of the Gospel, to the partaking of the common faith and salvation Dr Pocock It is impossible to render in English the full force of the original word, which we translate "tremble" It expresses the rapid motion of birds in the air upon fluttering pinion Bp Horsley

11 They shall tremble as a bird out of Egypt, &c ] The Israelites were dispersed as into other remote parts denoted by "the west, or the sea" so also into Egypt, whither diverse of them took themselves, and into Assyria, whither they were carried captives By the naming of these places may be well understood all other countries where any of them should be from whence it is here promised that they should make speed to come in unto God in their due time Dr Pocock

— and I will place them in their houses, ] As doves naturally resort to the houses they are used to, see Is lx 8, so shall these return and settle in their own native country, see Ezek xxviii 25 W Lenth Or, instead of regarding these words as a promise of bringing the Jews back to their own land, it may be better to look upon them as promising spiritual good things under expressions taken from temporal so that by "placing them in their houses" may be meant the bringing them into the Church, and there putting them in a sure and settled state a state of quiet and security like that of a person fixed in his own house Dr Pocock

3 He took his brother by the heel &c ] From the mention of Jacob in the foregoing verse, the Prophet takes occasion to put his posterity in mind of the particular favours God had bestowed upon his posterity for his sake His taking his brother by the heel in the womb, denoted, that he obtained the right of the first-born, and deprived his brother of it W Lenth

The taking of his brother by the heel is not mentioned in disparagement of the Patriarch On the contrary, the whole of these two verses is a commemoration of God's kindness for the ancestor of the Israelites, on which the Prophet founds an animated exhortation to them, to turn to that God, from whom they might expect so much favour This favour of God for Jacob displayed itself when he was less than an infant, for before he was born he took his brother by the heel, and in his adult vigour, he was endued with such strength as to prevail against an angel Bp Horsley

 the ancient idolaters to kiss the idol was an act of the most solemn 6 — therefore have they forgotten me] “Therefore for that very reason My kindness itself was the occasion of their ingratitude, for, in the pride of heart, which the miraculous supply of their wants for so long a time produced in them, they forgot their Benefactor Bp Horsley

11 I gave thee a king in mine anger,] When the Israelites desired to have a king, they forgot that they had a king already, the Lord of all the earth condescending to be in a peculiar manner their immediate Sovereign Their petition for a king was in contempt of that sovereignty of God, and this was the circumstance by which they incurred God's displeasure in that petition I would observe, that the seven verses of this chapter, from the fifth to the eleventh inclusively, form a section which regards the whole race of Israel in general At the twelfth verse the prophesy turns again on Ephraim in particular Bp Horsley

— I gave thee a king in mine anger, and took him away in my wrath] Or, ‘will take him away’ I complied with your request in giving you a king Saul, though I was justly displeased at it see 1 Sam viii 7, x 19 And of later times I have suffered you to set up new kings, after you had murdered their predecessors, see chap viii 4 and now I will take away your present king Hoshea, and at the same time put an end to your kingdom and nation W Lenth

12 The iniquity of Ephraim is bound up, his sin is hid] Usually such things as are bound up or tied together, and hid or laid up in some safe or secret place, are not neglected or forgotten, but laid aside in order that they may be forthcoming and produced, when occasion shall require God therefore, in these terms expressing His dealing with Ephraim as to their sins, manifestly declares, that though His judgments do not immediately seize them yet their iniquity is not forgotten by Him, but will in due time be brought to light and punished The expressions may be illustrated by Deut xxxii 34, 35, Job xiv 17 Dr Pocock

13 — he is an unwise son, for he should not stay long &c] The old translation renders it more plainly, “Else he would not stand still like a stubborn child As a child, if it could be supposed to have understanding, would deliver itself out of the straits of the womb and not tarry there to the manifest danger of itself and 14 I will ransom them from the power of the grave &c.] If we apply this to Ephraim or the Israelites, spoken of before, it may signify, I though they be in never so hopeless and desperate a condition, God will in due time deliver them out of it See the like expressions, Ps lvi 13, lxxii 20, lxxvii 13 W Lenth

But the words are rather to be understood as promising new and extraordinary benefits, obtained and conferred by our Saviour Jesus Christ, and not limited either to Jews or Israelites, but together with them reached forth to all sorts of men Dr Pocock

— the grave,] Or “hell, as the Hebrew word also signifies “The grave” is the common receptacle of the bodies of the dead and by “ransoming from the power of the grave” is meant a freeing of the bodies of those who are ransomed in due time from the grave by a joyful resurrection Dr Pocock But it should be rendered “hell,” for the Hebrew word for the grave is different, and the two names are never confounded by the sacred writers No two things indeed can be more distinct By “hell” is meant in this passage, not the place where the damned are to suffer their torment, but the invisible place, where the departed souls of the deceased remain, till the appointed time shall come for the reunion of soul and body This is the “hell” of the Old Testament, though, by an abuse of the word the place of torment is the first notion it presents to the English reader But the English word “hell” properly imports no more than the invisible or hidden place, from the Saxon word “helan, to cover over” (see the note from Parkhurst on Job xxvi 5 6) In the New Testament we find the word “hell” in our English Bibles in twenty one passages in all In nine of these it signifies a place of torment namely, in these Matt v 22, 29, 30 x 28, xviii 9, xxiii 15, 33, Mark ix 47, Luke xii 5 In the other twelve, simply the region of departed spirits And in the same sense it is to be taken in the Apostles Creed, ‘He descended into hell’ of this place we know little, except that to those, who die in the Lord, it is a place of comfort and rest, not a paradise of eternal sleep and senselessness but a place of happy rest and tranquil hope In the prophetick imagery it is often mentioned as a dark cave deep in the bowels of the earth Sometimes it is personified, as in this passage Bp Horsley

— O death, I will be thy plagues, &c.] The Apostle's triumphant exclamation in the passage referred to in the margin is an indirect allusion to this text of Hosea Bp Horsley

— repentance shall be hid from mine eyes] That is, God will never repent of His determination of ransoming and redeeming them, He will certainly make it good Dr Pocock

CHAP. XIV.

1 An exhortation to repentance 4 A promise of God's blessing about 725

O ISRAEL, return unto the LORD thy God, for thou hast fallen by thine iniquity.

2 Take with you words, and turn to the

the case stands with Ephraim, though he be fruitful among his brethren: yet I will fetch the Assyrian upon him, &c. Bp Hall The word Ephraim denotes fruitfulness, see Gen xli 52. This tribe answered his name being the most numerous and potent of all the ten tribes. H Ionth

The frequent and sudden transitions from threatening to promise, from indignation to pathetic persuasion, and the contrary produce much obscurity in the latter part of this Prophet, which however disappears when breaks are made in the proper places. In the thirteenth verse the peril of Ephraim's situation, arising from his own hardened thoughtlessness, is described in the most striking images. In the fourteenth, God the Saviour comforts him with the promise of the final deliverance and salvation. In this verse is introduced a new threatening, with which the chapter ends. Bp Horsley

— he shall spoil the treasure of all pleasant vessels ] "He, either Jehovah or the conqueror represented under the image of the wind. All pleasant vessels every article of ornamental furniture, of costly materials and exquisite workmanship. Bp Horsley

It can be not followed by repentance, and a thorough renunciation of all former lusts, habits, and customs, it will be visited with destruction like that of Samaria, which is here foretold, and about four years after was fulfilled. Our Saviour has made the application on another like occasion, and we ought all to lay it to heart that "except we repent, we shall all likewise perish." Hogan

Chap XIV Having denounced in the foregoing chapters heavy judgments against Israel for their idolatry and other sins, the Prophet now shows that the only way to prevent or escape the judgments of God is by repentance, which he earnestly exhorts them to take. Dr Pocock

Ver 1 O Israel ] The whole family of Israel, in both its branches, is addressed. Bp Horsley

2 Take with you words ] That is a set form of supplication. That set form were in use among the Jews in the earliest ages, upon all solemn occasions is evident from various passages of Holy Writ. Bp Horsley, Dr Pocock

— so will we render the calves of our lips ] The meaning is, We will instead of offering sacrifices, render the confession of our lips. Dr Pocock Lips are here put for praises and thanksgivings uttered by the lips. This kind of figure which puts the cause or instrument for the effect, is very frequent with the sacred writers. Bp Horsley

3 Asshur shall not save us &c ] The first part of the people's repentance is described as consisting in a reliance solely upon God's protection, and not putting any trust in human strength, and then in renouncing all idolatrous worship. The Israelites

Lord say unto him, Take away all iniquity, and I will receive us graciously: so will we render the calves of our lips. Before CHRIST about 725

3 Asshur shall not save us, we will not ride upon horses: neither will we say any more to the work of our hands, Or we are our gods: for in thee the fatherless findeth mercy. Eccl 1

4 I will heal their backsliding, I will love them freely: for mine anger is turned away from him.

5 I will be as the dew unto Israel: he shall grow as the lily, and shall cast forth his roots as Lebanon.

6 His branches shall spread, and his beauty shall be as the olive tree, and his smell as Lebanon.

7 They that dwell under his shadow shall return, they shall revive as the corn, and had formerly made in alliance with the Assyrians: see chap vii 1 viii 9 xii 1 and they are often upbraided by the Prophets for their counting foreign alliances and particularly strengthening themselves with horses from Egypt or Assyria. See I xxx 10 xxxvi 8, 2 Chron xvi 7. H Ionth

— for in thee the fatherless findeth mercy ] God is often said to take especial care of "the fatherless." He gives particular command not to afflict any fatherless child, Exod xxi 22. He doth "execute the judgment of the fatherless." Deut x 18. He is therefore styled "the helper of the fatherless." Ps x 14 and "a Father to the poor." Ps lxxviii 5 and it is delivered as an expression of exceeding great mercy towards the people that He will not have mercy on their fatherless. Is x 1. The Israelites therefore being now in such a condition as may be well signified by the appellation of "fatherless," are taught to take with them in their address to God that name of great efficacy in moving Him to mercy and even as it were challenging it as a privilege. Dr Pocock

4 I will heal their backsliding &c ] God's gracious answer to the professions of repentance, assuming them of His being reconciled to them, and as a token of it freeing them from their sins and the consequent punishment due to them. compare chap xi 7 and embracing them with a true love and affection without any remembrance of their former provocations. H Ionth

If all the Israelites had turned to the Lord then God at the preaching of the Gospel and believed in His Christ they would have found this promise made good to them all. As many of them, as were converted to Him, enjoyed the benefit of it: when or however they were dispersed and doubtless shall still do so as many as shall at any time come in to Him where ever they remain. Dr Pocock

5 I will be as the dew unto Israel &c ] I will be comfortable and refreshing unto Israel even as the dew is to the summer grass, so that he shall grow up in beauty as the lily and in strength and height as the cedar in Lebanon. Bp Hall Most interpreters understand Lebanon to be here figuratively taken for the forests growing on it. Dr Pocock

— as the lily, ] After the first rains in the autumn, the fields about Aleppo every where throw out the autumnal lily dissolving and the few plants, which had stood the summer, now grow with fresh vigour. Dr Russell

6 — his smell as Lebanon ] The mountain is celebrated by travellers for the fragrance of the greens, that clothe its sides. Murchell found the great rapture, "which runs at least several hours travel directly up to the sea and is on both sides exceeding steep and high, clothed with fragrant greens from the top to the bottom." Bp Horsley

7 They that dwell under his shadow shall return, ] Most interpreters translate the sentence thus: They shall return, and

be as the wine of Lebanon country and rest safely under the shadow or protection of the W Tenth Or the words are more properly a description of the happy and prosperous condition which shall be enjoyed by those who dwell under the shadow of the Church, the Israel of God and Berytus places at the foot of Lebanon or very near it and says The wine of Mount Lebanon, long since celebrated by the Prophet Hosea is still excellent Bp Horsley

INTRODUCTION

IT IS little doubt that Joel lived in the reigns of Uzziah king of Judah, and of Jeroboam II king of Israel, who flourished as contemporary sovereigns between the years of the world 3194 and 3219 and that he delivered his prophecies soon after Hosca had commenced his ministry, though some Jewish and Christian writers have assigned to him a later period some placing him in the reign of Jotham, others in that of Joram, and others contending that he prophesied under Manassch, or Josiah, the last of which monarchs began to reign about 640 years before the birth of Christ

Joel was the son of Pethuel, or Bethuel, and, according to some reports, of the tribe of Reuben He is related to have been born at Bethoron which was probably the lower or nether Bethoron, a town in the territory of Benjamin, between Jerusalem and Caesarea Of the particulars of his life, or of the age to which he attained, we have no account Dorotheus relates only, that he died in peace at the place of his nativity

The Book appears to be entirely prophetick, though Joel, under the impression of foreseen calamities, describes their effects as present, and by an animated representation anticipates the scenes of misery which lowered over Judea chap 1 4—7 10, 16—20 Though it cannot be positively determined to what period the description contained in the first chapter may apply, it is generally supposed that the Prophet blends two subjects of affliction in one general consideration or beautiful allegory, and that under the devastation to be produced by locusts in the vegetable world, he portrays some more distant calamities to be produced by the armies of the Chaldeans in their invasion of Judea.

In the second chapter the Prophet proceeds to a more general denunciation of God's vengeance, which is delivered with such force and aggravation of circumstance as to be in some measure descriptive of that final judgment, which every temporal dispensation of the Deity must faintly prefigure. The severe declarations of Joel are intermingled with exhortations to repentance, and to the auxiliary means of promoting its effects, fasting and prayer, as also with promises of deliverance, and of a prosperity predictive of evangelical blessings.

In consideration of these important prophecies, we need not wonder that the Jews should have looked up to Joel with particular reverence, or that he should be cited as a Prophet by the evangelical writers chap 11 32, compared with Rom x 13, Acts 11 16—21 Dr Gray

In his style Joel is peculiarly elegant, perspicuous, diffuse, and fluent, he is also in a high degree sublime, bold, and animated In his first and second chapters he shows how well prophetic poetry succeeds in description, how greatly it delights in metaphors, comparisons, and allegories Nor is the arrangement of his subjects less beautiful than the colouring of his language the amplification of calamities exhortation to repentance, the promise to the penitent of earthly as well as heavenly blessings, the restoration of the Israelitish prosperity, the punishments inflicted on their adversaries However both in this and in other places, when we extol the perspicuity of elocution, and beauty of composition, we do not deny that there is sometimes great obscurity in the matter which may occasionally be observed in the conclusion of this prophecy Bp Lenth

2 Hear this, ye old men, and give ear, all ye inhabitants of the land Hath this been in your days, or even in the days of your fathers?

[chap I ver 2 Hear this ye old men, &c] The Prophet declares the unexampled severity of the present judgment, by appealing to the memory of the ancients, and the observation of the present generation whether they ever knew or heard of any thing like it, so that it deserved to be recorded as a warning to posterity Compare chap 11 2 W Lenth

Hebrew names of which appear to be derived from their destructive qualities It is uncertain what names they ought to be in our own, and other European languages Our translators have very well rendered them by the names of such known creatures as concur in hurting and devouring the fruits of the earth, so that whatever escapes one, is destroyed by another Dr Pocock

5 Awake, ye drunkards,] It may seem probable, that the use of drunkenness was then among others much indulged in, and 20 The beasts of the field cry also unto thee: for the rivers of waters are dried up, and the fire hath devoured the pastures of the wilderness

CHAPTER II

1 He sheweth unto Zion the terribleness of God's judgment: 12 He exhorteth to repentance, 15 prescribeth a fast, 18 promiseth a blessing thereon: 21 He comforteth Zion with present, 25 and future blessings

undered the people sottish and stupid, as drunkards usually are, so that they regarded neither the work of the Lord, nor their own good. To them therefore He appears more particularly to address Himself, as having by that odious sin drawn down the present judgment on themselves and their country. The word awake is used to denote the drunkards insensibility to his danger in Prov xxiii 35 and elsewhere it signifies a man's recovery from security in other sins. Rom xiii 11, 1 Ph v 14. Dr Pocock

6 — a nation] Locusts, poetically so called. Abp Newcome. As the Prophet applies the term, 'a nation,' to the locusts, and Solomon calls the ants 'a people,' Prov xxx 25, so Homer has 'the nations of swarming bees,' and 'the numerous nations of swarming flies,' and Orpheus expressly mentions 'an innumerable nation of locusts.' P. Arthur — is come up] A future event, which might be averted by repentance, chap ii 12 &c, is spoken of as having already taken place, to strengthen the description by setting the images before the eyes of the reader. Abp Newcome

— whose teeth are the teeth of a lion] The same comparison is used in Rev ix 8, and denotes the great power of doing mischief possessed by these little vermin. Elsewhere, things which have great force to do hurt, are compared to the teeth of a lion, Eccles xii 2, Ps lvi 6. Dr Pocock

7 He hath laid my vine waste, &c] See the notes on Exod x 15

— the branches thereof are made white] By reason of the bark being eaten from the boughs. Bp Hall

8 Lament like a virgin &c] The words are an apostrophe to the land of Judea: the Prophet puts her in mind that she ought to be deeply affected with the sore strokes of the Divine vengeance, and express her inward sense of those calamities with the same outward expressions of mourning, as a young virgin that was betrothed to an husband would lament his untimely loss.

"The husband of her youth, is a woman's first husband: as the 'wife of his youth,' Mal ii 15, is a husband's first wife. W. Lenth

9 The meat offering &c] The earth yieldeth not so much as herewith to make a meat offering or drink offering unto the Lord, the corn and the wine and the oil are utterly consumed, so that the priests, the Lord's ministers, have just cause to mourn. So also verses 10—13. Bp Hall

14 Sanctify ye a fast, &c] In order to deprecate God's wrath, and avert His judgments. See chap ii 15, 16. W. Lenth. The word "sanctify" seems to require, how the people were to prepare themselves for the enjoined fast, and to behave themselves in it, namely, with more than ordinary sanctity and holiness, not thinking it sufficient only to abstain from meat and drink, which is sufficient to denominate a man to fast, but withal to abstain from sin and wickedness, which is requisite to a holy and religious fast, such as is the duty and sign of an humble penitent, and is alone acceptable to God. Dr Pocock

— into the house of the Lord your God] See 1 Kings viii 27. W. Lenth

17 — the barns are broken down] The receptacles for the fruits of the earth are not repaired, because there is nothing to treasure up in them. Abp Newcome

19 — for the fire hath devoured the pastures &c] For the scorching drought hath devoured all the herbage of the wilderness, and the fiery beams have burnt up all the trees of the field. Bp Hall. The wilderness is sometimes opposed to the hills or mountains, and then it signifies the plains, and places for pasture. See Is lxiii 13, Jer lxi 10. W. Lenth

[ Chap II ver 1 Blow ye the trumpet in Zion, &c ] The Prophet describes the locusts and caterpillars as God's "army," ver 11 in pursuance of which metaphor he exhorts the people to prepare to meet them, in the same terms as if they were alarmed to encounter an enemy, which was by sounding a trumpet. See Jer ix 5 b 19. This ceremony was not only used to give notice of an approaching enemy, but likewise to publish the time of the solemn assemblies for the worship of God see Numb x 30 10. And this is the chief use they were to make of it upon this occasion see ver 15. For there was no other way to avert the impending judgment, but humbling themselves before God with fasting and prayer. ¶ Louth

— the day of the Lord ] A day, in which He will send very terrible judgments on the land, and take vengeance on them for their sins. Dr Pocock

2 A day of darkness ] A very calamitous day, bringing with it much mischief and distress, which are figuratively set forth by dark ness, as a state of prosperity is by light. See Amos v 18 &c. By some interpreters 'darkness' here is understood properly for darkness in the air caused by what should then befall them in their land. Compare Exod x 15. Dr Pocock See on that passage the note from Dr Shaw, whose testimony concerning locusts darkening the sun is confirmed by various authors, ancient and modern

— as the morning spread upon the mountains ] As a morning cloud spread upon the mountains which hides the sun and the heavens and threatens the certain coming of showers. Dr Pocock

— a great people and a strong ] The Prophet speaks of the locusts in such military terms, and represents them like such a formidable army, that it has induced several learned men to think that they are put by a figure to denote real armies. Another opinion is, that we are to understand the locust caterpillar, the palm-worm and caterpillar spoken of ver 4 of the preceding chapter in a literal sense, and that the military terms, which are used may by the authority of parallel passages in Scripture be applied to them. Reading

— there hath not been ever the like, &c ] See Exod x 14. In both places we are to take it for a proverbial expression to set forth the extraordinary greatness of the judgment. Compare 2 Kings xv 11 & xviii 25. ¶ Louth

3 A fire devoureth before them, &c ] They consume like a general conflagration as Pliny says 'burning things up by their touch' Sir Hans Sloane in his Natural History of Jamaica, says, 'They destroy the ground not only for the time but burn trees for two years after' and Ludolphus in the History of

Ithiopia "Wherever they feed, theiravings seem as it were parched with fire." Abp Newcome

— as the garden of Eden ] A proverbial expression for a place of pleasure and fruitfulness as we commonly use the word Paradise. See Gen xiii 10 Is li 3. ¶ Louth

— nothing shall escape them ] That is, nothing which the ground produces. Abp Newcome Different authors give accounts similar to Dr Shaw's in the note on Exod x 15, concerning the devastation occasioned by locusts among all sorts of vegetable productions not only herbage corn, pulse, the fruits and leaves, the buds and very bark of trees but even the hemp not withstanding its great bitterness, and the reeds with which the African huts are thatched

5 Like the noise of chariots, &c ] See Rev ix 9, Nahum iii 2. Bochart says that a swarm of locusts make so loud a noise, when they move, that they may be heard six miles off. Abp Newcome

— like the noise of a flame of fire, &c ] The noise in the former comparison seems to be made by their motion, this is probably meant of the noise made by their chewing or eating. Dr Pocock

Cyril, quoted by Bochart says of them, that while they are breaking their food with their teeth the noise is like that of flame driven about by the wind. Abp Newcome

Dr Chandler in his Travels in Asia Minor takes notice of the prodigious crackling and noise which accompanied an accidental fire, which was kindled in the long pitched grass near Ilios and devoured all before it. Parkhurst

6 — all faces shall gather blackness ] The alteration in the countenance was to indicate the inward pain. Dr Pocock Compare Jer viii 21, Nahum ii 10. ¶ Louth

7. They shall run like mighty men, &c ] They shall march in such a swift and orderly manner, that no place shall be inaccessible to them, nor any force be able to withstand them. ¶ Louth

8 Neither shall one thrust another,] Many writers mention the order of locusts in their flight and march, and their manner of proceeding directly forwards, whatever obstacles were interposed. Abp Newcome See Dr Shaw's note on Exod x 15

— and when they fall upon the sword, they shall not be wounded ] This refers to the scales with which locusts are covered as with a coat of mail. Abp Newcome

9 They shall run to and fro in the city, &c ] Compare Exod x 5, 6. Jerome saith of locusts that there is nothing inaccessible to them, they seize, not only on the fields, corn, and trees, but also enter cities, houses and the most private chambers. Dr Pocock

10 The earth shall quake before them, &c ] This and the fol-

with mourning

13 And rend your heart, and not your even a meat offering and a drink offering

15 ¶ Blow the trumpet in Zion, sanctify a fast, call a solemn assembly following clause expresses great consternation and calamity. The two other clauses may well have a literal sense see the note on ver 2 or they may denote in a strong eastern manner, devastation spread through a whole country. Abp Newcome

11 And the Lord shall utter his voice before his army ] I take a leader or general. He shall command or encourage this His army and can make the means parts of the execution the instruments of His vengeance. God's voice sometimes denotes His anger the most terrible way of declaring His will is when He speaks to us by His judgments. Compare chap 4 in 16, Amos 1 1. Jer xxx 30. The time of God's particular judgments, is well as that of His general one is commonly expressed by the day of the Lord the former being an earnest and imperfect representation of the latter. W Lenth

12 Therefore also now saith the Lord &c ] The sins of the people were the cause which merited this dreadful visitation and the way to remove it was for the people to repent of their sins by open confession and acknowledgment of them, by a deep humiliation and sorrow for them, and by utterly renouncing and forsaking them. This is the great reason of the Prophet's discourse and the main point which he pursues throughout it.
Reading

— turn ye even to me with all your heart ] Let not your heart be divided between God and your idols or other sins, but let it be given wholly up to Him. God requires in our love and service of Him that it be with all our heart, with all our soul, and with all our might. Deut vi 5, and with all our mind, as our Saviour adds in repeating that first and great commandment, without obeying which no other can be duly observed, Mark xii.
30. Without heart, actuated by the heart, all performances of the outward man are insufficient and vain, or rather they are displeasing. ¶ It when the heart shall have duly performed its part the outward man is not left unconcerned, but hath his part also to perform, in order to express how the inward man of the heart is really affected and so by the joint concurrence of both true conversion or repentance is made up. The Prophet therefore to the inward affection of the whole heart adds those outward acts, which are to accompany and express it "fasting and weeping, and mourning." Dr Pocock

He that would so turn to the Lord, as to find mercy with Him, must not turn from one sin to another, or from one sect to another, or from one religion to another only, but he must turn from all his sins, from all his former wicked ways and unrighteous thoughts, and must "turn unto the Lord with all his heart that is, our hearts must be wholly inclined to God and our souls to withdraw His judgments, and instead thereof to bestow a blessing of plenty upon us, so that there may be both matter and occasion for the sacrifices of our thanksgiving unto the Lord. Bp Hall

16 Gather the people, &c ] As their sin and its punishment was national, extending to all ranks and degrees of people the repentance and humiliation was to be as extensive and general.
All are summoned, none exempted. Hogan

17 — between the porch and the altar ] The altar of burnt offerings stood before the porch of the temple. 2 Chron viii 12 and the mid-space in the open court was naturally a place of great concourse, that the prayers of the people might accompany the sacrifice. Abp Newcome

— and let them say, Spare thy people, O Lord ] It was usual to prescribe certain forms of prayer or praise to the priests in their public ministrations see Hosca xiv 2, 1 Chron xvi 6. Such was this here mentioned, wherein they beseech God to deliver His people, not for any merit of theirs, but for the glory of His own name, lest the neighbouring heathens should take occasion to blaspheme His name, as if He were not able to protect His people. Compare Ps xlii 10. xxxix 10. cxxv 2. W Lenth

— that the heathen should rule over them ] Or, as in the margin should use a byword against them, that is should make them the subject of scorn and derision, as if they were forsaken by the God whom they worshipped. W Lenth

The translation "rule over them" may be supported, because when they were distressed by the locusts, they would be an easier prey to an enemy but to make a proverb of them is the more natural translation. Abp Secker

18 Then will the Lord be jealous for his land, ] He will be moved with great affection for it, so as to take away what is injurious to it, and to seek it good, that it continue not desolate and a reproach to its enemies. Dr Pocock

20 — and his stink shall come up, &c.] That a strong and pestilential smell arises from the putrid heaps of locusts, whether driven upon land or cast up from the sea, in which they have perished appears from the testimony of many writers. Among various other authorities to the same effect, St Jerome is quoted by Bochart as saying that in his time those troops of locusts, which covered Judaea, were cast by the wind into the sea, and that when the waters threw them up, their smell caused a pestilence. Hevenot says of them, "They live not above six months and when dead, the stench of them so corrupts and infects the air, that it often occasions dreadful pestilences." Abp Newcome

— because he hath done great things.] Or rather, "although he hath done great things." Though this army of insects, by Divine appointment, has made such destruction in the land, yet shall it come to this shameful end. W Louth Or "because He doth or shall do great things, He, that is, Jehovah." Junius, Castaldi

23 — for he hath given you the former rain.] In the margin, "a teacher of righteousness" a translation, which the words will well bear, and which is given in many versions, and by many expositors of great note and learning, most of whom understand it as a prophecy of the Messiah. Dr Pocock

— my great army.] We have here a key to the grand and beautiful description which runs through these two chapters. Every reader must be struck with the poetical and sublime manner in which the allegory is conducted. There is not a more splendid piece of poetry extant. Abp Newcome

21 And ye shall know that I am in the midst of Israel.] In order to a removal of the threatened evils, the people are exhorted to turn unto God by serious repentance, and are promised that on so doing they should be received again into His favour, and owned for His people. Dr Pocock

28 — I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh, &c.] The plentiful effusion of the Holy Spirit is mentioned by the Prophets as the peculiar character of the Gospel state and it is elsewhere compared to the pouring out of waters upon a thirsty land, satisfied, and praise the name of the LORD your God, that hath dealt wondrously with you and my people shall never be ashamed.

27 And ye shall know that I am in the midst of Israel, and that I am the LORD your God, and none else and my people shall never be ashamed.

28 ¶ And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh, and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions.

This prophecy is one of the clearest and most undoubted of any that foretold the establishment of the new law. It hath been fulfilled in the Christian Church two ways first, by the extraordinary effects of such a general effusion of the Holy Spirit, whereby the Apostles and primitive saints were empowered to work miracles, speak with diverse tongues, and foretell future events, and secondly, in the more ordinary gifts of Divine grace, bestowed upon all Christians. W Louth

29 And also upon the servants and upon the handmaids &c.] Not only, no particular sex or age, but also no particular condition, should render persons incapable of receiving the good gifts of God's Spirit "in those days, that is under the kingdom of Christ. See Gal iii 28, 1 Cor vii 22. Dr Pocock

30 And I will shew wonders in the heavens &c.] The Prophet having foretold in the clearest terms the general effusion of the Holy Spirit, which was to characterize the Gospel dispensation concludes this chapter with a striking description of the destruction of Jerusalem, which followed soon after and punished the Jews for their obstinate rejection of the sacred influence speaking in terms, which, as well as those of our Saviour that relate to them, have a double aspect, and refer to a primary and a final dispensation. Compare Matt xxiv 29. Dr Gray

31 The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood.] That is, into the colour of blood. Härmer These expressions may be understood of the "fearful sights and great signs from heaven, Luke xxi 11, which alarmed the minds of the Jews before the taking of Jerusalem by Titus. Abp Newcome Or, as some expositors think, they are meant, not literally, but metaphorically, and denote such calamities as should deprive the people of all sight of comfort. Dr Pocock. 32 — whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord. St Paul Rom x 13 explains this of such persons as give themselves up to Christ and profess themselves His disciples, that being the most effectual means of escaping the judgments coming upon the unbelieving Jews and likewise of being delivered from the wrath to come. see Luke xxi 22 1 Thess ii 16. W Lenth

This calling on the name of the Lord mentioned by the Prophet, and applied by the Apostle to Jesus Christ plainly proves that Jesus is the Lord Jehovah and that He is to be invoked as the proper object of prayer. Hogan See the note on Rom x 13

Chap III ver 1 — in those days and in that time. The time called the last days, chap ii 28, according to St Peter's interpretation, Acts ii 17, which comprehends all that time which reaches from the first to the second appearance of the Messiah. see the note upon Isa ii 2. The context shews that here is probably meant the latter part of these last days or times. W Lenth

— when I shall bring again the captivity of Judah and Jerusalem. That is when all the Jews then living, whosoever dispersed, shall be converted to Christianity, and thereupon shall be brought back by God to their own country of Judah, and shall again inhabit Jerusalem. Dr Wells Or the words may be interpreted not literally of bringing back the Jews to their ancient seat, but of freeing them from the captivity of sin, and the yoke of the Mosaic law. Dr Pocock

2 I will also gather all nations. Taking the words in a spiritual sense, such as are enemies to God's Church and the true Christian religion. Thus the Jews felt His judgments by the destruction of their city and commonwealth, soon after Christ's first coming, and at His second coming punishment shall be inflicted on all the wicked. Dr Pocock

— and will plead with them there. God pleads with men, and vindicates the cause of oppressed truth and innocence by His judgments. Then their own consciences fly in the face of the guilty, and force them to acknowledge the justice of their punishments. Compare Ezek xvii 20, xx 35, xxxviii 22. W Lenth

3 And they have cast lots for my people. &c.] And they have scornfully and proudly tyrannized over My people and have cast lots upon them, as some slight commodities for sale or exchange, and have given a boy for the price of their lust to a harlot, and sold a girl only for a cup of wine to drink. Bp Hall

The way of dividing captives by lot appears to have been in use of old among nations. compare Nahum iii 10, Obad ver 11. Dr Pocock

4 Yea, and what have ye to do with me, O Tyre, and Zidon.] When the Babylonians, the appointed instruments of My vengeance afflict My land, why do you also and the bordering nations assist them? Do you take this occasion of avenging the former victories of My people over you? If so, this your act of revenge shall be speedily punished. Abp Newcome

5 Because ye have taken my silver and my gold, &c.] The temple was despoiled of its ornaments either through the necessities or wickedness of the kings of Judah, several times. see 2 Kings xii 18, xiii 16, 2 Chron xxviii 21. It was likewise plundered by the Chaldeans often, once in the reign of Jehoiakim, 2 Chron xxxvi 7, then in the short reign of Jehoiachin, 2 Kings xxiv 1 before the last destruction of it, 2 Kings xxv 17, 18. Some part of the furniture might perhaps be sold to the merchants of Tyre and Sidon. W Lenth

6 The children also of Judah — have ye sold.] It was customary for the merchants of the neighbouring countries to buy the children of Israel for slaves in order to sell them again. See 1 Mac iii 41. Syrian that is Greece, particularly dealt in that sort of traffick, Ezek xxvii 13. W Lenth

7 Behold I will raise them out of the place whither ye have sold them &c.] Grotius thinks that this promise concerning the children of Judah was made good under Alexander the Great and his successor, who in favour of the Jewish nation restored to liberty many Jews who were captives or in servitude in Greece and that the threatening in the next verse concerning the persecutors of the Jews had its effect when the same Alexander took Gaza Sidon and Tyre. Others think the fulfilling of these things may be referred to the times of Cyrus or of the Maccabees. The general import of the passage is, that though God sometimes suffers His people to be trampled on and contemptuously used, and ignominiously treated by His and their enemies, yet He will in due time deliver them from the hand of their enemies, to whom He will render a just reward, proportionable to the wrong that they have done to His people Dr Pocock

9 Proclaim ye this among the Gentiles ] After these particular threatenings against Tyre and Sidon, and the neighbouring coast, the Prophet returns to what he had mentioned, ver 2, concerning the heathen or unbelieving world, gathering themselves either to oppose the Jews in their return homeward, or some other way to hinder the growth of Christ's kingdom W Lowth

— Prepare war &c ] The Prophet in an ironical and insulting manner encourages them to make their utmost efforts to oppose the designs of Providence but it should be all in vain See the like expressions, Isa viii 9, 10, Jer xlv 3, 4, Ezek xxxviii 7 W Lowth

11 — thither cause thy mighty ones to come down, O Lord ] According to this rendering of the passage, interpreters understand by mighty ones the angels of God, sent down to defeat His enemies But in the margin it is rendered, "the Lord shall bring down" and in our older English Bibles, "then shall the Lord cast down the mighty men" that is, such as, presuming on their might rebelliously exalted themselves against God and His people Dr Pocock

15 The sun and the moon shall be darkened &c ] This particular judgment shall be a forerunner of the general one, when the whole frame of nature shall be dissolved Particular judgments upon kingdoms and nations are often described in such terms as properly belong to the general judgment W Lowth The words in their plainest and most literal exposition seem to denote such prodigies as shall precede or attend the last dreadful day, and among them a real alteration in the shining of the sun, moon, and stars, not used here, as they are elsewhere, for comparative expressions, but to signify what shall then really and actually be Dr Pocock

16 The Lord also shall roar out of Zion, ] Where He shall give tokens of His especial residence W Lowth Or by Zion and Jerusalem may be understood heaven, the seat of His glory, the representation of which was formerly in the sanctuary, Heb xii 22 Bp Hall, Dr Pocock God's anger, when He speaks to us by His judgments, is fitly compared to the roaring of a lion see Jer xxv 30, Amos i 2 iii 8 W Lowth

— and the heavens and the earth shall shake ] Great commotions or convulsions of states and governments are expressed by "shaking the heavens and the earth" compare Ezek xxxviii 19 Hagga ii 6, 22 But here the words may be understood in a literal sense, because the action here described in this chapter is a forerunner and token of the approaching day of judgment W Lowth

17 — then shall Jerusalem be holy, &c ] This character belongs to the "new Jerusalem" Compare Isa xxxv 8, lu 1, lx 21 Rev xxi 27 Or it may be understood of the earthly Jerusalem, as the metropolis of the converted world As the inhabitants themselves shall be holy, so the city shall be called the "Holy City" as in former times it was, see Dan ix 16, Zech viii 3 compare Isa xiv 23, Micah iv 7, Obad ver 17 It shall be no longer subject to be polluted or oppressed by unbelievers compare Nahum i 15 W Lowth

INTRODUCTION

AMOS appears to have been contemporary with Hosea but it is uncertain which was the first favoured by Divine revelation. They both began to prophesy during the time that Uzziah and Jeroboam the Second reigned over their respective kingdoms and Amos saw his first vision "two years before the earthquake" Amos 1:1 which is well known from Zech with chap xiv 5, happened in the days of Uzziah. Amos, however, began to prophesy some time between the year of the world 3191 and 3219. Some have confounded him with the father of Isaiah.

The Prophet Amos was a native of Tekoa, a small town in the territory of Judah about four leagues southward from Jerusalem and six southward from Bethlehem, Amos 1:1, 2 Chron xi: 6 adjacent to a vast wilderness where probably he exercised his profession.

Amos was an herdsman and a gatherer of sycamore fruit chap vii 14. In the simplicity of former times and in the happy climates of the East these occupations were by no means considered in that degrading light in which they have been viewed since refinement hath introduced a taste for the elegant arts of life. He was no Prophet, as he informed Amaziah chap vii 14 neither was he a Prophet's son: that is he had no regular education in the schools of the Prophets, but was called by an express irresistible commission from God (chap iii 8, vii 15) to prophesy unto His people Israel. The Holy Spirit did not disdain to speak by the voice of the most humble man and selected His ministers as well from the tents of the shepherd, as from the palace of the sovereign. 1 Cor i 27—29 respecting only the qualities and not the conditions of His agents, inasmuch as He was capable of inspiring knowledge and eloquence where they did not previously exist.

Amos undoubtedly composed his prophecies in their present form. He speaks of himself as the author of them chap vii 8, viii 1 and his prophetic character is established, not only by the admission of his book into the canon and by the testimony of other writers Job ii 6, Acts vii 42 43, xv 15—17, but by the exact accomplishment of many prophecies which he delivered. His work consists of several distinct discourses, the particular period of their delivery cannot now be ascertained. They chiefly respect the kingdom of Israel though he sometimes inveighs against Judah, and threatens the kingdoms that bordered on Palestine as the Syrians, Philistines, Tyrians, Idomites, Ammonites, and Moabites. He predicts in clear terms the captivity and the destruction of Israel, to be preceded by fearful signs on earth, and in the heavens, chap viii 8—12 concluding with assurances that God would not utterly destroy the house of Jacob, but after sitting as it were and cleansing the house of Israel among the nations God should again raise up the tabernacle, that is, the kingdom of David to be enlarged to more than its first splendour by the accession of Gentile subjects, and to be succeeded by the establishment of that government, which the Prophet describes under poetical image as a blessed dispensation of security, abundance, and peace, chap ix 11—15. Dr. Gray

This Prophet borrows many images from the scenes in which he had been engaged but he introduces them with skill, and gives them force and dignity by the eloquence and grandeur of his manner. We shall find in him many affecting and pathetic, many elegant and sublime passages. No Prophet has more magnificently described the Deity or more gravely rebuked the luxurians or re-proved injustice and oppression with greater warmth and a more generous indignation. Bishop Lowth, an eminent judge and master of style pronounces him nearly equal to the very first Prophets in elevation of sentiments and loftiness of spirit, and scarcely inferior to any in splendour of diction and beauty of composition. Abp. Newcome

2 — The Lord will roar from Zion &c.] This phrase occurs Joel iii 16. See also Jer xxv 30. The meaning is, that God will soon spread terror, like beasts of prey when they roar, chap iii 5 in other words, that He will soon display His power in executing judgment. The particular judgment here threatened is a drought. See chap iv 6 vi 12. Abp. Newcome

9 — Tyrus,] This is probably to be understood of the destruction of Tyre by Nebuchadnezzar, foretold by Isaiah, chap. xliii, by Jeremiah, chap. xliii 4, where it is joined, as here, with the Philistines, and by Ezekiel, chap. xxvi, xxvii. U

11 — he did pursue his brother with the sword] The two nations were descended from Jacob and Esau who were brethren. It is probable that before Amos prophesied the Edomites had often distressed Judah and Israel in times of calamity. That this was their custom, see 2 Chron xxviii 17. But the words may be spoken prophetically of the conduct which the Edomites would pursue at the taking of Jerusalem by the Babylonians. Obad 11—14, Ezek xvi 12 xxxv 5, Ps cxxxvii 7 thp Newcom

12 — I will send a fire &c] Nebûchadnezzar subdued the Edomites Jer xxv 9, 21 xxvii 3, 6 Judas Maccabeus obtained a great victory over them, 1 Macc v probably after they had left the Nabathæans in consequence of a sedition and had settled to the south of Judah for it seems that the Babylonian conquests had compelled them to take refuge in that part of Arabia. Afterwards Hyrcanus reduced them under subjection, and permitted them to remain in their country, on condition that they conformed to the Jewish laws see the note on Obad ver 2. the Ammonites to possess themselves of Gilead, which lay near their own borders, and to destroy the inhabitants in the cruel manner here described. Compare Jer xlix 1, Zeph. ii 8, Hos xiii 16. W Lowth The histories of those times, transmitted down to us, are so concise, that we often want information concerning the particular facts alluded to. Abp Newcome

14 — Rabbah ] This was the capital city of the Ammonites, who were conquered by Nebuchadnezzar, Jer xxvii 5, 6. Abp Newcome

— with a tempest in the day of the whirlwind ] The destructions of war are often compared to the devastations caused by whirlwinds and tempests. see Is v 26, Jer xxv 32, Dan xi 40, Zech ix 14. W Lowth

Chap II ver 1 — Moab, ] As Moab and Ammon were nearly related, and bordered upon each other, so they are usually joined together in the threatenings of the Prophets. see Jer xlviii, xlix, Ezek xxv 1—8, Zeph ii 8. W Lowth For the origin of these two people, see Gen xix 37, 38. Their country lay to the east of the Dead sea. Abp Newcome

— because he burned the bones of the king of Edom into lime ] That is into ashes out of contempt and inhumanity. This is in all probability to be looked on as a distinct fact from that related in 2 Kings iii 27, the circumstances being so widely different. Kirioth was the chief city of Moab. Dr Wells

3 — the judge ] This word denotes the supreme magistrate or governor. see Deut xvii 9, and is here equivalent to the king. Compare Mic v 1. W Lowth Moab was conquered by Nebuchadnezzar Jer xxvii 3, 6. Abp Newcome

6 — Israel ] Amos first prophesied against the Syrians, Philistines, Tyrians, Idonites, Ammonites, and Moabites, who dwelt in the neighbourhood of the twelve tribes, and had occasionally become their enemies and oppressors. Having thus taught his countrymen that the providence of God extended to other nations, he briefly mentions the idolatry and consequent destruction of Judah, and then passes on to his proper subject, which was to exhort and reprove the kingdom of Israel, and to denounce judgments against it. The reason why that kingdom was particularly addressed seems to have been, that Pot invaded it in the reign of Uzziah, 2 Kings xi 19, and that in less than half a century after the first Assyrian invasion, it was subverted by Shalmaneser, 2 Kings xvii 6. Abp Newcome

The particular sins, for which the Israelites are threatened with punishment, were, first, Their notorious cruelty and oppression in the corrupt administration of justice, Secondly, Their covetousness, in perverting justice for the most paltry recompence, Thirdly, Their licentious and incestuous commerce. Danau

7 That pant after the dust of the earth on the head of the poor, ] All their desire is after this unprofitable dust of the earth, silver and gold, which they eagerly desire to gain, even by trampling on the heads of the poor. Bp Hall Or the sense may be taken according to the Latin version, "Who tread down the heads of the poor into the dust of the earth, that is, they throw them into the dust, and then trample upon them." W Lowth

— turn aside the way of the meek ] That is, from right and justice. see chap v 12, Is x 1, xxix 21. Abp Newcome

— to profane my holy name ] To treat Me as if I was not a holy and fearful God, Ezek xx 39, or, by giving occasion of reproach among the heathen, Ezek xx 9. Abp Newcome

8 And they lay themselves down &c. ] This is to be understood of the feasts, which were made of part of their idolatrous sacrifices, and were eaten in some of the apartments of their temples according to the custom both of the Jews and Gentiles. see 1 Sam ix 13, 15, 22, Is lvi 7, Ezek xxiii 41. The Prophet reproves them, not only for partaking of things offered to idols, but likewise for making use of other men's furniture, left in their hands for a pledge, to set off their idolatrous entertainments. Here was another instance of their unmercifulness, to retain pledges received from the poor, contrary to law, Exod xxii 26. See note upon Ezek xviii. 7. The Jews as well as the Romans used to lie along at their meals on couches, as appears by this verse, compare chap vi. 4. This custom continued in aftertimes, as appears by several places in the Gospels, where it is in the original, "lay down to meat," though our translation renders it "sat down to meat." The custom of sitting at meals seems to have been the more ancient of the two. See Gen xliii 38, 1 Sam ix 2, xvi 11, xx 25. W Lowth

9 Yet destroyed I the Amorite before them, &c] The sins of the Israelites against God are here amplified by the sundry and great benefits of God towards the Israelites first by the utter destruction of the powerful and valiant nation of the Amorites, and then by the blessings, which He bountifully bestowed upon them, as in their deliverance from Egypt and their establishment in the promised land ver 10, so also in the guidance which He vouchsafed them by means of Prophets and holy men devoted to His service, ver 11 But these benefits they neglected or despised, especially those of a spiritual kind, enticing the Nazarites to break their vow of abstinence, Numb vi 2, &c and forbidding the admonitions of the Prophets, ver 12 Danaus

14 Therefore the flight shall perish from the swift, &c] That God shall render ineffectual all their resources and methods of escape whether they be natural, as swiftness of foot and strength of body, or acquired by industry, diligence, and wit, as power and authority among others, skill in battle, or riches, and horses trained for war Hence appears the vanity of all human devices set up in opposition to the judgments of God Nothing but God's mercy can deliver us from His justice, and that mercy is to be obtained only by true repentance through the promises of God in Christ Jesus Danaus

6 Shall a trumpet be blown in the city, and the people not be afraid? &c] Shall a trumpet be blown in the city, to summon the inhabitants to the walls, yet the people find no cause of the fear of an enemy? no more would God by His Prophets denounce these imminent judgments, if there were not just cause to expect and fear their speedy execution and who shall or can execute them, but the just and powerful hand of God? ## CHAP IV

1 He reproveth Israel for oppression, for idolatry, and for their incorrigibility.

HEAR this word, ye kine of Bashan, that are in the mountain of Samaria, which oppress the poor, which crush the needy, which say to their masters, Bring, and let us drink.

2 The Lord God hath sworn by his holi-but we ourselves. Compare James i 13, 14, Hos xiii 9 Danaus

7 Surely the Lord God will do nothing, &c.] There was a succession of Prophets among the Jews from Samuel's time, till the captivity: the people commonly consulted them upon extraordinary occasions, and they gave them counsel and direction what was proper to be done. See chap ii 11, 1 Kings xxii 1, 2 Kings iii 11, xxii 13, Jer xxi 2, Ezek xx 1, &c. The want of this prophetic gift was much lamented in the times of the captivity. See Ezek vii 26, Lament ii 9, Ps lxxiv 9. W Lowth

8 The lion hath roared, &c.] The awful admonitions uttered by the Prophets are as natural a consequence of God's command, as fear is of the lion's roaring. Abp Newcome

9 Publish in the palaces at Ashdod, &c.] God calls upon the heathen to be witnesses of His judgments upon His own people, that they may take warning thereby: particularly He gives notice to the "Philistines" and "Egyptians," the Jews inveterate enemies, that they may assemble themselves, and with pleasure behold the ravages and oppressions which their insulting adversaries will bring upon the kingdom of Israel. W Lowth

12 — As the shepherd taketh out of the mouth of the lion &c.] As the shepherd, when a lion hath been devouring amongst his flock, finds some mangled remnants of a leg or an ear, which he carries home, to shew the spoil that hath been done by that fierce beast, so shall it be with Israel, of all the body of Samaria, there shall be come one or two left undevoured, for proof of the general laughter and captivity. Rp Hall

— that dwell — in the corner of a bed,] It means, that not many of those who dwell and live delicately in Samaria, shall be able to deliver themselves from destruction. The delicacy and luxurioussness of their lives is described by their beds and couches, on which they daily lie and repose themselves. Danaus, Dr Hally, Abp Newcome

Those now most at their ease shall be delivered to their enemies like sheep to the lion: and scarce any of them be rescued from his jaws.

We learn from Sp Pococke, Maundrell, Hanway, and other travellers, that in the East the place of honour, the most easy voluptuous, indulging station is the corner: and that it is the position in which great men usually place themselves. The word rendered bed, may be understood of a divan or sofa. Harmes Parkhurst, Fragments to Calmet. See the note on Deut iii 11 from Fragments to Calmet.

— and in Damascus in a couch.] It is who are now in high honour in their own, or indulging in foreign luxuries in other countries. Damascus was a most delightful place: and as Amos delivered this prophecy in the days of Joabab, the son of Joash king of Israel, chap i 1, who recovered Damascus for Israel, see 2 Kings xiv 28 it is probable that many of the richer Israelites might choose to dwell there. Parkhurst

14 — I will also visit the altars of Beth-el &c.] I will reckon with Israel for his idolatries in Dan and Beth-el: and for those altars which he hath erected there, and will cause those uncorrected altars to be beaten down to the ground. Rp Hall. See 1 King xii 29, 32. The destruction of the altar at Beth-el is also foretold chap v 3, and is perhaps referred to in Jer xlviii 13. Abp Newcome

15 And I will smite the winter house with the summer house.]
See the note on Jer xxxvi 22.

— the houses of ivory.] The Romans anciently ornamented their houses with ivory: and the Eastern people might possibly do the same. Sir J Chardin says, the ceilings of the Eastern houses are of mosaic work, and for the most part of ivory: and Dr Russell notices, that "ivory is likewise employed at Aleppo in the decoration of the more expensive apartments." Harmes. Such houses were probably called "ivory houses," just as the emperor Nero's palace, mentioned by Suetonius, was named "golden, because it was overlaid with gold." Parkhurst

Chap. IV ver 1 Hear this word ye kine of Bashan &c.] Hear this O ye great and rich men of Samaria, that feed full and carelessly, like the kine in the fat pastures of Bashan: ye who oppress the poor and crush the needy, and say to your princes and judges Set deep fines, and condemn freely, that we may feast upon the offences of the people. Rp Hall

The luxury and insolence of oppressors is often compared to the wantonness of full-fed cattle: see Ps xxii 12, lxxviii 30. Bashan was remarkable for the richness of its pastures, and its breed of cattle. Numb xxxii 1, Deut xxxii 14, Ezek xxxix 18. *W

6 And I also have given you &c.] After declaring the presumptuous idolatry of the Israelites, the Prophet describes their obstinate continuance in it, which was such, that they could not be withdrawn from it by any afflictions or punishments and be induced to worship and serve the true God In this and the fol lowing verses are enumerated the several afflictions, with which they were visited such as famine, ver 6, drought, ver 7, 8, destruction of the fruits of the earth, ver 9, pestilence, war, and defeat, ver 10, and the overthrow of some of their cities, ver 11 At the end of each of these punishments, it is to be observed, that the Prophet adds in the name of the Lord, "yet have ye not returned unto Me" This addition shews, that the mind of the Israelites was not only careless and unmoved amid those great miseries and calamities, but that it was also desperate and gone past recovery in their idolatry, which they could not by any means be wrought on to cast off, and so return by true repentance to the knowledge and worship of God Danah's It is the desire of God to reclaim men by afflictions, which for this purpose He sent among the Israelites Bp Hall

12 Therefore thus will I do unto thee] Since thou hast slighted all these judgments, I am resolved to execute upon thee the severest of all My vengeance, and since thou hearest I have taken up this determination to proceed against thee, therefore prepare thyself, O Israel, to meet thy God with unfeigned humiliation and repentance. Bp Hall Or the phrase "Prepare thyself to meet thy God," may be understood as signifying Prepare to meet My wrath, that is, expect the most terrible punishment See Abp Tillotson's note at the end of the chapter

13 For, lo, he that formeth the mountains &c.] For wilt thou knowest, there is no hoping to resist the power of the Almighty it is He that formeth the mountains, and infuseth the spirit into man and knoweth and declareth the thoughts of man's heart, as well as what Himself intends to do with him, it is He that can cloud the brightest day at pleasure, and can bring down the highest and strongest fortifications upon earth He is the Lord of hosts, all things are at His command Bp Hall, Dr Stokes

1 A lamentation for Israel. A An exhortation to repentance. 21 God rebuketh their hypocritical service.

HEAR ye this word which I take up against you, even a lamentation, O house of Israel.

2 The virgin of Israel is fallen, she shall no more rise: she is forsaken upon her land, there is none to raise her up.

3 For thus saith the Lord God, The city that went out by a thousand shall leave an hundred, and that which went forth by an hundred shall leave ten, to the house of Israel.

4 ¶ For thus saith the Lord unto the house of Israel, Seek ye me, and ye shall live.

Chap 5
5 But seek not <sup>a</sup> Beth-el, nor enter into Gilgal, and pass not to Beer-sheba: for Gilgal shall surely go into captivity, and Beth-el shall come to nought.

6 Seek the Lord, and ye shall live, lest he break out like fire in the house of Joseph, and devour it, and there be none to quench it in Beth-el.

7 Ye who turn judgment to wormwood, and leave off righteousness in the earth,

8 Seek him that maketh the <sup>a</sup> seven stars, and Orion, and turneth the shadow of death into the morning, and maketh the day dark with night: that calleth for the waters of

and then "pestilence," and then "the sword," and last of all a terrible "fire" which had almost consumed them. "I have overthrown some of you as God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah, and ye were as a firebrand plucked out of the burning, yet have ye not returned unto Me," ver 11. And because all these judgments had not been effectual to reclaim them, He tells them, that He was resolved to go on in punishing, and therefore He bids them to expect it and prepare themselves for it. "Therefore thus will I do unto thee, O Israel: and because I will do this unto thee, prepare to meet thy God, O Israel," ver 12. When God hath begun to punish a people, and they are not amended by it, the honour of His justice is concerned to proceed, and not to give over. By every sin that we commit, we offend God, but if He smite us, and we stand out against Him, then do we contend with Him and strive for mastery. And when the sin is upon these stubborn and insolent terms, then "prepare to meet thy God." A bitter sarcasm as if man could be a match for God, and a poor weak creature in any wise able to encounter Him, to whom power belongs. There is a severe expression concerning God's dealing with such perverse and obstinate sinners, Ps. xviii. 40, with the howard thou wilt show thyself howard, or, as the words may more properly and conveniently be rendered "with the howard thou wilt wicstle." God will not be outbraved by the sins of men: and therefore if we continue impenitent, we have all the reason in the world to expect, that God should go on to punish. Abp. Lillston

Chap V ver 1 — against you.] Rather over you. The allusion is to the lamentations made at funerals: see ver 16. Jer. ix. 17, Ezek. xix. 1. xxvii. 2. So the Prophet bemoans the state of the kingdom of Israel as dead and irrecoverably lost. H. Lenth

4, 5 — Seek ye me, — But seek not Beth-el &c.] The Israelites are here commanded to seek the Lord and to abstain from idols, such as were then in Beth-el, Gilgal and Beer-sheba: and this monition is enforced by two powerful considerations, that if they "seek the Lord, they shall live," that is, shall enjoy life, and salvation, and deliverance from their troubles, but that if they seek their idols, they shall be cut off together with those objects of their idolatrous worship. Danvers

WOE to them that are at ease in Zion, and trust in the mountain of Samaria, which are named chief of the nations, to whom the house of Israel came

In the former verse, the emphasis lies in the word 'Me' Did ye offer such sacrifices as were acceptable to Me such entire and undivided service as I enjoined? In the latter verse God is introduced as replying, No, ye sometimes carried about Moloch in his shrine or tabernacle Abp Newcome The tabernacle of Moloch was a shrine, with the image of the deity placed within it such were the silver shrines of Diana, Acts xix 24 and the Thensae or Lectica among the Romans These their votives carried in procession, as a solemn piece of worship or pledge of the presence of their gods among them See Is xlvii 7 Moloch is an idol often mentioned in Scripture Chum is generally supposed by learned men to be the same with Saturn The same idol was called Remphan, or Rephan, by the Egyptians W Louth

The sorts of idolatry here recited are not to be restrained to the time, during which the Israelites lived in the wilderness but are to be extended over the whole space which passed from their coming out of Egypt to the time of Amos Danau

Therefore will I cause you to go &c.] That is, Because of the little sincerity and devotion, with which your forefathers formerly performed their sacrifices to Me, and with which you perform them at present The Prophets often upbraid the Jews with the sins of their forefathers, and threaten them with remarkable judgments on that account, when their posterity continue in the same or worse impieties See Hos ix 9, 10, x 9 Compare Matt xxiii 35 W Louth

2 Pass ye unto Calneh, and see, and from thence go ye to Hamath the great then go down to Gath of the Philistines be they better than these kingdoms? or their border greater than your border?

3 Ye that put far away the evil day, and cause the seat of violence to come near,

4 That lie upon beds of ivory, and stretch themselves upon their couches, and eat the lambs out of the flock, and the calves out of the midst of the stall,

5 That chant to the sound of the viol, and invent to themselves instruments of musick, like David,

6 That drink wine in bowls, and anoint themselves with the chief ointments: but they are not grieved for the affliction of Joseph

7 ¶ Therefore now shall they go captive with the first that go captive, and the banquet of them that stretched themselves shall be removed

2 — [Calneh — Hamath — Gath] Calneh was a city in the region of Babylon, Gen x 10; and, as it seems, lately subdued by the Assyrians. Hamath was a Syrian city on the Orontes. It was conquered by Ieroboam, 2 Kings xiv 25, and by the Assyrians 2 Kings xix 1. Gath of the Philistines was taken by Uzziah in whose reign Amos prophesied, 2 Chron xxvi, 6. Abp Newcome

— be they better than these kingdoms? &c.] Why then do ye worship their gods? and why are ye not grateful to Jehovah? Abp Newcome

3 Ye that put far away the evil day, &c.] Who persuade yourselves that God's judgments will not overtake you, and turn the seat of justice into the seat of oppression. W Lowth

4—6 These three verses are an elegant description of the ill use which men too often make of a plentiful fortune. It shuts out all serious considerations, makes them void of compassion towards the afflicted, and disposes them to regard nothing but the gratification of their senses. W Lowth

4 — beds of ivory.] That is, sofas adorned or inlaid with ivory. In Homer we read of "a couch wreathed with ivory and silver" and "a bed variegated with gold, silver, and ivory." Parkhurst

— lambs.] In many parts of the East lambs are spoken of as a sort of food excessively delicious. Sir I Chardin

5 — like David.] Abusing his holy example, in applying to purposes of wantonness and riot what he consecrated and dedicated to God. It is the abuse of musick which is here condemned. Danaeus

6 That drink wine in bowls.] The Prophet alludes, either to the quantity drunk, or more probably to the magnificence of the drinking vessel. Harmer

— they are not grieved for the affliction of Joseph.] They do not humble themselves under God's afflicting hand, nor lay to heart the miseries the Divine judgments have brought upon the kingdom of Israel, called by the name Joseph, and "the house of Joseph" chap v 6 1. W Lowth

Wine, and musick, and gorgeous apparel, and delicate fare are things which God in His goodness hath created and given to the children of men for their comfort, and they may use them lawfully, and take comfort in them as their portion: but he that shall use any of them intemperately or unreasonably, or vainly, or wastefully, abuses both them and himself. And therefore we shall often find both the things themselves condemned, and those that used them blamed in the Scriptures. Besides the text, see

8 The Lord God hath sworn by himself, saith the Lord the God of hosts, I abhor the excellency of Jacob, and hate his palaces: therefore will I deliver up the city with all that is therein

9 And it shall come to pass, if there remain ten men in one house, that they shall die

10 And a man's uncle shall take him up, and he that burneth him, to bring out the bones out of the house, and shall say unto him that is by the sides of the house, Is there yet any with thee? and he shall say, No. Then shall he say, Hold thy tongue for we may not make mention of the name of the Lord

11 For, behold, the Lord commandeth, and he will smite the great house with breaches, and the little house with clefts

12 ¶ Shall horses run upon the rock? will one plow there with oxen? for we have turned judgment into gall, and the fruit of righteousness into hemlock

Is in 18—23. Luke xvi 19, vi 25. And yet none of all the things, here condemned, were or are in themselves unlawful: it was the excess only or other disorder in the use of them, that made them obnoxious to reproof. In many things of this sort we may easily err, in point either of judgment, or of practice: or of both, if we do not wisely distinguish the use from the abuse. Often because the abuses are common and great we peevishly condemn in others the very use of some lawful things. Often again, because there is evidently a lawful use of the things, we impudently justify ourselves in the very abuse of them. In the former case we infringe our brethren's liberty, in the latter we pollute our own. The best and safest way for us in all indifferent things is this: to be indulgent to others, but strict to ourselves: in allowing them their liberty with the most, but taking our own liberty ever with the least. Bp Sanderson

8 — I abhor the excellency of Jacob.] Whatever the kingdoms of Israel and Judah value themselves for, is hateful to Me, as having been abused by them, and made instrumental in dishonouring Me. W Lowth

9 — if there remain ten men in one house, that they shall die.] Those that escape the hands of the enemy, shall die by pestilence or famine during the siege. W Lowth Abp Newcome

10 And a man's uncle shall take him up, &c.] A man shall not have a brother or a son left, to do him the last offices of his burial, but if his uncle or his kinsman shall undertake to bring out his corpse, he that is the overcacer of these funeral rites, joining with him in that work, shall say to that one which is left alive in the house, Is there any one remaining of the whole number of the family? and he shall say, No. Then shall the other answer again, Rest thou humbly and silently in the just pleasure of the Almighty: this is His work: as for us, our sins have been so grievous, that in conscience thereof, it is not for us to call on the name of the Lord for a release or mitigation of His judgment. Bp Hall

11 — the great house &c.] Universal ruin shall be spread through the city by the enemy. Or the earthquake may be alluded to. Abp Newcome

12 Shall horses run upon the rock? &c.] Is it possible that horses should run upon the steep and craggy cliffs? or can it be that the husbandman should drive his plough through the hard rock? so impossible is it that ye Israelites should continue to prosper while ye remain thus sinful: for ye have corrupted judgment and justice, and made it hateful and deadly to the innocent. Bp Hall See Bp Lowth's note on Is v 28

The sins here described, as especially provoking God's indignation are First the injustice and violence committed by the rich and great Secondly A sensual and voluptuous life, high living the love of pleasure and diversions, and pride Thirdly, Insensibility under God's corrections and the examples of His wrath These were the sins for which the Jews perished, and which bring down His vengeance upon such as are guilty of them We ought therefore most carefully to avoid them To this end let us consider, that these sins not only expose men to temporal punishments, but make them subject still more unavoidably to the punishments of the world to come and that injustice a love of pleasures, impotence and incorrigibility are still more displeasing to God in Christians than they were in the Jews, because the Gospel does so expressly command and by the most powerful motives engage us to renounce the desires of the flesh, and to live in charity, temperance, and humility Osterwald

3 The Lord repented for this &c] To affect the mind of the Prophet and by him that of the people God displays different judgments and shews His clemency by forbearing to execute them upon the intercession of Amos it being His sole intention to put the modes of punishment, and not to inflict them Abp Newcome

4 — behold the Lord God called to contend by fire &c] The second vision represents a more furious enemy, that consumed all

3 The Lord repented for this It shall not be, saith the Lord Before CHRIST 74

4 ¶ Thus hath the Lord God shewed unto me and, behold, the Lord God called to contend by fire, and it devoured the great deep, and did eat up a part

6 The Lord repented for this This also shall not be, saith the Lord God

7 ¶ Thus he shewed me and, behold, the Lord stood upon a wall made by a plumbline, with a plumbline in his hand

7, 8 — [the Lord stood upon a wall made by a plumbline,] God's judgments are sometimes represented by a "line," and a "plumbline," to denote that they are measured out by the exactest rules of justice see 2 Kings xxi 13, Is xxviii 17 The instruments which are designed for building are sometimes used to mark out those places, which are to be pulled down and destroyed see 2 Sam viii 2, Is xxxiv 11, Lam ii 8 The vision imports that as God formerly built up His people, He would now pluck them down and destroy them. See Jer i 10, xxxi 28 W Iowth

8 — [Amos, what seest thou?] This is said to excite the Prophet's attention Abp Newcome

I will not any more pardon and pass by their wickedness Bp Hall In this third vision the Prophet is informed, that now God Himself examines and tries the doings of the Israelites according to the exact or perfect rule of His justice, as prescribed to them in His law, and that He will give sentence upon them according to this rule, and not according to the mildness and gentleness of His mercy, which he had before exercised towards them, but which they had abused by becoming worse instead of better Now therefore He will no more pardon and pass over them, but will call all things to a just account, as carpenters and builders are accustomed to try and examine all things by line and by level Danaus

9 And the high places &c] "The high places of Isaac" were the altar and grove at Beer sheba, where Isaac dwelt and built an altar, Gen xxvi 25, xlvii 1 this place was afterwards abused to idolatry chap v 5 "The sanctuaries of Israel" were the places set apart for idolatrous worship, such as Beth-el, Gilgal, and Beer sheba, chap iii 14, v 5 The word "sanctuary" is used for an idolatrous temple, Is xvi 12 W Iowth

11 For thus Amos saith, Jeroboam shall die by the sword, and Israel shall surely be led away captive out of their own land

12 Also Amaziah said unto Amos, O thou seer, go, flee thee away into the land of Judah, and there eat bread, and prophesy there

13 But prophesy not again any more at Beth-el for it is the king's chapel, and it is the king's court.

14 ¶ Then answered Amos, and said to Amaziah, I was no prophet, neither was I a prophet's son; but I was an herdsman, and a gatherer of sycomore fruit

15 And the Lord took me as I followed the flock, and the Lord said unto me, Go, prophesy unto my people Israel

16 ¶ Now therefore hear thou the word of the Lord Thou sayest, Prophesy not against Israel, and drop not thy word against the house of Isaac.

17 Therefore thus saith the Lord, Thy wife shall be in harlot in the city, and thy sons and thy daughters shall fall by the sword, and thy land shall be divided by

— Amos hath conspired against thee in the midst of the house of Israel ] This is, in Beth-el, where is the greatest confluence of thy subjects Bp Hall

11 — Jeroboam shall die by the sword, ] This was a plain perverting of the Prophet's words for he did not prophesy against the king himself but against his family and posterity W Louth

12 12 Also Amaziah said unto Amos, O thou seer, &c ] Retire home to thy own country of Judah, and there maintain thyself, and there bestow thy pains and admonitions, but venture not any more to vent thy prophecies in Beth-el, for thou knowest the condition of this place it is both the king's sanctuary for his devotion, and the king's court for state meddle not any more with prophesying here, lest thou provoke the king's anger against thee Bp Hall

14 — I was no prophet neither was I a prophet's son ] I was not a Prophet by profession, nor bred up in the schools of the Prophets, as usually were those who took the prophetic office upon them See 2 Kings ii 3, &c, iv 38 vi 1 II Louth Amos says that he had no pretensions to the office or title of a Prophet by birth, succession, or education, but since it had pleased God to lay upon him, by a special commission the necessity of prophesying he must obey the Divine call rather than the command of the king Dr Stokes

shall abuse thy wife, and treat her as a common prostitute as a just punishment of her idolatry which is spiritual whoredom thy sons and thy daughters shall fall by the sword of the Assyrians as a recompense for thy infidelity concerning My promise that the house of Jeroboam shall fall by the sword ver 9 thy land shall be divided by measuring it, as usual with a line or cord, among those to whom the king of Assyria shall give it as a suitable punishment for thy contradiction of My prophecy concerning the conquest of this kingdom by the Assyrians and thou shalt die in a polluted land, or in a land where idolatry prevails and where it will be impossible to converse without committing legal impurity, because thou hast been instrumental in keeping the people of Israel in idolatry, whereby this kingdom is polluted and the people of Israel shall surely go into captivity forth of his land, because they have hearkened unto thee rather than unto God, speaking to them by His Prophets Dr Wells, II Louth

Chap. VIII ver 1, 2 — behold a basket of summer fruit &c ] The basket of ripe summer fruit which Amos saw in this fourth vision was to denote that Israel's sins were now ripe for judgment, as the time of judgment is elsewhere expressed by an harvest or a vintage See Joel iii 13 The two Hebrew words for summer fruit and in end have an affinity in sound, which gives occasion to a play on the words not unusual in Scripture II Louth See Jer 12 11, and the note there

3 And the songs of the temple shall be howlings in that day, ] Instead of the songs and musick of the temples of Beth-el and other high places there shall be nothing but howlings and shriekings of those that are slain Bp Hall

5 Saying, When will the new moon be gone, ] When shall we have done with these solemn feasts, wherein we are not allowed to buy and sell? would God these new moons and sabbaths were once past, that we might sell our corn at a high rate, making the measure of the wheat small, and the weights, wherewith the silver is weighed great and heavy and falsifying the balances by deceit

6 That we may buy the poor for <sup>a</sup> silver, and the needy for a pair of shoes, yea, and sell the refuse of the wheat?

7 The Lord hath sworn by the excellency of Jacob, Surely I will never forget any of their works

8 Shall not the land tremble for this, and every one mourn that dwelleth therein? and it shall rise up wholly as a flood, and it shall be cast out and drowned, as by the flood of Egypt

9 And it shall come to pass in that day, saith the Lord God, that I will cause the sun to go down at noon, and I will darken the earth in the clear day

10 And I will turn your feasts into mourning, and all your songs into lamentation, and I will bring up sackcloth upon all loins, and baldness upon every head, and I will make it as the mourning of an only son, and the end thereof as a bitter day

Br Hall That is in plain terms, they had rather be defrauding neighbours than serving God. Br Beveridge

The shekel was the measure wherewith they sold containing about one of our bushels this they made smaller than the just standard. The shekel was the money they received as the price for their goods by falsifying the balances when they weighed it, and so requiring it to be greater than it should be according to the standard weight of a shekel they diminished it of its value. So in both ways they overreached those who dealt with them. See Mic vi 11. Dr Wells, W Lenth

6 [That we may buy the poor for silver &c.] That we may cause the poor to sell themselves to our servitude for a little silver being not able to sustain themselves, and that we may buy the needy for a pair of shoes, even for the basest necessities yea, and that by this means, we may put off at an unreasonable rate the very refuse and offal of the wheat. Br Hall

7 [The Lord hath sworn by the excellency of Jacob.] That is, by Jacob's most eminent and incommunicable One or by Jacob's holy One see chap iv 2. Jos Mede By himself, who is truly the glory of Jacob or Israel, see Ps lxxv 34, whatever other excellency or advantage they may make the subject of their glory. See chap vi 3. W Lenth

8 — it shall rise up wholly as a flood,] This deluge of sin in the nation shall make her punishment overflow, and overwhelm her in every part. Dr Stokes

— it shall be cast out and drowned, as by the flood of Egypt] Or rather the river of Egypt. The inhabitants of the land shall be cast out of their possessions, or the land itself shall be swallowed up by the invading Assyrians, as Egypt is by the inundation of the river Nile. W Lenth

9 — I will cause the sun to go down at noon] Your sorrow shall be so extreme in that day, and that day shall be to you so black and gloomy, as if the sun were gone down at noonday, and as if darkness had covered the earth in the clearest day. Br Hall (diminuous times are expressed by the failing of the light of the sun, and the day being overspread with darkness. See Is xlii 10. Is 9, 10, Jer xv 9 Job v 14, xxii 11 W Lenth

11 — I will send a famine in the land &c.] Not a famine of material bread, &c, but a spiritual famine of the word of God which alone is able to feed and save your souls. Br Hall It is as usual among the Jews to resort to the Prophets for counsel under any difficulty. See chap ii 11. Isaek xiv 7 xx 1 Amos tells them, that in a little time there will be no Prophet for them to consult, and this shall be a just punishment for their despising the former Prophets, and their instructions. This was fulfilled

11 ¶ Behold, the days come, saith the Lord God, that I will send a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the Lord.

12 And they shall wander from sea to sea, and from the north even to the east, they shall run to and fro to seek the word of the Lord, and shall not find it

13 In that day shall the fair virgins and young men faint for thirst

14 They that swear by the sin of Samaria, and say, Thy god, O Dan, liveth, and, The manner of Beer-sheba liveth, even they shall fall, and never rise up again

12 — from sea to sea, &c.] That is, from the east sea, namely either the sea of Galilee, or the Salt sea to the west, or Mediterranean sea, and "from the north even to the east" again that is, all through the kingdom. Dr Wells

13 In that day shall the fair virgins and young men faint for thirst] They who are in the bloom of their youth and in the strength of their age, shall faint and be dispirited like those that want necessary refreshment. Compare Jer xlviii 18. W Lenth

14 They that swear by the sin of Samaria, &c.] Those idolatrous Israelites, that swear by the molten images of Samaria and say, As the god which is worshipped in Dan and the author of the religion of Beer-sheba liveth, even they shall fall into utter perdition, and never rise again. Br Hall

"The sin of Samaria" was the calf, set up at Beth-el by Jeroboam, who committed a great sin in so doing, and made Israel to sin, 1 Kings xii 20, xiv 16 compare Mic i, "The manner or way, of Beer-sheba is rendered 'the god of Beer-sheba' in the Greek version, which expresses the sense rather than the words. The 'way' or 'manner,' signifies the same with 'the way of worship' in this sense it is probably taken, Hos x 13, and the phrase is often used so in the Acts particularly chap xiv xxiv 14. Here it is taken figuratively for the goal or object of their worship. Beer-sheba was a place noted for idolatry as hath been observed upon chap v 5. W Lenth

The punishment which is here threatened upon the people for their sins, is, that God would "send a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the word of the Lord." Let us learn hence that the most terrible chastisement God can inflict upon a people is to deprive them of His word, and no longer to send His faithful servants among them and therefore that those, who enjoy these precious advantages, ought to esteem them above all things, and make a good use of them lest they be deprived of them by the just judgment of God. (Observed)

Chap IX The Prophet sees a fifth vision, representing the final destruction of the kingdom of Israel, but he concludes his prophecy with promises of restoring the kingdom of David and the Jewish nations under the Messiah, when the Church shall be enlarged by the Gentiles coming into it. W Lenth

We have here a prophecy, that the ruin of the house and kingdom of David should precede the coming of the Messiah who should at His coming repair the breaches thereof and build it again The captivity of Zedekiah by the Chaldees perfected the fall of David's kingdom, which could not rise before the return from that captivity, and was to rise, as seems to be implied before a new captivity began. After the Babylonian captivity was over none of David's race was in any account Edom was not possessed by any of Zerobabel's descendants, nor were the heathen called by God's name through their means, till God gave unto Jesus the throne of His father David, and for the suffering of death exalted Him to His right hand, to be a Saviour and a Prince His coming was for the fall and rising again of many in Israel, and by the preaching of His Apostles the Gentiles were converted, and made part of His kingdom, out of which the Jews had excluded themselves But the days come when this shall appear to be more visibly the kingdom of David by the coming of the body of the Jews into it, and probably by His literally planting them again in their land, as His principal subjects, from whence they shall be no more ejected Bp Chandler

THIS Prophet hath furnished us with no particulars of his own origin or life, any more than of the period in which he was favoured by the Divine revelations. That he received a commission to prophesy is evident, as well from the admission of his work into the sacred canon, as from the completion of those predictions which he delivered.

It is probable that he flourished about the same time with Ezekiel and Jeremiah, and the best opinions concur in supposing him to have prophesied a little after the destruction of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar, which happened about the year of the world 3416. He predicted therefore the same circumstances which those Prophets had foretold against the Edomites, who had upon many occasions favoured the enemies of Judah, and who, when "strangers carried their forces away captive, and foreigners cast lots upon Jerusalem," had rejoiced at the destruction, and insulted the children of Judah in their affliction, ver 11—14, Ps cxxxvii 7.

The Prophet, after describing the pride and cruelty of the Edomites declares that though they dwelt in fancied security among the clefts of the rocks yet the "men of Teman should be dismayed" and "every one of the mount of Esau should be cut off by slaughter" and that the men who had confederated with them against Jacob, and been supported by them as their allies, should inflict the punishment of their malevolence. The Prophet concludes with consolatory assurances of future restoration and prosperity to the Jews, to whom should arise deliverance from Zion, saviours who should judge the nations, and a spiritual kingdom appropriated and consecrated to the Lord.

The Prophet's work is short, but composed with much beauty. It unfolds a very interesting scene of prophecy, and an instructive lesson against human confidence and malicious exultation. Dr Gray

12 — thou shouldest not have looked on the day of thy brother] Thou oughtest not to have taken pleasure at the sight of thy brother's calamity. Dr. Stiles

17 But upon mount Zion shall be deliverance, &c.] This was remarkably verified at the first preaching of the Gospel, when God's law came forth from Zion, Isa. ii 3, Joel ii 32, Ps. cx. 2. W. Lenth

20 — the captivity of Jerusalem, which is in Sepharad, shall possess the cities of the south.] Others translate the passage, as in the margin, "The captivity of Jerusalem shall possess that which is in Sepharad, and the cities of the south." If the word be taken as an appellative, it signifies a border, and may denote that part of Arabia which bordereth upon the south of Judea, or the 'cities of the south,' here mentioned. W. Lenth

21 And saviours shall come up on mount Zion, &c.] By 'saviours' may be understood the leaders of the Jews, who should fight their battles, and vanquish their enemies, denoted by the inhabitants of the 'mount of Esau.' In this sense the word 'saviour' is taken, Judg. iii 9, Isa. xix 20. Or we may understand the word in a spiritual sense, for the preachers of salvation, whose office it is to convert unbelievers and 'aliens to the commonwealth of Israel.' Compare ver. 17, and Amos ix. 12. W. Lenth

INTRODUCTION

THOUGH Jonah be placed fifth in the order of the Minor Prophets he is generally considered as the most ancient of all the Prophets whose writings we possess not excepting Hosea. Jonah was the son of Amittai of the tribe of Zebulun and was born at Gath-hepher in that tribe see 2 Kings xiv 25, Josh xix 13. St Jerome informs us that the Prophets' sepulchre was shewn there in his time and there the natives still believe it to exist.

Jonah is generally supposed to have flourished in the reigns of Jotham and Jeroboam the Second, kings of Israel the former of whom began to reign in the year of the world 3163, the latter died in the year of the world 3220.

Among other testimonies given to the prophetick character of Jonah may be reckoned that of Tobit who professed a firm confidence in the accomplishment of Jonah's prediction against Nineveh and whose son, indeed afterwards lived to witness its completion, Job xiv 4—6 15. The sacred writers likewise and our Lord Himself speak of him as a Prophet of considerable eminence, 2 Kings xiv 25, Matt xii 39, 41 xvi 4, Luke xi 29, see also 2 Esdras i 39.

The style of Jonah is narrative and simple, the beautiful prayer contained in the second chapter has been justly admired. The book furnishes us with a fine description of the power and mercies of God. Dr Gray

But Jonah rose up to flee] Jonah might consider this mission an uncommon unprofitable and dangerous one. He certainly thought that he verily is a Prophet would be affected by God's merciful change of purpose, chap iv 2. This and other parts of his conduct deserve censure. But men endued with extraordinary gift of the Spirit and made the instruments of declaring God's will to mankind have occasionally been subject to great human infirmities and have even contracted great guilt. See 1 Kings xix 18, 20. Acts xv 9. 1 Cor vi 2. Gal ii 11. Abp Newcom

Tarshish] See 1 Kings x 22. It is probable that there were more places than one named Tarshish. The great port of learned persons have judged that the place here meant was Antioch upon the great river in Spain not at Tarshish thought to secure himself by distance from the presence of the Lord, he could not have a place more proper for his purpose, as it was one of the most remote in the then known world. Bryant

— from the presence of the Lord] That is, from the place where God usually had shown Himself present by revealing His word and will to His Prophets. Perhaps he might think that God would not insist upon the execution of His commission when he was in a strange country, where were no Prophets nor prophetick impulses. Pool

— into the sides of the ship] The word, rendered "ship" is expressed by a different word in this and the two immediately preceding verses. It seems to denote a roofed or ceiled room or cabin in the ship to the sides of which conveniences something like the benches in stables might be fixed for the sailors to lie down. Parkhurst

10 — [Then were the men exceedingly afraid, &c.] Then when Jonah had told the men both his nation and his religion and his profession and his heinous sin in fleeing from the charge that God had laid upon him they were exceedingly afraid as being stricken with the curse both of their own danger and of compassion towards a person of such quality who had so freely confessed himself and his offence. Abp Hall

12 — [for I know that for my sake &c.] He was convinced by the nature of the calamity and by the lot having pointed him out, (ver 7) that all the evil proceeded from him and he was impelled by Heaven to make this salutary proposal, that the whole might not perish. Bryant

14 — [Wherefore they cried unto the Lord, &c.] They were convinced by Jonah's account of himself that the God whom he worshipped ver 9 had brought this tempest upon them. So they made their petitions to Him. W. Louth

— [lay not upon us innocent blood.] Punish us not as murderers of an innocent man for we judge from the whole transaction that we are conforming ourselves to Thy will. Abp Newcome

16 — [Then the men feared the Lord &c.] They were convinced of the power and greatness of that God whom Jonah worshipped, which appeared both in raising this storm and in so suddenly laying it and accordingly they offered a sacrifice unto the Lord and made vows or as the words may be more plainly translated, they offered sacrifices unto the Lord that is they made vows to do it at the first opportunity. W. Louth

The miracle of preserving Jonah served to spread the knowledge of Jehovah. The whole transaction had this tendency ver 16 and it also taught Jonah, and in him the whole prophetic order, God's power and determination to enforce His commands. Abp Newcome

call a natural day, what therefore the Greeks express by a word which literally rendered means night-day, they denote by a day and a night. Therefore the space of time consisting of one whole revolution of twenty-four hours, and part of two others is fully expressed in that language by "three days and three nights." Such a space of time our Lord lay in the grave and Jonah who was an eminent figure of Him in this particular was probably no longer in the fish's belly. W. Louth

As the things which befell the Church at large happened to them for ensamples to the whole congregation of Christian people so the things which befall the Prophets of old happened for ensamples of the Saviour Himself that His character and history as the true Son of God who should come into the world might be infallibly ascertained and demonstrated by a comparison with the various characters of those who had been most eminent in the Church of old. This consideration will reconcile us to some strange things, which might appear very unreasonable if they were considered only in themselves. How monstrous would it seem in any other history that a man should be buried in the body of a fish, and cast up alive again after three days upon the dry land? But if this strange thing happened that it might afterwards be compared with the return of Jesus Christ from the dead for the salvation of all mankind then the preservation of Jonah becomes fit and reasonable, it being of infinite importance to the world, that the fact of Christ's resurrection when it should happen, should be admitted and believed and so the case was worthy of the Divine interposition. Jonah was not preserved by a miracle for his own sake, but for a sign to instruct the people of God in the truth of their salvation and in the peculiar means or mode of it. Our Saviour Himself hath instructed us to make this use of Jonah's history, Matt xii 40, 10 Jonas of Nainland

Chap II ver 1 [Then Jonah prayed &c.] This prayer hath much more the appearance of a thanksgiving after a deliverance and indeed could scarce be used before, whatever change be made in the tenses unless we suppose it prophetic of the deliverance. Had it not been inserted in the history, in any things in it would be understood metaphorically as in the Psalms. Abp Newcome It appears to be the prayer of Jonah as he wrote it after he came out of the fish but as he had conceived it before in the fish's belly. Dauid part of the city, crying, and saying, There are yet but forty days people of Nineveh believed that word of God, delivered to them by His Prophet &c Bp Hall

The time of the wonderful works which God had wrought for the Jews, was spread over the Eastern parts of the world This might make the Ninevites hearken to a man of that nation, that came to them as sent by God And it is likely that he gave them an account of the miraculous circumstances which attended his own mission But without question a sense of their own guilt and their deserving whatever punishment Heaven could inflict was a principal reason that moved them to have regard to the Prophet's message And by the men of Nineveh's repenting "at the preaching of Jonas," God designed to upbraid the "stubbornness of His own people, and shame them, as it were into repentance,

7 — neither man nor beast ] Abstaining for some time from our daily food signifies most naturally that we are unworthy of it, and can take no comfort in it, whilst we are under the Divine displeasure. And is especially a thing of importance was denoted especially in the Eastern countries by actions as well as by words: this was probably the original purpose, for which men used fasting. And it was then sometimes extended to children and a little in token that the parents and owners of them had forfeited the dearest blessings and most valuable conveniences of life. See also Joel ii 16, Judith iv 10. Abp Secker

7 — let any thing ] The Eastern mode of fasting was abstinence from food till the evening, 2 Sam i 12. Abp Newcome

— and cry mightily unto God: yea, let them turn &c ] Natural religion instructed them, that their earnest prayers without true amendment would not avail them before God: nor would their repentance be thought sincere, unless they restored to the true owners what they had gained by violence and injustice. W Lenth

10 — and God repented of the evil, &c ] See the note on ver 4. A sincere and effectual repentance will stay God's hand, and withdraw Him from the fierceness of His anger: insomuch that after He had fixed and determined the very day for the destruction of Nineveh, yet as soon as "He saw their works that they turned from their evil way," He presently "repented of the evil &c." In this case God does not stand upon the reputation of His Prophet, by whom He had sent to them so peremptory a message: but His mercy breaks through all considerations, and rejoiceth against judgment: for He cannot find in His heart to ruin those, who by the terror of His judgments will be brought to repentance. Abp Tillotson

This is ever God's manner, when men change their deeds to change His doom, when they renounce their sins, to recall His sentence, when they repent of the evil they have done against Him, to "repent of the evil that He had said that He would do unto them." Search the Scriptures, and say if things run not thus, as in the most ordinary course, God commandeth, and man disobeyeth, man disobeyeth, and God threatneth, God threatneth, and man repenteth, man repenteth, and God forbearth. Nineveh shall be overthrown: but Nineveh fasted, and prayed, and repented; and Nineveh stood after more than twice forty years. Generally, God never yet threatened any punishment upon person or place, but, if they repented, He either withheld it, or deferred it, or abated it, or sweetened it to them, for the most part proportionably to the truth and measure of their repentance, but always, so far as in His infinite wisdom He hath thought good, He hath remitted somewhat of the threatened severity and rigour. Bp Sanderson

The words, "the Lord prepared a gourd, may signify that He had prepared one. It is probable, that this gourd was the booth, under which Jonah sheltered himself from the heat: the perishing of which must of course have given him great pain, especially when we consider the intolerable heat of the country: which is so excessive, that Thevenot informs us he was prevented by it from going to visit the reputed tomb of Jonah on the east side of the Tigris. Harmen

INTRODUCTION.

MICAH was unquestionably the author of this Book, and he speaks in that character, chap iii 1, 8. He calls himself a Morasthite, chap i 1, and is supposed to have been a native of Morasthi, a village situated near the city of Eleutheropolis in the southern part of Judah a place distinguished by St Jerome from Marashah, mentioned in this book, chap i 15, and in Jo-hua, chap xv 41.

Micah speaks only of the kings of Judah, and he prophesied in the days of Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, contemporary with whom were Pekah and Hoshca, the two last kings of Israel. Micah then began to prophesy soon after Isaiah, Hosea, Joel, and Amos and he prophesied between the year of the world 3246, when Jotham began to reign, and the year of the world 4303, when Hezekiah died, but probably not during the whole of that period.

Micah, who received the Divine revelations by vision, was appointed to preach both against Israel and Judah, and executed his commission with great animation and zeal. One of his predictions is related to have saved the life of Jeremiah who under the reign of Jchoiakim would have been put to death for prophesying the destruction of the temple, had it not appeared that Micah had foretold the same thing under Hezekiah about one hundred years before, Mic iii 12. Micah is mentioned as a Prophet in the book of Jeremiah, chap xxvi 18, compared with Mic iii 12, and in the New Testament, Matt ii 5, and John vii 42. He is imitated by succeeding Prophets, as he himself had borrowed the expressions of those who preceded, or flourished at the same time with him. Our Saviour Himself, indeed, condescended to speak in the language of the Prophet.

The Prophet predicted in clear terms the invasions of Sennacherib and Sennacherib, and their triumph over Israel and Judah, the captivities, dispersion, and deliverance of Israel, the cessation of prophecy, the destruction of Assyria and of Babylon, the representatives of the enemies of the Christian Church, the birth of the Everlasting Ruler at Beth-lehem Ephratah, the establishment and exaltation of Christ's kingdom over all nations, the influence of the Gospel and the destruction of Jerusalem, chap iii 12. Dr Gray.

The style of Micah is nervous, concise, and elegant, often elevated and poetical, but sometimes obscure from sudden transitions of subject. The contrast of the neglected duties of justice, mercy, humility, and piety, with the punctilious observance of the ceremonial sacrifices, affords a beautiful example of the harmony which subsists between the Mosaic and the Christian dispensations, and shews that the Law partook, in some degree at least, of that spiritual nature, which more immediately characterizes the religion of Jesus. 3 — the Lord cometh forth out of his place,] God who is every where present, is said more particularly to be there, where He more peculiarly exhibits His majesty and glory and He is said to 'come forth out of His place, and to 'come down to any other place, when He gives more apparent tokens of His presence by acts of mercy or judgment. 6 Therefore I will make Samaria as an heap of the field, and as plantings of a vineyard: and I will pour down the stones thereof into the valley, and I will discover the foundations thereof.

7 And all the graven images thereof shall be beaten to pieces, and all the hires thereof shall be burned with the fire, and all the idols thereof will I lay desolate: for she hath gathered it of the hire of an harlot, and they shall return to the hire of an harlot.

5 For the transgression of Jacob is all this, &c.] And all these judgments shall be for the idolatries of Israel and Judah. What then, or who is the author of this great sin of Israel? Is it not the mother city Samaria, whose princes have erected and maintained those golden calves? And who is the author of those offensive high places of Judah? Is not Jerusalem and those her kings, who have set them up and countenanced them? Bp Hall

It is the case of most kingdoms, that they are much influenced by the spirit and genius of their principal cities. And so it was with the kingdoms of Israel and Judah, of which Samaria and Jerusalem were the respective heads. These two cities were two fountains of corruption, which infected all the surrounding countries. The transgression of Samaria was Baal and the golden calves: the transgression of Jerusalem was her high places, where idolatries were practised. Thus the Prophet lays his general charge: he will come to particulars presently. But he begins with religious abuses, because they are the spring and root of all other wickedness. Reading.

6 — as an heap of the field, and as plantings of a vineyard.] As a heap of stones laid together carelessly in the field, or as those hillocks of earth which are cast up for the planting of a vineyard. Bp Hall

7 — all the hires thereof.] See Hosea ii 12, where the idolatrous people are taxed for saying of their vines and fig trees, "These are my rewards or hire," that is, my idols, have given me. See also verses 5, and 8. Hence it appears, that by 'hires,' may be understood all their wealth and good things, which they looked on as the gifts of their idols, and the rewards of their idolatrous service. Dr Pocock

— for she gathered it of the hire of an harlot, &c.] She imagines that she gaineth her wealth as a reward of her idolatry, and it shall "return, or be made a prey to idolatrous Assyrians." H Iomth

— Aphrah.] The word "Aphrah" signifies dust: the Prophet probably uses it here for Ophrah, a town in the tribe of Benjamin that the name may better suit their condition. H Iomth There that is farther off from the Philistines, and that they may not take notice of it: silent as me, or "roll thyself in the dust." The Prophet in this and the following verses reckon up several places, whether belonging to Israel or Judah, by alluding to the names of which he expresses their present or future condition together with others not named even the whole land. Dr Pocock

11 — thou inhabitant of Saphir.] Saphir signifies fair or elegant. It is taken by some for the proper name of a city: by others for Samaria, or Jerusalem. Whatever be the place intended, these words denounce, that to it and its inhabitants shame and confusion shall take place of their former beauty and glory. The other names also some apply to Samaria and Jerusalem, but the exposition is plainer, by taking them for proper names of places. Dr Pocock

— the inhabitant of Zaanan came not forth &c.] The meaning of this difficult passage seems to be, That when the inhabitants of Beth-ezel, which was first taken by the enemy, were led away in mourning, the inhabitants of Zaanan came not forth to bewail with them, or comfort or help them, as standing on their own guard against the enemy, or knowing that the same calamity should quickly befall themselves, and so they should have to bewail their own disasters. For "he shall receive of you his standing" of you. O inhabitants of Zaanan, though you remain longer than those of Beth-ezel, yet "he" that is, the enemy, "shall receive his standing," that is the reward for his labour and time spent in besieging, and taking you: your spoil shall be his recompense. Dr Pocock Zaanan was in the tribe of Judah, Josh xv 27. The words are a promise of mercy such as is often subjoined to the threatenings of impending judgment This promise relates to the general restoration of the Jewish nation which yet is here and elsewhere confined to that remnant that shall escape the punishments that will come upon the rest See the note upon chap iv 7 W Louth It is generally understood by Christians of a spiritual deliverance of the Jews by Christ and the calling of them into His kingdom, and gathering them into His Church together with the called of the Gentiles, as one flock into one fold, under "one Shepherd" See John x 16 Dr Pocock

This will be remarkably fulfilled at the general conversion of the Jews, when this prophecy shall receive its utmost completion. W Lowth

6 — will I assemble her that halteth. Though I have broken the power of My people, removed them into captivity afar off, and afflicted them yet will I restore them to their country, I will send them the Messiah, and will be always their King. Abp Newcome This prophecy was fulfilled by Christ's bringing "the lost sheep of the house of Israel" into His fold, by His own preaching and that of His Apostles and Disciples, see Matt xv 24, x 6, &c. Dr Pocock Or it will hereafter be fulfilled by the calling of the Jews from their several dispersions into the Church. W Lowth

7 — I will make her that halted a remnant. A part of them shall be preserved, in whom the future designs of My providence shall be accomplished. Abp Newcome

— her that was cast far off a strong nation. Signifying, either that the Church, in regard to her spiritual strength, should grow to such a height and greatness, that the gates of hell should not be able to prevail against it. (Dr Pocock) or that the Jews, when they return from their several dispersions, (see ver 6,) shall be victorious over all their enemies. Compare chap. v 8, Ezek xxxviii, xxxix, and see Obad ver 18. W Lowth

— and the Lord shall reign over them in mount Zion from henceforth, even for ever. Zion is to be taken spiritually for the Church, over which Christ reigneth and shall reign for ever. Dr Pocock Or, the prophecy may be hereafter literally fulfilled at the restoration of the Jews. Abp Newcome

8 — O tower of the flock. By this is most probably intended the tower of David, or rather all Jerusalem itself, which was, as it were, the tower and fold of God's flock, Israel. The same is called in the words subjoined, "the strong hold of the daughter of Zion." Dr Pocock

— unto thee shall it come, even the first dominion. By "the first dominion" may be understood, such a kingdom and dominion as the Jews enjoyed at first under David and Solomon, or the chief dominion: or that the dominion should in that first place come to the daughter of Zion or Jerusalem. For the first interpretation of the words see Luke i 32, 33 for the second see Dan vii 14, Rom x 18 and compare Ps cx 1, Matt xii 11, xii 42, Rev xvii 14, xix 16 i 5 and for the third, Luke xiv 47, Acts xiii 46. The words, however interpreted are a prophecy concerning Christ and His dominion. Dr Pocock

10 Be in pain and labour to bring forth, &c. O My Church of Judaea, be grieved and pained for a time, for thou shalt be driven forth of thy cities, and carried away into the captivity of Babylon, but thou shalt not long be under this affliction: the Lord thy God shall fetch thee hence in His appointed time, and shall redeem thee from the hand of thine enemies, and all this shall be, in a type of the state and deliverance of My Church from the hands of their spiritual enemies. Bp Hall

The Jews captivity is expressed by their "going out of the city, and dwelling in the field," because their city and temple being destroyed they should live in an obscure state, without any visible form of government or worship. The same condition is elsewhere expressed by their living "in the wilderness" see the note upon Ezek xx 15, and Hos ii 14. So the Church under persecution is described as "flying into the wilderness," Rev xii 14. W Lowth

11 — many nations &c. The Idumeans, Ammonites, Moabites, Philistines, Babylonians. Abp Newcome This verse contains an expression of the desires of the heathen nations, that all manner of mischief and shame might befall Zion to her utter desolation. Dr Pocock To "look upon our enemies," is to behold their fall with delight. Compare chap vii 10, and see the note on Obadiah, ver 12. W Lowth

12 But they know not the thoughts of the Lord. They are ignorant of God's purpose, which is to punish them with an entire destruction, after He hath executed His judgments upon His own people. See Jer xxv 27—29. Great calamities are compared to the threshing of corn in a floor: see the following verse, and the note upon Is xxi 10. W Lowth

13 Arise and thresh, O daughter of Zion. &c. The expressions allude to the manner of treading out the corn in the Eastern countries by the feet of oxen: see Deut xxv 4. The word "horn" means the horny substance on the feet of the cattle, and is equivalent to the "hoofs," which follow. W Lowth

It is observed by some concerning this prophecy, that it will be in fulfilling to the second coming of Christ. "For He must reign till He hath put all enemies under His feet," 1 Cor xv 25. In that day certainly it will appear, how the things here spoken, as every other word of God, have without the failing of one tittle been fully made good, though perhaps, till then, men will not well agree concerning the manner, or time of their fulfilment. Dr Pocock

CHAP. V.

1 The birth of Christ 4 His kingdom 8 His conquest

NOW gather thyself in troops, O daughter of troops: he hath laid siege against us: they shall smite the judge of Israel with a rod upon the cheek.

2 But thou, Beth-lehem Ephrathah, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall he come

[Chap V ver 1 Now gather thyself in troops, O daughter of troops &c.] This verse is to be understood of some foreign invasion of Judea by a nation that had numerous troops, and may relate to the conquest of Judea by the Babylonians. The daughter of troops is a phrase of the same kind as the daughter of affliction: that is one surrounded by affliction: so "the son of death" is one condemned to die. 1 Sam xxi 11, Ps cii 20 "Smiting on the cheek" signifies treating one in a despitful manner, Lam iii 30 Matt v 39 "The judge of Israel" is equivalent to the king of Israel: see Amos ii 9 W Lomth Hoshea may be supposed to have suffered such contumely when Samaria was taken, 2 Kings xvii 6, or Zedekiah, on the taking of Jerusalem, 2 Kings xxv 7 Abp Newcome

2 But thou Beth-lehem Ephrathah, &c.] The Prophet, having intimated what contempt should befall the family of David, subjoins, according to God's usual method, a declaration of the dignity which they should attain to, in the time of their restoration from the Babylonish captivity. Dr Pocock

Ephrath, or Ephrathah, was another name for Beth-lehem in the tribe of Judah. See Gen xxxv 19. And both names are joined together to distinguish it from another Beth-lehem, situate in the tribe of Zebulun, mentioned Joshua xix 15. It is called "little among the thousands," that is, among the families or cities of Judah. Compare Judg vi 15, 1 Sam x 19. The expression is taken from the first division of the people into thousands, hundreds, and other subordinate divisions. See Exod xviii 21—25. Both the city and family of David were in a mean condition at the time of Christ's birth, whereupon the Blessed Virgin in her song thankfully commemorates God's extraordinary favour in honouring that low estate to which they were reduced, with the birth of the Messiah, Luke i 48, 52, 53. W Lomth

— though thou be little among the thousands of Judah,] Every tribe was of old divided into so many thousands as shires in England are into hundreds, over which presided a leader to command them in battle. Beth-lehem was too small in people to be reckoned as one of these thousands, or to be numbered singly in the army against the enemy: but is promised the advantage over them all in giving birth to the "Ruler in Israel," who is superior to all the princes of the thousands, even that Son of David, "whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting." Bp Chandler

— out of thee shall he come forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel,] The Scribes and Pharisees understood this prophecy of the birth of the Messiah, as appears from Matt. ii 5, 6, and so did the generality of the Jews of that age, who speak of it as an undoubted truth, that "Christ was to come of the seed of David, and out of the town of Beth-lehem where David was." John vii 42. The Chaldees agree with their sentiments, and expressly apply the prophecy to the Messiah, and our Lord was born at Beth-lehem by an especial act of Providence, that this prophecy might plainly be fulfilled in Him. See Luke ii 4. To come forth is the same as to be born. See Gen x 14 xvii 6, xxi 25, 1 Chron ii 53 Is xi 1. W Lomth

— whose goings forth have been from of old from everlasting] The Prophet proceeds in describing Him who was to come out of Beth-lehem, and to be "Ruler in Israel" by another more eminent coming or going forth, even from all eternity. This is so signal a description of the Divine generation before all time, or of that going forth from everlasting of Christ the eternal Son of God, God, of the substance of the Father begotten before the worlds who was afterwards in time (according to the prediction that He should "come forth out of Beth-lehem") made man, of the substance of His mother, and born in the world, that the prophecy evidently belongs only to Him, and could never be verified of any other. Dr Pocock

The plural form may denote the immensity of Christ's eternal generation. Abp Siker. It is a common Hebraism to denote the immensity or continuance of a thing or action by the plural number, "God shall judge the world with righteousness and equity," Ps xcvi 9, or most righteously and equitably. "The angels of the Lord," Lam iv 16, "wisdoms," Prov i 20, for the high degree of both. Bp Chandler

This famous prophecy of Micah appears to have given occasion to the manner of speaking, used by our Church in her second Article, where she speaks of the Son of God, as "begotten from everlasting." Waldo

3 Therefore will he give them up, &c.] But in the mean time He shall suffer His Israel to be grievously afflicted, &c. Bp Hall. The particle, rendered "therefore," should be translated "nevertheless," here and in some other places, as Dr Pocock observes. Notwithstanding the promise of so great a blessing God will give up His people into the hands of their enemies, or leave them to be exercised with troubles and afflictions, till the appointed time of their deliverance cometh, which shall be greater than that from Babylon. See chap. iv 10. This deliverance may be understood of the Church bringing forth children by the preaching of the Gospel, see Gal iv 27, but will be more fully completed in the general restoration of the Jewish nation, to be expected in the latter ages. Compare Is lvi 7, & W Lomth

— then the remnant of his brethren shall return unto the children of Israel] Or, "shall be converted with the children of Israel." W Lomth. The promise of God was not only to Israel according to the flesh, but "to all (also) that were afar off, even as many as the Lord our God should call," Acts ii 39, and all these are called "the remnant of his brethren, even those that were before" "aliens from the commonwealth of Israel and afar off, are now in Christ made one with them," Eph ii 12, &c. all brethren among themselves, and all brethren to Christ their Ruler. Having taken on Him their nature in the flesh, He is not ashamed to call them so, as the Apostle speaks, Heb ii 11, confirming it out of Ps xxii 22 and Christ Himself vouchsafes to call all true believers by this title, Matt xii 46, Luke viii 21. Dr Pocock

4 And he shall stand and feed &c.] He shall persist and continue to feed, that is He shall carefully, watchfully and tenderly supply all the wants of His subjects as a good shepherd doth those of his sheep. compare John x 9, 14. And this He shall do "in the strength of the Lord, not as an ordinary man, but as One, who hath extraordinary and plainly Divine power conferred on Him from the Lord," compare Matt. xxviii 18, and "in the majesty of the name of the Lord His God," so as plainly to evince, that the majestic name of the Lord His God is in Him, (see Exod xxiii 21,) that God hath glorified Him, and is glorified in and by Him, John xiii 31, 32 and under the protection of His great power and majesty, "they His subjects" shall abide "shall be in a sure and steadfast condition, secure against all other powers." compare John x 11, 12, 28—30 "for now, when He shall enter on His rule" "shall He be great unto the ends of the earth, extending His name, glory, and dominion as wide as the world, and to the utmost parts thereof." compare Matt. xviii 19, 20, Acts i 8, Rom x 18. Dr Pocock. last clause is alluded to by the angel, "He shall be great and shall be called the Son of the Highest, &c." Luke i. 32. He is dignified with such titles, as were never given to any creature, as the Apostle at large proves, Heb. i. 4, &c. Compare Is. lii. 17, and see the note there. W. Louth.

And this man shall be the peace,] A Jewish expositor observes that this passage is to be understood of the Messiah, because He shall be the cause of peace, as it is said, "and He shall speak peace unto the heathen, Zech. ix. 10. And therefore our Lord Christ being the true Messiah of them, agreeably to the words here it is said, "He is our peace," Eph. ii. 14. At His birth the heavenly host proclaimed "peace on earth," Luke ii. 14, and He, while on earth, came and preached "peace to them which were afar off, and to them that were nigh," Eph. ii. 17 and when He was again to leave the world, He bequeathed peace to His disciples, "gave it to them, and left it with them," John xiv. 27. Of Him therefore it might be truly said by way of prophecy, "This man shall be peace," or "the peace." Dr Pocock.

This sentence may be best explained as connected with the foregoing verse. W. Louth.

This prophecy of Micah is perhaps the most important single prophecy in the Old Testament, and the most comprehensive, respecting the personal character of the Messiah, and His successive manifestations to the world. It crowns the whole chain of prophecies descriptive of the several limitations of the blessed "Seed of the woman" to the line of Shem, to the family of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, to the tribe of Judah, and to the royal house of David, here terminating in His birth at Beth-lehem, "the city of David." It carefully distinguishes His human nativity from His eternal generation, foretells the rejection of the Israelites and Jews for a season, their final restoration, and the universal "peace" destined to prevail throughout the earth in "the regeneration." It forms therefore the basis of the New Testament, which begins with His human birth at Beth-lehem, the miraculous circumstances of which are recorded in the introductions of St. Matthew's and St. Luke's Gospels, His eternal generation, as the Word in the sublime introduction of St. John's Gospel, His prophetick character, and second coming, illustrated in the four Gospels and Epistles, ending with a prediction of the speedy approach of the latter in the Apocalypse, Rev. xxii. 20. Dr Hales.

when the Assyrian shall come into our land &c.] The sense which Mr Mede has given to this passage, appears most agreeable to the scope and design of the following part of the chapter. He expounds the place of the general destruction of some remarkable enemy or enemies to God and His truth, which should come to pass before the consummation of all things, an event foretold in several places of Scripture. See Ps. cx. 5, 6. Is. xxvi. 20, 21. xxxiv. 1 &c., lxxvi. 16, Jer. xxx. 7, 10, Ezek. xxxviii, xxxix. Joel. iii. 9, 14. Obad. ver. 15, &c., Zeph. iii. 8. Hag. ii. 22, Zech. vii. 1. xiv. 8. seven shepherds, and eight principal men.] Or, rulers. Under His conduct we shall be furnished with commanders sufficient to oppose the enterprises of the enemy. "Shepherds" are elsewhere equivalent to princes or generals: see Jer. vi. 3, xxv. 34, Nahum. iii. 18. The words "seven" and "eight" are used for an indefinite number. see Eccles. xi. 2. "So once and twice, six and seven, are used, Job xxxiii. 14, v. 19, Prov. vi. 16. W. Louth.

According to the figurative signification of the words embraced by most Christians, the meaning of this passage is evident, that by the might and power of Christ, and such as shall be by Him qualified and commissioned for the spreading and maintaining of His truth, all that oppose it shall be brought under and made to yield, as certainly as when an enemy such as the Assyrian then was to Israel, is by many commanders and then forces beaten in his own country, and with his own weapons forced from him and turned back upon himself, (see the margin,) so that he shall not be able to create farther disturbances. Dr Pocock.

thus shall he deliver us from the Assyrian, &c.] By these means shall Christ deliver us from the hands of such enemies as shall assault us, so that we shall not have need to fear them. Dr Pocock.

And the remnant of Jacob shall be &c.] The remnant of the dispersed Jews upon their conversion shall be the instruments of converting those Gentiles among whom they live, and may therefore be fitly represented by the dew and rains which come from heaven, and make the earth fruitful. W. Louth.

that tarrieth not for man, &c.] The dew and rains are the gift of God, and are here distinguished from those fountains and canals of water, which men convey unto their fields and gardens by their own industry. W. Louth.

And the remnant of Jacob shall be — as a lion &c.] This has been most eminently and fully made good by the establishing of Christ's spiritual kingdom among men, and by the conquests obtained by His little flock over sin, the world, and the devil. Dr Pocock.

Compare Is. ii 6—8, with the context here. The manner of raising attention in the two first verses by calling on man to urge his plea in the face of all nature, and on the inanimate creation to hear the expostulation of Jehovah with His people, is truly awakening and magnificent. The words of Jehovah follow in the 3d, 4th, and 5th verses. And God's mercies having been set before His people, one of them is introduced in a beautiful dramatick form, as asking what his duty is towards so gracious a God, ver. 6, 7. The answer follows in the 8th verse, in the words of the Prophet. Abp. Newcome

5 O my people, remember now what Balak king of Moab consulted, &c.] Remember what answers I put into the mouth of Balaam, the son of Beor: how I drew blessings even from his mouth upon you, instead of curses, which Balak would have hired him to utter against you: remember all My gracious dealings with you in all the passages of the wilderness, even from Shittim unto Gilgal, till the very entrance into the land of promise, that ye may acknowledge the righteous proceedings of the Lord with you. 6 Hear ye, O mountains, the Lord's controversy, and ye strong foundations of the earth: for the Lord hath a controversy with his people, and he will plead with Israel.

7 O my people, what have I done unto thee? and wherein have I wearied thee? testify against me.

8 For I brought thee up out of the land of Egypt, and redeemed thee out of the house of servants; and I sent before thee Moses, Aaron, and Miriam. I vol 12 1 & 11 22 complete, we must supply it from the beginning of the verse, as in the Chaldee Paraphrase, "Remember what I have done for you from Shittim unto Gilgal," that is, from your encampment in the plains of Moab, near Shittim, east of Jordan, (where they sinned in the matter of Peor, Numb xxv 2, 18 and deserved to be cut off, had not God been merciful to them,) until your encampment at Gilgal on the other side of Jordan in the land of Canaan. At Shittim they sinned after Moses's death, Josh iii 1 thence Joshua conducted them over Jordan. As therefore in the former words they are reminded of the great things which God did for them under the conduct of Moses, so in these they are reminded of His benefits to them under the conduct of Joshua and so, in short, of all that He did from His first beginning to redeem them from bondage, and bringing them out of Egypt through the Red sea, through the desert, and through Jordan, till He had settled them in the promised land. All these things might convince them of "the Lord's righteousness," of His great goodness towards them, and of His faithfulness in fulfilling the promises made to their fathers. W Lowth, Dr Pocock

6: Wherewith shall I come before the Lord, &c.] This abrupt passionate form of speech seems to require something to be understood, for the purpose of connecting it with the preceding words. It is spoken by the Prophet, as in the person of the people, replying to the appeal of God: and it is either an acknowledgment of their guilt, and an expression of their desire to repent, if they knew what would be accepted by God: or it is a justification of themselves, intimating that if they had been defective in their duty, and thereby displeasing to God, it was done, not willingly, but through ignorance. Dr Pocock

Or, the words are part of a private conference between Balaam and Balak, which Moses has omitted, as foreign to the subject of his history, but which the Israelites ought to have holden in remembrance, and in which the idolatrous king inquired of God's Prophet, in what way he, the king, might make expiation for his offences. Bp Horley — shall I come before him with burnt offerings, &c.] The constant sacrifice that was offered to God by way of acknowledgment of His dominion over His creatures "with calves of a year old," which was the sin offering, that the high priest offered for himself. Or will He rather accept of those great and costly sacrifices, which were offered upon publick and solemn occasions such as that which Solomon offered at the dedication of the temple? "Will the Lord be pleased with thousands of rams, or with ten thousands of rivers of oil?" Or if none of these will do, shall 18 He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good, and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?

19 The Lord's voice crieth unto the city, and the man of wisdom shall see thy name: he will say the rod, and who hath appointed it?

20 ¶ Are there yet the treasures of wickedness in the house of the wicked, and the scant measure that is abominable?

21 Shall I count them pure with the wicked balances, and with the bag of deceitful weights?

22 For the rich man thereof are full of violence, and the inhabitants thereof have spoken lies, and their tongue is deceitful in their mouth.

13 Therefore also will I make thee sick in smiting thee, in making thee desolate because of thy sins.

14 Thou shalt eat, but not be satisfied, and thy casting down shall be in the midst of thee, and thou shalt take hold, but shalt not deliver, and that which thou deliverest will I give up to the sword.

15 Thou shalt sow, but thou shalt not reap, thou shalt tread the olives, but thou shalt not anoint thee with oil, and sweet wine, but shalt not drink wine.

16 ¶ For the statutes of Omri are kept, and all the works of the house of Ahab, and ye walk in their counsels, that I should make thee a desolation, and the inhabitants thereof an hissing: therefore ye shall be the reproach of my people.

I try to do it after the manner of the heathen, by the dearest thing in the world the firstborn of my children? "Shall I give my firstborn &c. If God was to be appeased at all, surely they thought it must be by some of these ways; far beyond these they could imagine nothing of greater value and efficacy. Abp Tillotson

7 — shall I give my firstborn? The strength and stay of the family. W Lenth

8 He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good, &c. Both the dictates of reason, and the laws of God, sufficiently inform men what are the substantial parts of their duty, namely, the practice of justice and mercy, and a reverent behaviour towards God. W Lenth The Prophet here tells them, that they were quite out of the way in thinking to pacify God upon the terms proposed, that there were other things, much better and more pleasing to Him than these sacrifices. For some of them were expressly forbidden by God, as the offering up of children: and for the rest, they were not good in themselves, but merely by virtue of their institution, and because they were commanded. But the things, which He would recommend to them, are such as are good in their own nature and required of us by God on that account. "He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good." Abp Tillotson We have reason all to apply to ourselves these words of the Prophet. For though it still be true, that some part of the world have been dark, and others blinded with false lights, that some men naturally see truth, and others are strangely given to see wrong, yet, in general, the duties of life are level to the capacities of all men, and especially among Christians: but, above all Christians so peculiarly blessed with the means of instruction as we of this nation are, no one can possibly, without either deliberate obstinacy or intolerable negligence, continue unacquainted with what he is bound to do, or the recompense he is to expect, if he do it not. Abp Secker

— and what doth the Lord require of thee but to do &c. The whole of man's duty is here summed up in three parts. 1st, To do justly, is to give to every one what he is superior to, equal to, or inferior to: then due, to do in all things what is equal and right, not oppressing any nor defrauding them in any kind of dealing, not to hurt them by word or deed nor injure them in their person, estates or good name, or any thing belonging to them. 2dly, To love mercy, is not only to give to every one what he ought in justice to receive, but to be kind, merciful, compassionate, exercising all acts of charity and beneficence willingly, cheerfully, and without expecting recompense. 3dly, To walk humbly with thy God, is to frank the life and conversation with a view to God's commandments, in a dutiful performance of His will in a patient resignation to His dispensations and in a ready assent to His revealed truths. The two first parts comprise the duties of the second table, the third, those of the first: together they are a summary of all the Ten Commandments, and the performance of them is "more than all whole burnt offerings and sacrifices, Mark xii 31." Dr Pocock

9 The Lord's voice crieth unto the city, &c. The voice of the Lord calleth by me His Prophet to the city of Jerusalem, and those that are wise-hearted will have a due and awful respect to Thy name, O Lord, hear, O Jerusalem, hear thou these words of that sharp rod of affliction which is prepared for thee, and consider who it is that hath appointed it for thy correction. bp Hall

10 Are there yet the treasures of wickedness &c. From hence to the end is a detail of the then reigning sins among the Jews, more particularly the ten tribes who had separated themselves by an avowed schism from the unity of the Church. He taxes them with covetousness, base dishonesty, falsehood and deceit, injustice and oppression in their commerce and dealings with men, and as notorious a falsehood towards God by profaneness and irreligion, keeping rather the impious and idolatrous statutes of Omri and Ahab, than the Divine law delivered by Moses. W Lenth

14 — and thy casting down &c. Thy casting down shall be in the midst of thine own streets, thou shalt fall even within thine own walls, and thou shalt take hold of thy children to deliver them from the enemy, but thou shalt not rescue them, and those, whom thou hast obtained to deliver from the present slaughter, will I soon after give up to the sword. bp Hall

16 — Omri, — Ahab. It is said of Omri that he did worse than all that were before him. 1 Kings xvi 25 and his son Ahab added the worship of Baal to the idolatry of the golden calves, ver 31, which is spoken of there as the worse degree of idolatry, because it was the introducing of an heathen idol where the golden calves were only an idolatrous representation of the true God. Manasseh followed Ahab in his wickedness. see 2 Kings xxi 3. W Lenth

— therefore ye shall bear the reproach of my people. The Prophet still directs his discourse to the great and rich men, ver 12. 1st, and tells them, that since they have given the chief occasion to those reproaches which unbelievers have thrown out upon God's people, as if they were rejected and cast out by Him, therefore they shall bear the principal share of that shame and contempt wherewith their enemies shall treat them. 11 In the day that thy walls are to be built, &c ] When God shall visit His people, and repair their decayed estate, (compare Amos ix 11,) then the tyrannical edicts of their persecutors shall be utterly abolished This may partly relate to the recalling of those edicts which put a stop to the rebuilding of the city and temple of Jerusalem See Ezra iv 23, 24, vi 11 Neh ii 8 1 W Lenth Or, it may mean the decree of God denounced by His Prophets concerning the punishment of the Jews Dr Pocock

This prophecy was made good by the restoration of the Jews, and their coming again from all parts to Jerusalem, after the land had been for seventy years desolate for their sins it may have been fulfilled in a higher sense by the setting up of the Church the kingdom of Christ and by so many nations being called into it by the preaching of the Gospel Dr Pocock Perhaps also it looks forward to a future restoration of the Jews W Lenth

20 Thou wilt perform the truth to Jacob, &c ] These words contain a promise of Christ, that Seed of Abraham in whom all the kindreds of the earth were to be blessed with all the benefits of His redemption and were by Him fulfilled by rescuing all that come to Him for redemption, both Jews and Gentiles of all nations, out of the hands of worse enemies than the Babylonians by making them citizens of the heavenly Jerusalem, and conferring on them all spiritual blessings Compare Psalms i 51 55, and 68—75 God's "truth to Jacob," and His "mercy to Abraham," is thus fully performed in Christ and will be in performing unto the worlds end by His calling into His Church both Jews and Gentiles, and offering them His salvation, and blessing them with all spiritual blessings

It is the observation of an ancient Jewish author that there is not any denunciation of hard things to Israel, which is not concluded with promises of mercy Among other instances from Moses, Hosea, Joel Amos, Jeremiah, he brings this conclusion of Micah's prophecy And very remarkable indeed is this conclusion, which, to shew how greatly God delights in mercy, is uttered in words giving assurance of mercy, not only to Israel after the flesh on their repentance but to all who shall, by faith in Christ the promised Seed, lay hold on His promise made to Abraham, and in Him to all the kindreds of the earth. So that the Gentiles also reading it cannot but glorify God, and rejoice with His people, and sing unto Him that hymn which the Apostle shews to be suited to them, 'O praise the Lord all ye nations praise Him, all ye people For His merciful kindness is great toward us and the truth of the Lord endureth for ever Praise ye the Lord,' Rom. xv 9, 10, 11, Ps cxviii Dr Pocock

INTRODUCTION.

NAHUM describes himself as an Elkoshite, which some have considered as a patronymick expression, conceiving it to imply his being a descendant of Elkosh, but which is generally supposed to intimate that he was born at Elkosh, or Likosha a small village in Galilee, of which St. Jerome professes to have seen the ruins Dr Gray

It may be concluded from chap. ii. 2, that Nahum prophesied after the captivity of the ten tribes. Josephus places him in the reign of Jotham and says that his predictions came to pass one hundred and fifteen years afterwards. According to our best chronology this date would bring us to the year in which Samaria was taken. And I agree with those who think that Nahum uttered the prophecy in the reign of Hezekiah, and not long after the subversion of the kingdom of Israel by Sennacherib. Abp Newcome

The illustrious prophecy foretelling the future downfall of the Assyrian empire, remarkably accomplished in little more than a century after it was delivered affords a signal evidence of the inspiration of Nahum, and a striking lesson of humility to human pride. It must have furnished much consolation to the tribes who were carried away captive by the king of Assyria, as well as to those of Benjamin and Judah and all must have rejoiced with the hope of deliverance, to hear that their conquerors should in time be conquered their city levelled to the dust, and their empire overturned. The Book in which these interesting prophecies are contained, is justly considered by Bishop Lowth as a complete and perfect poem, of which the conduct and imagery are truly admirable.

The fire spirit and sublimity of Nahum, are unequalled. His scenes are painted with great variety and splendour. The opening of his work in which he describes the attributes of God, is august and the preparations for the attack, as well as the destruction of Nineveh are represented with singular effect. The art, with which the immediate destruction of the Assyrians under Sennacherib is intermingled with the future ruin of the empire, affords a very elegant specimen of the manner in which the Prophets delight to introduce present and distant events under one point of view. The allegorical pictures in this Book are remarkably beautiful, chap. ii. 7, 11, 12.

Neither history nor tradition furnishes us with any account of Nahum, or of the period of his death. His tomb, or pretended tomb was formerly shewn in a village named Bethogabra, now called Giblin, near Emmaus. Dr Gray

Chap. I. The conduct and imagery of this prophetic poem are truly admirable. The commencement grandly sets forth the justice and power of God, tempered by lenity and goodness, ver. 2—4. A sudden address to the Assyrians follows, and a prediction of their perplexity and overthrow, as devisers of evil against the true God, ver. 5—11. Jehovah himself then proclaims freedom to his people from the Assyrian yoke, and the destruction of the Assyrian idols, ver. 12—14. Upon which the Prophet in a most lively manner turns the attention of Judah to the approach of the messenger, who brings such glad tidings and bids her celebrate her festivals, and offer her thank offerings without fear of so powerful an adversary. Abp Newcome

1 The burden of Nineveh. The heavy tidings that God sent to Nineveh, and to the whole kingdom of Assyria. Bp Hall

The repentance of the Ninevites upon the preaching of Jonah appears to have been of no long continuance. For not many years after we find the Prophet Nahum foretelling the total and entire destruction of the city. His whole prophecy relates to this single event, and the city was accordingly destroyed by the Medes and Babylonians. In whose reign it was taken, and who were the persons that commanded in this expedition, are points concerning which authors are not agreed. Bp Newton God pardons men, and bears with them, upon their humiliation but when they return to their iniquities, He at last executes the decrees of His justice. Ostervald

9 What do ye imagine against the Lord? he will make an utter end: affliction shall not rise up the second time

10 For while they be folded together as thorns, and while they are drunken as drunkards, they shall be devoured as stubble fully dry

11 There is one come out of thee, that imagineth evil against the Lord, a wicked counsellor

14 And the Lord hath given a commandment concerning thee, that no more of thy name be sown: out of the house of thy gods will I cut off the graven image

8 But with an overrunning flood he will make an utter end of the place thereof.] An army's overrunning a country is often compared to an inundation: see Is vii 7, 8, Dan ix 26, xi 10, 22, 10. Thus God will bring the great city of Nineveh to utter ruin so that there shall be no remains of it in aftertimes. W Lenth See the notes on chap iii 6, and chap iii 17—19.

9 — affliction shall not rise up the second time.] I will make in utter destruction all at once. When I begin, I will also make in end, as it is expressed 1 Sam. iii 12. W Lenth

10 For while they be folded together as thorns, &c.] While they combine themselves, and plot together in wickedness as thorns are folded up together in a hedge, and while they are consorting together in their drunkenness and excess: then, even then shall the judgment of God fall upon them, and devour them as the fire consumes the dry stubble. Bp Hall Diodorus Siculus, who describes the taking of Nineveh, and the subversion of the Assyrian empire to Arbaces the Mede, assisted by Belshazzar the Babylonian, relates that while all the Assyrian army were feasting for their former victories, those about Arbaces, being informed by some deserters of the negligence and drunkenness in the camp of the enemies, assaulted them unexpectedly by night, and falling orderly on them disorderly, and prepared on them unprepared, became masters of the camp and slew many of the soldiers and drove the rest into the city. Bp Newton

11 There is one come out of thee.] That is, thou hast produced such an one. Such were Pul, 2 King xv 19, Tiglath pileser, chap xv 29, Salmimesser, chap xvii 6, and Sennacherib, chap xviii 1, xix 23. Bp Vencom

13 For now will I break his yoke from off thee.] The Jews paid tribute to the Assyrians 2 Kings xviii 11 and the Israelites were under actual captivity: moliſh them at this time. Bp Vencom

Jehovah, and the military army and muster of the Babylonians, then rapid approach to the city the process of the siege, the capture of the place the captivity lamentation and flight of the inhabitants the sacking of the wealthy city and the consequent desolation and terror are described in the true spirit of Eastern poetry, and with many pathetic vivid and sublime images, ver 1—10. A grand and animated allegory succeeds this description, ver 11 12 which is explained and applied to the city of Nineveh, in ver 13. Bp Vencom

O Nineveh! for if the Lord have turned away the excellency of Jacob and Israel and hath given it over to the spoil of the Assyrians, who have destroyed their vineyards, how much more will he deface the glory of Nineveh! Bp Hall Some translate the words thus. The Lord hath returned on will revenge the pride or injurious dealing against Jacob and the pride against Israel, that is. He will requite the injury and oppressions, which Sennacherib and Salmimesser the kings of Assyria have exercised upon Judah and Israel. W Lenth

5 He shall recount his northies &c.] The king of Nineveh shall muster his choicest troops, but they shall be disordered and discomfited. W. Louth

6 The gates of the rivers shall be opened &c.] According to this, our Lord informs us, that there was an old prophecy that Nineveh should not be till the river became an enemy to the city, and in the third year of the siege the river being swollen with continual rains overflowed part of the city and broke down the wall for twenty furlongs: then the king thinking, that the oracle was fulfilled and the river become an enemy to the city, built a large funeral pile in the palace, and collecting together all his wealth, and his concubines and eunuchs, burnt himself and the palace with them all: and the enemy entered the breach that the waters had made, and took the city. What was therefore predicted in the first chapter was literally fulfilled, "with an overrunning flood He will make an utter end of the place thereof," ver 8. Bp Newton

Chap III In this chapter the Prophet denounces war against Nineveh for her perfidy and violence, and strongly places before our eyes the number of her chariots and cavalry, her burnished arms, and the great and unrelenting slaughter which she spread around her, ver 1—3 He assigns her idolatries as one cause of her iniquities and unpitied fall, ver 4—7 He describes No Amon, her rival in populousness, confederacies, and situation as sharing a like fate with herself, ver 8—11, and beautifully illustrates the ease with which her strong holds should be taken, ver 12, and the feebleness of her people during the siege ver 15 He pronounces that all her preparations, her numbers, her opulence, her multitude of chief men, would be of no avail ver 11—17 He foretells that her tributaries would desert her ver 18 He concludes with a triumphant exclamation, the topics of which are the greatness and incurableness of her wound, and the just triumph of others over her, on account of her extensive oppressions, ver 19 Bp Newcome

Ver 1 — the prey departeth not.] They are still carrying on their conquests and never cease to get new spoils from such as they newly conquer. D. Wells

they shall be gathered all that have the bruise of their hand, and shall clap the hands over ness made a wound?

19 There is no healing of the bruise. In this passage we find in chap. 1, 2, and in 11, 22, the complete destruction of the city, and the complete destruction of this city. The Prophet Jeremiah likewise in the days of Josiah king of Judah, foretells the same sad event chap. 11, 13, 14, 15. But what probability was there, that the capital city of a great kingdom, a city which was sixty miles in circumference, a city which contained so many thousand inhabitants, a city which had walls, according to Diodorus Siculus, a hundred feet high, and 600 towers, that these towers could go abreast upon them, and fifteen hundred towers at proper distances in the walls, two hundred feet in height, what probability was there that such a city should ever be totally destroyed? And yet so totally was it destroyed, that the place where it was situated is hardly known now.

The city was taken and destroyed by the Medes and Babylonians and what probably helped to complete its ruin and destruction was the enlarging and beautifying of Babylon soon after by Nebuchadnezzar. From that time no mention is made of Nineveh by any of the sacred writers, and the most ancient of the heathen authors, who have occasion to say any thing about it, speak of it as a city that was once great and flourishing, but now destroyed and desolate. Great as it was formerly, so little of it was remaining that artists are not agreed even about its situation, probably we may conclude from the general suffrage of ancient historians and geographers, that it was situated upon the river Tigris, but not so low as the river Euphrates. Lucian, who flourished in the second century after Christ, affirms, that Nineveh was utterly perished, and there was no footstep of it remaining nor could you tell where it was once situated, and the greater regard is to be paid to Lucian's testimony, as he was a native of Samosata, a city upon the river Euphrates, and coming from a neighbouring country, he must in all likelihood have known whether there were any remains of Nineveh or not. There is at this time a city called Mosul, situated upon the western side of the Tigris, and on the opposite shore to Nineveh, and of great extent, which are said to be the ruins of Nineveh, but it is more than probable, that these ruins are the remains of the Persian Nineveh, built between the third and the seventh century after Christ, and not of the Assyrian. Even the ruins of old Nineveh have been, as I may say, long ago ruined and destroyed, and its utter end hath been made manifest, and such is the truth of the Divine predictions.

HABAKKUK.

INTRODUCTION.

SOME writers, whose relations are probably founded on traditionary accounts, describe Habakkuk as a native of Bethsakar, and affirm that he was of the tribe of Simeon. Some suppose him to have flourished in the reign of Manasseh; others in that of Josiah and some have placed him so late as Zedekiah but the most approved opinion is, that he prophesied under Jehoiakim, who ascended the throne in the year of the world 3395, and reigned over Judah eleven years.

As the Prophet makes no mention of the Assyrians, and speaks of the Chaldean invasions as near at hand, chap. i. 5, ii. 9, iii. 2, 16—19, he probably lived after the destruction of the Assyrian empire in the fall of Nineveh, in the year of the world 3392, and not long before the devastation of Judah by the victories of Nebuchadnezzar. Habakkuk was then nearly contemporary with, and predicted the same events as Jeremiah, and he probably lived to witness the completion of that part of his prophecy which related to the afflictions of his country. Dr. Gray.

The Prophet Habakkuk stands high in the class of the Hebrew poets. The beautiful connexion between the parts of his prophecy its diction, imagery, spirit, and sublimity, cannot be too much admired. Abp. Newcome.

It should seem from the title prefixed, and from the intimation subjoined to the last verse of the Prayer in the third chapter, as well as from the word Selah, which occurs three times in the chapter, that the Prayer was set to music, and perhaps performed in the service of the temple, and it was possibly delivered in a kind of measure. The style of the whole book is poetical, but more especially this beautiful and perfect ode, which is decorated with every kind of imagery and poetical embellishment. Habakkuk is imitated by succeeding Prophets, and is cited as an inspired person by the Evangelical writers, Heb. x. 37, 38, Rom. i. 17, Gal. iii. 11, Acts xiii. 41, compared with Hab. i. 4. Dr. Gray.

11 Then shall his mind change, &c. This may be spoken of the Chaldean nation at large Abp Newcome 12 Art thou not from everlasting, &c. The Prophet, having had this revelation from God, that the Chaldeans should be the ministers of His vengeance against sinful Judah, falls into an holy expostulation with Him about these dispensations. As if he had said, O everlasting God, whose word is unchangeable as Thyself, "Thou art of purer eyes, than to behold evil." In Thine own chosen people; why hast Thou ordained these Chaldeans for Thy judges, a faithless race of men, who without scruple devour those that are more righteous than themselves, and prey upon them as freely as the fisherman, who takes all that come to his net, and after all the victories which Thou givest them, they have no notion of Thy providence, but impute their success to Thy power and wisdom of their own false gods? Reading 13 Thou art of purer eyes than to behold evil. The holy and pure nature of God is at the greatest distance from evil, and at the greatest contrariety to it. He is so far from having any inclination to evil, that it is the only thing in the world, to which He hath an irreconcilable antipathy. This the Scripture frequently declares to us, and that in a very emphatical manner Ps v 4 "Thou art now a God that hath pleasure in wickedness, neither shall evil dwell with Thee." The words are a diminution, and less is said than is intended by them: the meaning is that God is so far from taking pleasure in sin, that He hath a perfect hatred and abhorrence of it. And here in the Prophet Habakkuk, "Thou art of purer eyes than to behold evil, and canst not look on iniquity." As, when men hate a thing to the highest degree, they turn away their eyes, and cannot endure to look upon it. Light and darkness are not more opposite to one another, than the holy nature of God is to sin. What communion hath light with darkness? and what concord hath Christ with Belial?" 2 Cor vi 14, 15 Abp Tillotson

16 Therefore they sacrifice unto their net, &c. They boast themselves in their strength, and defy themselves for their valour Abp Newcome

17 Shall they therefore empty their net, &c. Wilt Thou therefore, O Lord, still suffer them to empty their net for a new draught? Wilt Thou not restrain them from making spoil of the nations round about continually? Bp Hall

Chap II. To the expostulation, which closes the former chapter, the Prophet tells us here in the second, that he waited most attentively for the answer of God, and received it with a command to write it upon tables in plain, "that he may run that readeth it," or may easily run it over without hesitation, it being so legible.
And the substance of the Divine answer is thus: That the Chal-deans were indeed such men, as the Prophet had represented them; and that therefore, when God had used them as rods for the chastisement of His people, He would throw them into the sea, and utterly consume them. This burden of the Babylonians buried in the fifth verse. The low and shameful condition into which the king of Babylon should sink, is described in the following verses by the remarks, which his conquered and captive nation should make upon him, "taking up a taunting proverb against him, and saying, Woe to him that increaseth that which is not his" &c. Reading

3 — the vision] Or prophecy, which follows from the fourth to the twentieth verse. Abp. Secker

For this vision is not presently to be fulfilled, but hath a time set and determined, wherein it shall be accomplished: at the expiring whereof it shall be manifestly verified to the world. Bp. Hall

4 Behold, his soul which is lifted up is not upright in him, &c.] In any case, give thou full belief to this word of the Lord: for behold, that man who withdraweth his soul from trusting unto God, and will be relying to himself projects of his own, as he is unsound and faithless to God, so is he accordingly displeasing to Him: but the just and upright man will depend upon the promises of God, and speed thereafter, for his faith in God shall uphold his life here, and crown it with glory hereafter. Bp. Hall

— the just shall live by his faith.] A Christian's life is a life of faith, according to this saying of the Prophet, which is thrice quoted by the Apostle, with reference to the life that now is, as well as that which is to come. As it is by faith that the just shall come to heaven, and live there, so it is by faith that they live here upon earth too. And it is their living by faith upon earth, whereby they come to live in heaven. There they live by sight, and not by faith: but that we shall never do, except we first live here by faith and not by sight. Bp. Beveridge

5 Yea also, because he transgresseth by wine, &c.] Know therefore, that this proud Babylonian, under whom thy nation shall suffer, shall at last be punished in his own kind, &c. Bp. Hall The Prophet, having assured the Jews of a deliverance in God's appointed time, proceeds now to denounce His judgment against the Babylonian monarchy, speaking of it as comprised under one person at the head of it: see the note upon chap. 1:11. Here he describes him as one intoxicated with his successes, and not knowing how to set any bounds to his ambition, but still as his conquests enlarge, his desire of having more increases. Hell or death, and the grave are proverbial emblems of an insatiable temper. Prov. xxviii: 20 xxx: 16 W. Lowth

— he is a proud man.] That is he is intoxicated with his power and dominion compare Dan. iv: 30 "neither keepeth at home," meaning that the king of Babylon confines not himself to a peaceful settlement or residence in his own dominions: but who, as it follows "enlargeth his desire as hell" &c. Parkhurst

6 — ladeth himself with thick clay.] His gold and silver, which is nothing originally but earth or clay, shall turn to no benefit, but be rather his burden; adding weight to his sins and punishment. W. Lowth

8 — because of men's blood.] Shed by thee. "The land is the land of Judah," the city, the city of Jerusalem. Abp. Newcome "The violence of the land," or "against the land," as in Joel iii: 19, Obad. ver. 10. Abp. Secker

11 For the stone shall cry out of the wall, &c.] For, if men shall hold their peace, the very stones out of the wall, which thou hast raised by this cruelty, shall cry out against thee, and the beam out of the timber-work shall second this clamour against thy injustice and violence. Bp. Hall

13 — is it not of the Lord of hosts, &c.] The foregoing and the following verses contain the denunciations of God's judgment upon Babylon, for her pride and cruelty, her luxury and idolatry: and this is an answer to Habakkuk's expostulation, why God punished Israel by the sword of the Chaldeans: it was not that He punished that people for any superior worth in them, for, on the contrary, they were now almost ripe for destruction, and should have been consumed over the Jews but a very short time. I or rather, that the Lord of hosts that the people shall labour in the very fire, or rather shall labour for that which shall be fuel for the fire, "and weary themselves for very vanity?" meaning, that all the pains, the Chaldeans took in enlarging and beautifying their famous Babylon, should be soon lost in the flames: that should consume it, even as they had consumed the cities of Judah. Reading

14 For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, &c.] God's power and providence shall be widely displayed in the destruction of Babylon, in the humiliation of Nebuchadnezzar, and in the captivity and restoration of His people. Abp. Newcome Especially as these events are described in the Prophets, as earnest and types of God's judgments upon His enemies, and His favour to His Church under the Gospel. W. Lowth

15, 16 Woe unto him that giveth his neighbour drink, &c.] Grotius justly observes, that these two verses contain an allegory: the Chaldeans gave to the neighbouring nations the cup of idolatry and of deceitful alliance, and in return they received from Jehovah the cup of His fury. Abp. Newcome

— and the spoil of beasts, which made them afraid.] The relative "which," added by our translators, gives the passage, which might be more plainly rendered, "The spoil of beasts shall make them, or make thee afraid," as the Septuagint and Chaldees read the text, with very little alteration W Lowth. Surely the violence done to Lebanon shall cover thee, and the destruction of beasts shall make thee afraid. Abp Newcome. The cause here assigned for the destruction of the Chaldeans, is their cruelty against the people of God, and the spoiling of all Judea, which is here figuratively signified under the name of Lebanon. Danvers

20 But the Lord is in his holy temple &c.] That is, The Lord is He, of whom alone we are to ask happiness. His holy temple, the place, where alone we are to find it. This is the right aim, this is the true end of man. Whereas he, that seeks felicity in the creature, looks for it in the wrong place; he, that asks it from a false god, applies to one that hath it not to give. "Let all the earth," then, this vain world and all its vain pretences to felicity, "keep silence before God," while all false objects of worship, and all worshippers of false gods stand mute before Him; convicted and convinced that the dispensing of happiness, as well as the punishing of the guilty, is the sole prerogative of God, that without holiness none can see Him; without seeing Him none can be happy.

This chapter may be considered as a vindication of the wisdom and justice of God in the government of the world; particularly in that seeming inequality of His providence towards good and bad men in this life, which has so often staggered the faith, and sometimes the faith, of many pious persons. We are to be taught, that the certain consequence of all vice and wickedness is shame and misery. "Woe," or punishment, is the constant attendant on every sin. How slow soever its pace may be, it never fails to overtake it, so that however evil men may happen to flourish, it is but for a time. "The prosperity of fools shall destroy them," Prov 1: 22. Their very success in sin shall prove their destruction. This consideration should therefore compel us to conclude, that such persons are as far from being happy in their most prosperous state, and as far beneath our envy or applause, that they justly merit our pity and compassion, as of all men the most miserable. Hogan form of a supplication; although the following parts are rather in the nature of an hymn or thanksgiving W Lowth. The word Shigionoth may denote a musical instrument of great compass with which the Jews accompanied this piece of poetry. Abp Newcome.

This chapter affords a remarkable instance of that sublimity which is peculiar to the ode, and which is principally owing to a bold and yet easy digression or transition. The prophet foreseeing the judgments of God, the calamities which were to befall his country from the Chaldeans, and afterwards the punishments which awaited the Chaldeans themselves, partly struck with terror, and partly inspired by confidence in the Divine mercy beseeches God that He would hasten the redemption and deliverance of His people, ver. 2. Perceiving at once the similarity between the Babylonish and Egyptian captivities, and how much the deliverance experienced under the latter would animate the hopes of a second similar deliverance, he does not dwell on particular resemblances, but bursts out at once with unexpected impetuosity, in allusion to the Egyptian deliverance, "God came from Teman, &c." His progress throughout the whole passage the same magnificence with which he begins, choosing the noblest images which to express a subject could supply, and illustrating them with the most splendid colours, and in the most elevated style. The singular elegance of the conclusion crowns the magnificence of the whole; and were it not that antiquity here and there throws a veil of obscurity over it, there could not be conceived a more perfect and masterly poem of the kind. Bp Lowth

O Lord, I have heard thy speech, and was afraid &c.] O Lord, I have heard the words spoken by Thee, concerning the present captivity of Thy people, and was much troubled with them. Now, O Lord, since they must lie under this grievous affliction for a time, make good upon them the work of Thy gracious government of them, uphold them, while those years of their misery continue, let Thy merciful protection be made known to the world. 1st Heb

3. God came from Teman, &c.] Bp Lowth observes, that this is a sudden burst of poetry, in the true spirit of the ode the concealed connexion being, that God, who had formerly displayed such power in delivering the Israelites from Egyptian slavery, might succour their posterity in a like wonderful manner, and the enthusiasm of the poet leading him to neglect all obvious ways of entering on his subject. Verses 3—7 contain a sublime description of God, when He conducted His people to the land of Canaan. The grandest circumstances are selected, and the diction is as splendid as the subjects. Abp Newcome

The captivity brought to mind the Exodus, or deliverance of the Israelites out of bondage, and that He who had delivered could again deliver His people. Abp Secker

6 — the everlasting mountains were scattered, &c.] The mountains and hills are said to quake at God's presence, Nahum i. 5. so here the whole land of Canaan is said to tremble, and even the mountains themselves, the most solid and impregnable parts of it, because the hearts of the stoutest of the old inhabitants fainted and lost their courage. see Josh. ii. 24. — the curtains of the land of Midian.] The coverings of their tents. Abp. Newcome.

8 Was the Lord displeased against the rivers? &c.] When God dried up the channel of the Red sea, Exod. xiv. 22, and afterward that of the river Jordan. Josh. iii. 16, 17, it was not out of any displeasure against the waters, but for the safety of His people, for whose deliverance He appeared in as illustrious a manner, as if He had been seen riding in the clouds, and carried upon the wings of the wind in a chariot. compare Is. xix. 1, Ps. lxxviii. 4, civ. 3. Deut. xxxiii. 26. W. Lowth.

9 Thy bow was made quite naked, according to the oaths of the tribes, even thy word.] Thou didst draw forth and bend the bow of thy mighty power among thine enemies, according to the oaths, which Thou swarest to the tribes of Israel: even the word of promise, which Thou gavest them to settle them in that good land. bp. Hall. The question asked in a very bold and poetical manner, ver. 8, is here answered: that God displayed His power to deliver His people according to His faithful word. Abp. Newcome.

The Oriental bows were wont to be carried in a case, hung to the girdle: hence the phrase of making the bow naked. bp. Chardon.

— Thou didst cleave the earth with rivers.] Thou didst cleave the hard rocks and the earth about them, and make the waters run down in a great stream or channel. Ps. lxxviii. 15, 16. cv. 41. W. Lowth.

The passage through the Red sea having been beautifully mentioned in an indirect manner, ver. 8, the Prophet continues his magnificent description of the Deity, ver. 10, 11, 12, and adds the reason, why such power was displayed, in the former part of the thirteenth verse. Abp. Newcome.

10 The mountains saw thee, and they trembled.] Mount Sinai, and the adjoining hills, felt the effects of Thy presence. W. Lowth.

11 — at the light of thine arrows they went, &c.] The instruments of destruction, which God employed, are metaphorically called "arrows," and "spears." Abp. Newcome.

12 — Thou woundedst the head out of the house of the wicked.] The ardour of the Prophet having led him to begin in the midst of his subject, ver. 8, he here returns to what passed in Egypt before the dividing of the Red sea, the mention of which astonishing miracle he repeats, ver. 15. In this verse he refers to the destruction of the firstborn in Egypt. Abp. Newcome.

— by discovering the foundation unto the neck.] By undermining them from bottom to top. W. Lowth. The death of the firstborn is figuratively called the utter overthrow of the Egyptian houses. Abp. Newcome.

13 Thou didst strike through with thy staves the head of his villages.] The Prophet amplifies the former benefit of God, that for the preservation of His Church He destroyed the firstborn of the Egyptians not only in the cities and towns, but also in the country: because that the inhabitants of the country, as well as those in the cities, raged against the people of God with deceit and violence, and would have delighted to devour and consume them. ## INTRODUCTION

THE Prophet Zephaniah informs us, that he was the son of Cushi, and that the word of the Lord came to him in the days of Josiah king of Judah. He is supposed to have been of the tribe of Simeon; and as he traces back his pedigree for four generations, he was doubtless of noble birth though not of the royal family, as some have imagined from the resemblance between the names of Hezekiah and that of Hiskia, from whom the Prophet professes himself to have been a descendant; the period which intervened between king Hezekiah and the time in which Zephaniah flourished, being scarce sufficient to admit of three intermediate generations to the Prophet.

Zephaniah begins with denouncing God's wrath against "the remnant of Baal, and the name of the Chemarims" against them which worshipped the host of heaven, and swore by Malcham; and therefore probably he addressed those idolatrous persons who were not yet extirpated by the religious zeal of Josiah, compare Zeph. i. 4, 5—9 with 2 Kings xxiii. 24, 25. It is remarkable that the destruction of Nineveh, which happened in the year of the world 3892. And upon these considerations, he may be supposed to have prophesied before the last reformation made by Josiah, in the year of the world 3891. He may be supposed also to have entered on his office towards the commencement of the reign of that monarch, who ascended the throne in the year of the world 3894, since he preceded Jeremiah, who began his prophetic ministry in the thirteenth year of Josiah's reign. Zephaniah states, that Zephaniah was born at mount Siccatha, or Bacatha.

Zephaniah and Jeremiah resemble each other so much in those parts where they denounce the idolatry and wickedness that prevailed in their times, that St Isidore asserts, that Zephaniah was the abbreviator of Jeremiah. But he apparently predeceased, before Jeremiah, he seems to have concurred with Josiah in his righteous design of bringing back the people to the worship and obedience of the true God.

The style of Zephaniah is poetical, but it is not distinguished by any peculiar elegance or beauty, though generally animated and impressive. Dr Gray

Chap I ver 1 The word of the Lord which came unto Zephaniah. This prophecy contains partly threatenings, and partly comforts. Threatenings of God concerning the destruction of Jerusalem very shortly to ensue, and concerning the most grievous punishments of the Jews, both for their impiety towards God, and for their injustice towards men. Yet because the Lord allowed an interval before the accomplishment of His judgments, the Prophet exhorts the Jews to mitigate the Divine wrath by earnest repentance and amendment of life. He also comforts the Church by promises that God will not utterly cast it away and destroy it, but will leave some seed of it because He had determined to gather it from among the Gentiles, and to sanctify it in Christ and for Christ's sake. The book contains three discourses, which are comprised in the same number of chapters. Danour

Jealous God," and will not admit of any rival in His worship. See Hos iv 15, Amos v 26; 2 Kings xvii 33. Malcham is the same with Moloch, to whom the people of Judah continued to offer their children, as Jeremiah upbraids them, chap vii 31; xix 5, notwithstanding the reformation made by Josiah, 2 Kings xxiii 10. W Louth, Abp Newcome

7 — for the Lord hath prepared a sacrifice, he hath bid his guests. The slaughter of the wicked is called "a sacrifice," because it is in some sense an atonement to God's justice: compare Is xxxiv 6, Jer xvi 10, Ezek xxix 17; Rev xix 17. The latter part of the sentence alludes to the custom of those that offered sacrifice, which was to invite their friends to partake of the feast which accompanied it. So God will call the Chaldeans to have a share in this slaughter. W Louth

8 — strange apparel. There were peculiar vestments belonging to the worship of each idol; see 2 Kings i 22. So at other times there were peculiar habits belonging to the priests of Saturn, and the priestesses of Ceres. The text may likewise be explained of such men as wore women's apparel, and such women as wore that belonging to men, which was contrary to the express law Deut xxii 5, and was a rite observed in the worship of some idols. W Louth

9 — those that leap on the threshold. Or rather, "leap over the threshold." The expression probably denotes some idolatrous rite, like that which was practised in the temple of Dagon, where the "priests did not stand upon the threshold," 1 Sam v 5. To this sense the Chaldee Paraphrast interprets it of those that walk after the laws or rites of the Philistines. Others expound it of those who enter into other men's houses, and take away their goods by violence, according to what follows "which fill their masters' houses with violence and deceit." W Louth

This leaping over the thresholds may allude to the servants of the great men, riding into people's houses, and having gained admission by deceit, forcing from the inhabitants by violence considerable contributions. Such a practice prevails at this time among the Arabs and the Persians. Harmer, Parkhurst

10 — the fish gate. The gate which stood near the fish market see, 2 Chron xxxiii 14, Nehem iii 3. "The second"

should rather be "the middle part of the city" it is that part of Jerusalem mentioned 2 Kings xxii 14, 2 Chron xxiv 22. W Louth, Abp Newcome

— a great crashing from the hills. From the mountains of Zion and Moriah, whereon the temple and the king's palace were built. See 2 Chron iii 1. W Louth

11 — Maktesh. A part of street of Jerusalem. The Chaldee interprets it of the inhabitants near the brook Cedron. W Louth A valley in Jerusalem, which divided the upper from the lower city. This is agreeable to the etymology of the word which signifies a hollow place. Abp Newcome

— all they that bear silver. All those rich men, which had wont to drive a great trade with their silver. Bp Hall The rich merchants in general, or the money-changers in particular, may be meant. Abp Newcome

12 — with candles. That is, thoroughly and diligently. See Deut xv 8. Abp Newcome This is said to signify the exactness with which God pries into the most inward and secret parts, so that nothing can escape His search. Bp Sanderson

— that are settled on their lees. Which have hardened themselves with resolutions of wickedness, and have determinately settled themselves to live in their known sins. Bp Hall

14—16. The great day of the Lord. The great day of God's revenge upon Jerusalem is near at hand. Bp Hall The topic of approaching calamity from Jehovah is often insisted on in the Prophets, but no where probably with such a beautiful amplification as in these three verses. Abp Newcome

17 — like blind men. Not knowing whither to go, or which way to take for safety. Compare Deut xxviii 29, Isa lx. 10. W Louth

18 — the fire of his jealousy. God's vengeance is frequently compared to fire. See Nahum i 6. This shall consume the land and its inhabitants for their heinous offences, and chiefly for their idolatry, because that sin peculiarly intrinches upon God's honour, which is incommunicable to others, where He is called "a jealous God," Exod xx 5, xxxiv 14. W Louth

INTRODUCTION

HAGGAI is generally reputed to have been born in the captivity, and to have returned from Babylon with Zerubbabel, Ezra ii 2. He is reckoned as the tenth in order among the Prophets, both in the Hebrew and Greek copies, and may be considered as the first of the three Prophets who flourished among the Jews after their return to their country. He appears to have been roused up by God to exhort Zerubbabel, Ezra i 1, and Joshua the high priest, the son of Josedech, to resume the work of the temple which had been interrupted near fourteen years, in consequence of the intrigues of the Samaritans, and other obstructions exerted to defeat the edict of Cyrus, Ezra iv 24. He began to prophesy in the second year of Darius Hystaspes, in the year of the world 3484, about fifteen years after the foundation of the temple had been laid Ezra v 1. The Prophets, after the captivity, sometimes reckon by the dates of those sovereigns to whom their country was subjected.

The style of Haggai is represented by the learned Bp Lowth as entirely prosaic, but Abp Newcome has given a translation of it on the supposition, that a great part of it admits of a metrical division.

Haggai was probably of the sacerdotal race; and Epiphanius relates, that he was buried among the priests at Jerusalem Dr Gray

IN the second year of Darius the king, in the sixth month, in the first day of the month, came the word of the LORD † by Haggai the prophet unto Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, † governor of Judah, and to Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest, saying,

4 Is it time for you, O ye, to dwell in your cieled houses, and this house lie waste?

[Chap I ver. 2. This people say, The time is not come, &c.] This prophecy seems to have been delivered before Darius had granted his decree for rebuilding the temple Compare Ezra v 1, with vi 1 W Lowth.

4 Is it time for you, O ye, to dwell in your cieled houses, and this house lie waste? You have found means and opportunity to build fine houses for yourselves, though ye are content to let the house of God lie in ruins. It argues a great contempt of God and religion, when men think no cost or finery too much to bestow upon themselves, and the meanest accommodation good enough for the service of God W Lowth.

5 Consider your ways Ye have sown much, &c] Consider well the courses that ye take, and the success of your affairs. God hath justly crossed you in all your hopes and endeavours. Ye have sown much, expecting a goodly crop, but ye find little

12 Then Zerubbabel &c.] Compare Ezias v. 2

[Chap. II ver. 1 Who is left among you that saw this house in her first glory?] When the foundation of the house was laid in the second year of Cyrus, many of the ancient men that had seen the first house, went to see how much the second temple would fall short of the glory of the first, 1 Sam. iii. 12. The second year of Cyrus was fifty-three years after the destruction of the first temple, so the oldest men among those that returned home might very well remember how glorious that was. This prophecy was uttered fifteen years after the foundations of the second temple were laid, so there might some still survive that saw the first. W. Louth.

5 According to the word that I covenanted with you.] I will fulfil those promises which I made with you, when I delivered you out of Egypt, that upon your obedience I would not leave you nor forsake you, but guide and prosper you in all your undertakings. Nehem. ix. 20. Is. lxiii. 11. W. Louth.

6 For thus saith the Lord of hosts.] The occasion of this prophecy was the dejection of the Jews at the unhelpful appearance of their new temple. The comfort in the Prophet's message was suited to this circumstance, and contains a promise of some glory to be conferred on this temple to make it exceed the glory of the former. Bp. Chandler.

That it is some very great thing, which is here foretold and promised for the honour of this second temple, no man can doubt, who considers in what a solemn manner it is here expressed. This great and glorious title, the Lord of hosts, being no less than five several times used within the compass of these four verses, the like instance to which is not perhaps in the whole Bible. So that, by the solemn manner of expressing it, we may imagine that it is some very great thing which is spoken of, and such as the like had never been before, and such was the incarnation and coming of the Messiah. Abp. Tillotson.

IN the seventh month, in the one and twentieth day of the month, came the word of the Lord by the prophet Haggai, saying,

2 Speak now to Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, governor of Judah, and to Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest, and to the residue of the people, saying,

3 Who is left among you that saw this house in her first glory? and how do ye see it now? is it not in your eyes in comparison of it as nothing?

4 Yet now be strong, O Zerubbabel, saith the Lord, and be strong, O Joshua, son of Josedech, the high priest, and be strong, all ye people of the land, saith the Lord, and work; for I am with you, saith the Lord of hosts.

5 According to the word that I covenanted with you when ye came out of Egypt, so my spirit remaineth among you, fear ye not.

6 For thus saith the Lord of hosts, Yet once, it is a little while, and I will shake the heavens, and the earth, and the sea, and the dry land; <sup>Hebr. 11:26</sup>

7 And I will shake all nations, and the desire of all nations shall come, and I will

— Yet once, it is a little while.] Or, "once more, as the Seventy render it, where St. Paul follows, Heb. xii. 26. The phrase implies such an alteration as shall not give way to any farther change, as the Apostle there expounds it. The space of time from this prophecy to the coming of the Messiah may be called "a little while," in comparison of the several ages expired since the first promise of a Redeemer. W. Louth.

I will shake the heavens, &c.] Once I did in great terror deliver My law, and now, ere any long time, I will once more work a great change in My Church, by the bringing in of My Gospel, before and in the exhibiting of which, as I did formerly in the delivery of the law, I will do wondrous things, &c. Bp. Hall.

The Hebrews have no one word, whereby to express he would and therefore they do it by an enumeration of the principal parts of it. See Gen. i. 1; 2 Pet. iii. 10. So the Prophet here, to express the great commotions and changes, that should be in the world before the coming of the Messiah, says that God will shake the heavens, &c., that is, he would cause great revolutions in the world, there should be great wars and confusions, and the empires of the world should pass from one hand to another. Abp. Tillotson.

Great commotions and changes in the world are expressed by shaking the heavens and the earth, see Ezek. xvi. 15, xlviii. 19, Jer. iii. 16. These expressions may denote here the great commotions that should be in the Roman empire, from the death of Julius (Cæsar), till near the birth of Christ, or it may in general signify the introduction of such a kingdom or religion, as that of which the Messiah was to be the head, which shall in the end break in pieces and destroy all the other dominions of the world. H. Porth.

7 — and the desire of all nations shall come. &c.] Christ, who

8 The silver is mine, and the gold is mine, saith the LORD of hosts

9 The glory of this latter house shall be greater than of the former, saith the LORD of hosts and in this place will I give peace, saith the LORD of hosts

10 ¶ In the four and twentieth day of the ninth month, in the second year of Darius, came the word of the LORD by Haggai the prophet, saying,

11 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, Ask now the priests concerning the law, saying,

12 If one bear holy flesh in the skirt of his garment, and with his skirt do touch bread, or pottage, or wine, or oil, or any meat, shall it be holy? and the priests answered and said, No.

13 Then said Haggai, If one that is unclean by a dead body touch any of these, shall it be unclean? And the priests answered and said, It shall be unclean

the desire of all nations," as the Redeemer of the world, and the guide and director to mankind in the performance of their duty shall come under the roof of this house: and though it wants the cloud of glory overshadowing the mercy seat, which was a symbol of the Divine presence peculiar to Solomon's temple, (see Exod. 26:34), yet I will honour this second temple with a much greater glory, even the presence of the Messiah, in whom shall dwell all the fulness of the Godhead bodily," Col. 2:9 Bp. Hall Dr. Wells, W. Lowth.

The expectation, the hope, the desire of all nations, and of Israel in particular, was a known description of some Person, delivered from Abraham's days, Gen. xxii. 18, from one Prophet to another, and, after the captivity, fixed on the Messiah, of whom the Jews, about Christ's time, interpreted this text in Haggai and in his time the Messiah was usually termed, "the hope," "the desired hope," "the hope of Israel," "the hope of the promise to the twelve tribes," "the blessing of Abraham to the Gentiles," 1 Tim. 1:1 Titus 2:13, Acts xxviii. 20; xxvi. 7, 8, Gal. iii. 14 Bp. Chandler.

As Christ ought to be, what He is called, "the desire of all nations" in general, so ought He to be the desire of every person in particular. We must all, and every one of us, desire to have Him for our only Saviour and Redeemer, our only Mediator and Advocate. We must desire to have Him, according to all the offices which He has undertaken for us, as our Prophet, our King, and our Priest. Our Prophet, to reveal His and our Father's will unto us and in us, our King, to rule and govern our hearts and affections, to keep both our souls and bodies in subjection, and our Priest, to make atonement for our sins, and so to reconcile God to us and us to Him. Bp. Beveridge.

8, 9 The silver is mine, &c. Think not that I stand upon matter of cost or price of metals. All the silver and gold which is hidden in the bowels of the earth is Mine, and how easy were it for Me thus to adorn My house! But the glory of this house doth not consist in these outward things: no, the glory of this latter house, though meaner in structure, shall be greater than that of the former, saith the Lord: in that My Son, the Saviour of the world, being clothed in flesh, shall come personally and visibly under its roof, there He, who is the Prince of Peace, shall make His appearance: and there shall His Gospel, which is the Gospel of peace, be preached and published to the world. See Is. 60:1, Mic. vi. 5, Eph. ii. 14 Bp. Hall W. Lowth.

15 And now, I pray you, consider from this day and upward, from before a stone was laid upon a stone in the temple of the LORD.

16 Since those days were, when one came to an heap of twenty measures, there were but ten: when one came to the press, it for to draw out fifty vessels out of the press, there were but twenty.

17 I smote you with blasting and with mildew and with hail in all the labours of your hands; yet ye turned not to me, saith the LORD.

18 Consider now from this day and upward, from the four and twentieth day of the ninth month, even from the day that the foundation of the LORD's temple was laid, consider it.

19 Is the seed yet in the barn? yea, as the second temple equal to Solomon's in outward glory and splendour, He could easily have made it so in that respect for silver and gold are His, and all the riches of the world are at His command: but He chose to put a far greater honour upon it than that of silver and gold, and to make it much more glorious in another respect: "the glory of this latter house shall be greater than of the former, (because) in this place I will give (the Messiah, the) peace, and happiness, and salvation of mankind, and incomparably the greatest blessing that ever was given to the world." Abp. Tillotson.

12, 13, 14 If one bear holy flesh &c. In like manner as holy flesh or any part of a sacrifice, will not make any thing else which it touches, to become holy, so neither have the sacrifices of this people, which have been all along offered since then leaving off the work of My temple, made them holy or acceptable unto God. But on the contrary, as the touch of an unclean person renders what he touches unclean also, so the very sacrifices of this people, since they have left off the building of My temple, are become unclean or unacceptable to me, by reason of that uncleanness or impurity of their minds, which has caused their neglect of My house. Dr. Wells.

15, 16 Consider from this day and upward, from before a stone was laid &c. From the time that a stop had been put to the building of the temple after the first foundations of it were laid, compare Ezra vi. 8. *W. 16 — an heap of twenty measures, That is: a heap of corn, which seemed likely to produce twenty measures, but which failed from the poverty of the soil. Abp. Newcome.

18 Consider now from this day and upward &c. Rather "forward." In the fifteenth vers. the Prophet exhorted them to reflect upon the calamities they had suffered from the time the building of the temple was left off. Now he bids them look forward from the day the building was renewed, and they would find a visible change in their affairs for the better. W. Lowth.

— from the day that the foundation of the Lord's temple was laid The Prophet speaks of the carrying on of the building as if it were a new foundation because the work had been so long interrupted. compare Zech. viii. 9. W. Lowth.

The proper application to be made of the prophecies concerning the Messiah, especially of the celebrated one in the early part of this chapter, is the very same with that which the Apostle makes from the consideration of the perfection and excellence of this revelation, which God hath made to the world by His Son. "See that ye refuse not Him that speaketh, &c." Heb xii 25—28. We have all the advantages of the Divine revelation which the world ever had, and the last and most perfect that the world ever shall have. we have not only Moses and the Prophets, but that doctrine, which the Son of God came down from heaven on purpose to declare to the world. God hath vouchsafed to us that clear and complete revelation of His will, which He denied to "many Prophets and kings, who desired to see those things which we see, but could not see them, and to hear those things which we hear but could not hear them." There were good men in the world under those imperfect revelations, which God made to them but we have far greater advantages, and more powerful arguments to be good than ever they had. And, as we ought thankfully to acknowledge these blessed advantages, so ought we likewise with the greatest care and diligence to improve them. Abp Tillotson

INTRODUCTION.

Z E C H A R I A H was one of the last in that succession of Prophets whom God sent at sundry times with notification of His will to mankind under the Jewish dispensation. That he was of the number of the captivity that returned from Babylon to Jerusalem in consequence of the decree of Cyrus is unquestionable, but that he was very young when he came thence appears from the fact, sixteen or seventeen years afterwards, when he had begun to exercise his prophetic function, he is styled 'a young man' (chap. i. 3). In his first chapter he twice styles himself Zechariah the son of Berechiah the son of Iddo, but Ezra vi. 14 he is called simply the son of Iddo, which may be accounted for on the supposition that his father Berechiah died before his grandfather Iddo's death before the return from Babylon, consequently out of the family Zechariah came to be better known and distinguished as the son of his surviving, though remote parent, in whose house he lived and to whose inheritance he was next in succession. It was in the eighth month of the second year of the reign of Darius the son of Hystaspes, king of Persia, that is, about the year 520 before the Christian era, that he first opened his Divine commission with a serious and solemn call to repentance. In the same year he is found together with the Prophet Haggai, employed in assisting the endeavours of Zerubbabel and Jeshua to excite and animate the people at Jerusalem to a vigorous prosecution of the work of rebuilding their temple. For this purpose he communicated the vision which are contained in the six first chapters, and which he was favoured with on the four and twentieth day of the eleventh month in the year aforesaid, all evidently calculated to inspire the strongest hopes and assurance of future prosperity through the returning favour of the Almighty, and thus to convince the people that they were not labouring on a barren and ungrateful soil. The same design is further carried on in a subsequent revelation made to him about two years afterwards, which is the subject of chap. vii. viii.

Thus far with regard to the former part of these prophecies, the time and occasion are ascertained by the dates annexed to them from whence the general scope of them is easily deducible. But with respect to those that follow, we are left more in the way of conjecture. It is however highly probable, from the apparent difference both of style and subject, that they came forth at a different and more advanced period of our Prophet's life. It is not at all surprising, if this writer, as he advanced in years and dignity should have begun to express himself in a tone of more elevation and energy. At such distant periods also, as we suppose the subject of course would be materially changed. For he would no longer have occasion to stimulate his countrymen to the building of the temple, which was already completely finished, but he was actually engaged in predicting some remarkable occurrences, that would distinguish his own and the neighbouring nations in remote periods, some of them perhaps not yet arrived, and in urging an immediate reformation of national manners. In so doing, what more natural to expect than that he would encounter hatred and opposition from those, whose corruptions he was called upon to censure and repress? Accordingly there is sufficient ground to conclude, that all this happened to him, from what he says in the eleventh chapter, of the freedom and zeal with which he exposed and counteracted the iniquitous conduct of those who made merchandise of the flock, meaning those unprincipled guides, who assumed the direction of the people for no better purpose than to sacrifice them to the gratification of their own ambition and avarice. Several of the prophets exhibiting in himself the contrast of a good shepherd, he found means at first to deprive, at least of that influence and authority which they once possessed, and had wickedly abused. The sequel may easily be conjectured, for from similar causes similar effects may naturally be expected. His enraged adversaries after thwarting and defeating all his endeavours for the public good, at length no doubt by intrigue and misrepresentation, so far succeeded, as to turn the tide of popular prejudice and resentment against him, and he was barbarously murdered, as his namesake Zechariah the son of Jehoiada had been for the same cause and in the same place between three and four hundred years before. For thus we have no less authority than that of our blessed Lord Himself who expressly calls the person of whom He speaks, Matt. xxiii. 35, "Zecharias son of Berechias" distinguishing him from the before mentioned Zechariah son of Jehoiada by his patronymick as effectually, as two men bearing the same Christian name in our days, would be distinguished by their family names. Both were priests as well as Prophets, and therefore that both should suffer nearly on the same spot will appear less surprising, when we recollect that the space between the porch and the altar was the court of the priests appropriated to them for the public exercise of their sacred ministry. Dr. Blayney

Zechariah who certainly collected his own prophecies into their present form, chap. i. 9. ii. 2, is mentioned as a Prophet by Ezra (chap. v. 1. vi. 14) and is cited as an inspired writer by the sacred penmen of the New Testament (Matt. xxi. 4. 5, xxvi. 31. xxvii. 9. Mark. xiv. 27. John. xii. 15, xix. 37, Ephes. iv. 25, Rev. i. 7). The minute accomplishment of his own illustrious prophecies bears a signal testimony to the truth of that infallible Spirit by which he was inspired. He was so distinguished for the peculiar excellency of his predictions, as to be styled the Sun among the lesser Prophets. It is, however, the sun sometimes clouded by obscurity. Dr. Gray

That he is in some degree obscure and hard to be understood, is not to be questioned. And which of the ancient Prophets is not so? It is of the nature of prophecy to affect a degree of abstruseness before the accomplishment, in order not to clash with the freedom of human agency. And there is no doubt, that some of Zechariah's predictions relate to matters that are still involved in futurity. No wonder then that these fall not within the reach of our comprehension. Others there are, which we have good reason to believe have already been fulfilled but which do not appear with such a degree of evidence as they probably would have done if we had been better informed concerning the time and facts to which they relate. With respect to the emblems and types that are exhibited they are most of them of easy and determinate application. And in favour of the importance of his subject matter it must be acknowledged, that, next to Isaiah, Zechariah is the most evangelical of all the Prophets, having more frequent and more clear and direct allusions to the character and coming of the Messiah and His kingdom than any of the rest. Upon the whole, we shall find the diction remarkably pure the construction natural and perspicuous and the style judiciously varied according to the nature of the subject, simple and plain in the narrative and historical parts but in those that are wholly prophetic, the latter chapters in particular, rising to a degree of elevation and grandeur, scarcely inferior to the sublime of the inspired writings. Dr. Blayney

The style of Zechariah is so remarkably similar to that of Jeremiah that the Jews were accustomed to observe, that the spirit of Jeremiah had passed into him. He is generally prosaic till towards the conclusion of his work, when he becomes more elevated and poetical. The whole work is beautifully connected by easy transitions and present and future scenes are blended with the most delicate contexture. Dr. Gray

IN the eighth month, in the second year of Darius, came the word of the LORD unto Zechariah, the son of Berechiah, the son of Iddo the prophet, saying,

2 The LORD hath been sore displeased with your fathers

3 Therefore say thou unto them, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, Turn ye unto me, saith the LORD of hosts, and I will turn unto you, saith the LORD of hosts

4 Be ye not as your fathers, unto whom the former prophets have cried, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, Turn ye now from your evil ways, and from your evil doings but they did not hear, nor hearken unto me, saith the LORD.

5 Your fathers, where are they? and the prophets, do they live for ever?

Chap I The six first verses of this chapter contain a separate and distinct revelation, but at the same time connected with the general purport of the following visions, to which it forms a suitable introduction. The Jews were dispirited with the recollection of their past sufferings, and a sense of their present weak and dependent state. The Divine wisdom thought meet to rally their courage, and animate them to the undertaking of what was necessary for the restoration of their affairs and particularly to a vigorous prosecution of the building of the temple already in hand by holding forth to them a prospect of better times. Accordingly, they are assured that God was now ready to restore them to favour and accumulate His blessings upon them, provided they would turn to Him, and not provoke His judgments, as their fathers had done, by wilful disobedience. Dr Blayney

Ver 1 In the eighth month,] Corresponding with the latter part of October, and the beginning of November. The work in the house of God had been already resumed this same year, on the twenty-fourth day of the sixth month, that is, the beginning of September in pursuance of a Divine message delivered by the Prophet Haggai, Hag 1, 15. Dr Blayney

6 Your fathers, where are they? &c.] The purport of these verses is this. Both your fathers, and the Prophets who prophesied unto them, are no more but though the parties themselves are dead, I appeal to you who are living and well know that the things which the Prophets were commissioned to deliver to your fathers in My name, did actually come upon them, and that your fathers then, though they would not at first believe and regard were at last convinced and acknowledged that God had dealt with them exactly according to His declared purpose. Dr Blayney

7 Upon the four and twentieth day &c.] The second revelation made to Zechariah about three months after the first contains eight distinct visions following each other in the same night.

The first vision is of an old man in human form sitting on horseback in a low valley among myrtle trees attended by others upon horses of different colours. The Prophet asks the meaning, and they returned and said, Like as the LORD of hosts thought to do unto us, according to our ways, and according to our doings, so hath he dealt with us

7 ¶ Upon the four and twentieth day of the eleventh month, which is the month Sebat, in the second year of Darius, came the word of the LORD unto Zechariah, the son of Berechiah, the son of Iddo the prophet, saying,

8 I saw by night, and behold a man riding upon a red horse, and he stood among the myrtle trees that were in the bottom, and behind him were there red horses, speckled, and white

9 Then said I, O my lord, what are these? And the angel that talked with me said unto me, I will shew thee what these be

10 And the man that stood among the myrtle trees answered and said, These are they whom the LORD hath sent to walk to and fro through the earth is informed that they were the ministers of Providence, sent to examine into the state of the whole earth, which they report to be quiet and tranquil. The angel hereupon intercedes for Judah and Jerusalem, which he represents to have suffered under the Divine indignation seventy years. He receives a consolatory answer. The Prophet is directed to proclaim, that God's wrath against Judah is at an end, that He would cause the temple and Jerusalem to be rebuilt, and would fill the country with good as a token and consequence of His renewed favour, ver 17—17 Dr Blayney behind him were there red horses,] With riders, who were angels. ver 11. They had horses to shew their power and celerity, and horses of different colours, to intimate the difference of their ministries. Abp Newcome, Dr Blayney

9 the angel that talked with me.] Distinct from those represented, ver 8. he who talked with the Prophet, ver 13. Abp Newcome. This was another heavenly minister, sent probably to present the visions to the Prophet's imagination, as well as to explain them. Vittinger styles him, The accompanying and interpreting angel. Dr Blayney

10 And the man that stood among the myrtle trees answered and said &c.] And the great Angel of the covenant, Christ Jesus, who stood among the myrtle trees, as taking the answer out of the mouth of that angel who spake to me, answered and said, These are ministering spirits, &c. Bp Hall

13 And the Lord answered the angel that talked with me with good words and comfortable words.

14 So the angel that communed with me said unto me, Cry thou, saying, Thus saith the Lord of hosts, I am jealous for Jerusalem and for Zion with a great jealousy,

15 And I am very sore displeased with the heathen that are at ease for I was but a little displeased, and they helped forward the affliction.

16 Therefore thus saith the Lord, I am returned to Jerusalem with mercies: my house shall be built in it, saith the Lord of hosts, and a line shall be stretched forth upon Jerusalem.

17 Cry yet, saying, Thus saith the Lord of hosts, My cities through prosperity shall yet be spread abroad, and the Lord shall yet comfort Zion, and shall yet choose Jerusalem.

— all the earth sitteth still, and is at rest.] Meaning the Persian empire and the other nations connected with Judea, which enjoyed peace at that time. But the state of the Jews was unsettled, see ver 16, which circumstance gives occasion to the following intercession. Abp Newcome

12 Then the angel of the Lord answered and said, O Lord of hosts, &c.] The angel, mentioned ver 9, makes his supplication to the superior Angel, ver 8 10, who was indeed the Logos, or Son of God, being called by the name of Jehovah here, and ver 13, 20. Compare in 1, 2, xii 8, 10. W Louth

13 And the Lord answered.] The Lord of hosts, mentioned in the foregoing verse. W Louth

15 — for I was but a little displeased, &c.] I made the Babylonians instruments of My vengeance upon the Jews, but they exceeded their commission, and acted as they were prompted by their own ambition and cruelty. Compare Is xlvii 6. W Louth

16 — a line.] That is, the architect's measuring line for laying out the building. See chap ii 1, Jer xxxi 39. Dr Blayney

17 — My cities through prosperity shall yet be spread abroad.] God having determined once more to adopt the cities of Judah for His own, very aptly calls them "My cities." The prosperity of the Jews under Sargon and others of the Assyrian family completely answers to this prediction. Dr Blayney

18 Then lifted I up mine eyes, &c.] In this second vision under the emblem of four horns is represented, that God, by such agents as He would appoint, would quell and bring down all those powers, which had risen, or should rise, to oppress His people. Horns are an usual emblem of strength and power, and because those fierce beasts, that have them, push and gore with them, and tossing them furiously about, scatter and drive all before them, they aptly denote conquering and oppressive princes

19 And I said unto the angel that talked with me, What be these? And he answered me, These are the horns which have scattered Judah, Israel, and Jerusalem.

20 And the Lord shewed me four carpenters.

21 Then said I, What come these to do? And he spake, saying, These are the horns which have scattered Judah, so that no man did lift up his head: but these we come to fray them, to cast out the horns of the Gentiles, which lifted up their horn over the land of Judah to scatter it.

To denote such as should "come to fray them, or frighten away the beasts with the horns, and to "cast out" or break to pieces "the horns of the Gentiles," that is, to take away their power, to cause them to cease from disturbing the Jews any more in the building of the temple. (Dr Wells) and to repair the mischief which the horns had made. Bp Hall, W Louth

Chap II This chapter contains the substance of a third vision, In conformity to what was said, ch i 16, "a line shall be stretched forth upon Jerusalem, a man, or an angel, appears with a measuring line in his hand, going as he says, to take the dimensions of Jerusalem in order to its being rebuilt according to its former extent which was afterwards done by Nehemiah. This is accompanied with a message delivered to the Prophet, shewing the great increase of her population and wealth, her perfect security under the Divine protection, recall of her exiles from the north country, and the punishment of those that had oppressed them, the return of God's presence to dwell in her, and the conversion of many heathen nations, and lastly, the reinstatement of Judah and Jerusalem in the full possession of all their ancient privileges. Dr Blayney

— Jerusalem shall be inhabited as towns without walls &c ] The inhabitants of Jerusalem will multiply so fast that the houses within the walls will not be able to contain them and their cattle will need a proportion see Jer xxxi 27 Under the captivity the land was made a desolation "without man and without beast" Jer xxxiii 12, now the contrary blessing is promised H Forth

But the prophecy was literally fulfilled we learn from the word of Josephus "For the city overflowing with multitudes by death crept beyond the walls and joining the northern parts of the temple to the hill, they advanced no small way, so that the fourth hill called Bezetha, was surrounded with buildings" Dr Blayney

For I — will be unto her a wall of fire &c ] This image strongly expresses the protection of the Deity It must have reminded the Jews of the pillar of fire, by which God directed and defended their ancestors The promise that the Lord "will be the glory in the midst of her," is an allusion to the symbol of the Divine presence in the holy of holies, Rom ix 4 Vitranga refers the literal completion of this prophecy to the time of the Maccabees but thinks that the protection and glory of the future Jerusalem may also be predicted Lev xx 9 Abp Newcome

This promise will receive its utmost completion in that "New Jerusalem" described Rev xxi 10 where the glory of God and the Lamb are said to be "the light thereof," ver 11, 23 Compare Is lx 10 H Forth

6 Ho, ho, come forth and flee from the land of the north, &c ] This beautiful apostrophe is addressed to such of the Jews as continued still to dwell in Babylon and the adjacent country lying north of Jerusalem, exhorting them not only to come, but to make their escape with all possible speed from a land, which God was about to make the scene of His vengeance Dr Blayney

8 For thus saith the Lord of hosts ] That is, the Messiah There is no part of Holy Scripture that more fully vindicates the confessions of our faith, which call upon us to acknowledge plurality of Persons in the Godhead than the very remarkable verse in this and the three next verses On the present verse see Jerome remarks "The voice of the Saviour speaking is introduced who the Almighty God, says that He is sent by the Almighty Father" And again citing the tenth and eleventh verses, which explain them "These things saith the Lord sent by the God who is the Almighty" The comment of Theodorici is also full and pointed "The Prophet has given us to understand not only that there are two Persons but also two Persons of the same nature" For thus saith the Lord of hosts After the Father has sent me and to shew who the Person sending is the Father and how that the Lord of hosts hath sent me I will direct the Person sending is the Lord of hosts and the Father is sent by the Lord of hosts and there is no difference of deity between them The explanation rests on the concurrent support of all the described theologies of antiquity who concur in the interpretation but be ascertained Dr Blayney

— the Lord of hosts hath sent me unto thee ] To send a person after any thing implies the requisition of his services for that particular purpose When therefore God is said to have sent His Angel "after the glory" He must be understood to have charged Him with the means of bringing it about Now the manner in which the Divine wisdom had devised for securing to His people "the glory" He had promised them, was by executing a severe vengeance on their oppressors, to manifest His concern for their honour and interest, and His resolution not to suffer their wrongs to pass off with impunity In pursuance of this plan and of the orders he had received, the Angel says he was about to "shake" his hand over the Babylonians, by whom the Jews had lately been oppressed, and to deliver them over as "a spoil to their (former) servants" And as this is given as a reason for summoning the Jews to quit that devoted country with all possible speed, that they might not be involved in the calamities which were coming upon it, so the Angel subjoins that when this came to pass according to His word it would be a convincing proof that Jehovah had sent Him Dr Blayney

— he that toucheth you toucheth the apple of his eye ] The highest expressions that language, assisted with all its helps of metaphor and resemblance, can afford are very languid and faint in comparison of what they strain to represent when the goodness of God toward them who love Him comes to be expressed See Ps xxxvi 6 ver 11, 13 So David strives to utter it but with similitudes far short of the truth If any will come near to reach it, it is that in Moses and Zechariah, where they who love God are compared to "the apple of God's eye," that is to the most dear and tender part, as it were, about Him Dr Isaac Barrow

9 For, behold, I will shake mine hand upon them, &c ] This is the hand of Jehovah Himself, and of the Lord of hosts Himself which is said, in one passage of Isaiah, to be "shaken over the river," Is xi 15, and in another, "over Egypt," Is xix 16 and no where else, except in the text, is the same form of expression used in holy writ Dr Huckerley

— they shall be a spoil to their servants ] As the Babylonians became to the Medes and Persians, who had been subdued, and reduced to subjection by Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon Abp Newcome, Dr Blayney

11 And many nations shall be joined to the Lord, &c ] Without excluding in allusion to these words to the coming in of the Gentiles to the Christian Church, the spiritual Zion, this prediction would be verified in earlier times not only by the conversion of the Idonites in the time of John Hyrcanus, but by many other proselytes to Judaism from the heathen nations Such were the religious proselytes spoken of as no inconsiderable number, in the Acts of the Apostles, chap ii 10 ver 4 Nicolas of Antioch the deacon chap vi 5 the treasurer of Candace queen of Ethiopia, chap xiii 27 Cornelius the centurion chap x 1, and such also perhaps were those Greeks mentioned John xii 20 Dr Blayney

— the Lord of hosts hath sent me unto thee ] It being here said that Jehovah, being sent by Jehovah should come and dwell in the Church, enlarged by the accession of the Gentiles, who can

<sup>He</sup> 13 Be silent, O all flesh, before the Lord: for he is raised up out of his holy habitation

Luke 1 75

7 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, If thou wilt walk in my ways, and if thou wilt keep my charge, then thou shalt also judge my house, and shalt also keep my courts, and I will give thee places to walk among these that stand by

8 Hear now, O Joshua the high priest, thou, and thy fellows that sit before thee for they are men wondered at for, behold, I will bring forth my servant the BRANCH

9 For behold the stone that I have laid before Joshua, upon one stone shall be seven eyes behold, I will engrave the graving thereof, saith the LORD of hosts, and I will remove the iniquity of that land in one day

10 In that day, saith the LORD of hosts, shall ye call every man his neighbour under the vine and under the fig tree

7 — then thou shalt also judge my house, &c. ] Then shalt thou, and thy sons after thee rule over My house as chief priest, and have the prime oversight and command of My courts, and at last I will give thee a place in everlasting glory, so that thou shalt walk gloriously in white among these blessed angels Bp Hall

8 — thou, and thy fellows that sit before thee ] The Angel here directs His speech to Joshua and his assessors or assistants in council, bespeaking their attention to what follows, as matter of great importance W Louth The fellows of Joshua, that sat before him, may have been some of those called chief priests, who, though subordinate to the high priest, were entitled by their rank to assist in his councils Dr Blayney

— for they are men wondered at ] The margin reads, “men of wonder the original word signifies not only a wonder, but likewise “a sign, or ‘a type,’ and so it is to be here understood Compare Is xx 3 viii 18, Ezek xii 6, 11, 12, xxiv 24 They are men intended for signs or tokens they are typical men, as Bp Hall very properly translates the phrase, men that foreshew something to come, according to the sense of the Latin Vulgate They, with Joshua the high priest at the head of them, are a figure of the restoration of the Church under the government of the Messiah W Louth

— behold, I will bring forth my servant the BRANCH ] Behold, I will exhibit unto the world Christ the Saviour, whom I have ordained to work that great business of mediation for My Church, whose visible presence shall grace that temple, which ye are now to build Bp Hall

The same Person must needs be intended here, as is spoken of under the same title, Jer xxii 5 nor can terms so magnificent as those used in the latter place more especially be applicable to any one of less consequence than the great Messiah Himself, through whom alone iniquity is put away, and the reign of perfect peace and righteousness is to be established Dr Blayney

The title of “the Branch” is often given to the Messiah as sprouting from the stock of David He is elsewhere called “our servant” in an eminent sense, because He was sanctified and sent into the world upon a message of the highest importance See Isaiah xlii 1 xlix 3, lii 13, liii 11, Ezek xxxiv 23, 24 W Louth

9 For behold the stone &c. ] In signification of which Saviour I have laid before Joshua a stone, to resemble Him who is the chief corner stone of His Church, whereon it shall be firmly built Bp Hall

— upon one stone shall be seven eyes ] To show My watchful providence over this and all other places devoted to My service and withal the wisdom and other graces which shall be eminent in the Messiah, the chief corner stone of all the mystical

— I will remove the iniquity of that land in one day ] I will proclaim a free pardon of sins by the publishing of the Gospel see Jer xxxi 34, or the words may relate to the pardoning of the Jews upon their general conversion compare chap xiii 1 Jer i 20, Mic vii 18, 19 W Louth

Or we may understand by “one day, that on which Christ died to put away sins by the offering of Himself Dr Blayney

10 — shall ye call every man his neighbour &c. ] The meaning of this passage is to shew the peace and security that should prevail in those happy days Mr Harmer supposes air hospitable custom to be here alluded to, of people enjoying themselves in rural repasts in the open air, and inviting those that passed by to partake with them in their pleasures Dr Blayney

Chap IV<sup>6</sup> In this chapter the Prophet is called upon to contemplate a fifth vision of the most sublime and mysterious import He sees a candlestick of pure gold, with its seven lamps communicating by seven pipes with a bowl at the top, which serves for a reservoir, and is constantly supplied with oil from two olive trees, standing one on each side of the candlestick He inquires into the meaning, and receives an answer, which though it may in some sort apply to the circumstances of the temple then in building, yet from the solemnity of the manner, and the terms in use, must be concluded to point to something far higher, no less than the final and complete establishment of Christ's holy Catholic Church, not by human means but by the power of the Holy Spirit, surmounting all obstacle thrown in its way Annexed is a special prediction that Zerubbabel, who had begun, should have the honour of finishing the material building of the temple, the accomplishment of which is made a sign or proof of the Divine mission The meaning of the seven lamps is then explained, and also of the two overhanging branches of the olive trees on each side of the candlestick Dr Blayney

Ver 1 — and waked me, ] It should seem as if the Prophet was plunged into a deep reverie, musing on what he had already seen when he was roused again by the angel to give his attention to what follows Dr Blayney

2 — with a bowl upon the top of it, ] To supply the lamps with oil, by seven conduits issuing from it to the seven lamps ranged in its front Abp Newcome

3 And two olive trees by it, ] Which in a secret unperceptible manner conveyed oil for supplying the lamps see ver 6. W Louth They probably signified the two sacred persons that had holy unction, the king and the priest, and might intimate that a prince and a priest should continue among the Jews till the time of the Messiah Dr Stokes See the note on ver 14

7 Who art thou, O great mountain? before Zerubbabel thou shalt become a plain and he shall bring forth the headstone thereof with shoutings, crying, Grace, grace, unto it

8 Moreover the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

9 The hands of Zerubbabel have laid the foundation of this house, his hands shall also finish it, and thou shalt know that the LORD of hosts hath sent me unto you

10 For who hath despised the day of small things? for they shall rejoice, and shall see the plummet in the hand of

Zerubbabel with those seven, <sup>Before</sup> <sup>CHRIST</sup> they are the eyes of the LORD, which run to and fro through the whole earth

11 Then answered I, and said unto him, What are these two olive trees upon the right side of the candlestick and upon the left side thereof?

12 And I answered again, and said unto him, What be these two olive branches which through the two golden pipes empty the golden oil out of themselves?

13 And he answered me and said, Knowest thou not what these be? And I said, No, my lord

14 Then said he, These are the two anointed ones, that stand by the LORD of the whole earth of seeing it carried into effect. Such persons would of course rejoice when the event turned out so contrary to their expectations. Dr. Blayney

— [the plummet] The use of the plummet is to try, after the stone is laid, whether it be in its just position. Dr. Blayney — [with those seven, they are the eyes of the Lord.] The Seventy translate the words to a better sense taking them for a distinct sentence from what goes before. These seven are the eyes of the Lord, &c. W. Lenth Here is an answer to the question, ver 4, "What are these?" These seven (lamps) are the eyes &c. an emblem of God's infinite providence and care which extends itself over all things, and especially over His own people. He then asks, "What are the olive trees?" Dr. Stokes

12 — olive branches] Young olives. See ver 5. W. Lenth Branches of the olive trees, bearing much fruit like an ear of corn. Abp. Newcome

— pipes] Or spouts, laid inclining from the olive trees to the bowl upon the top of the candlestick so as to receive the fluid from the trees, and pour it continually into the bowl to supply the waste. Dr. Blayney

— the golden oil] In the original "the gold." The liquor drawn from the olive trees must be oil, here on account of its precious quality denominated gold, which is considered the most valuable of all metals, but yet of far less worth than the word of Divine truth. See Ps. xix. 10, cxix. 72. Perhaps also the term may be used to signify the resemblance between oil, and gold in a fluid state. Dr. Blayney

14 — These are the two anointed ones that stand by the Lord of the whole earth.] Rather, before the Lord and minister to Him. See Deut. x. 8. 1 Kings. xxi. 1. W. Lenth Zerubbabel and Joshua may be meant who presided over the temporal and spiritual affairs of the Jews. were the ministers or viceregents of Jehovah and acted not by their own strength, but by the Divine assistance. ver 6. The golden candlestick is the Jewish state both civil and religious and the oil with which the lamps are supplied is the Spirit of God contradiistinguished from human efforts. Abp. Newcome

Or by the two olive trees are meant the two dispensations of the Law and the Gospel under which were communicated the precious oracles of Divine truth which illuminate the soul and make men wise unto salvation. Dr. Blayney

Chap V. The visions represented in this chapter are of a very different kind from the preceding ones. Hitherto all has been concerning, and meant to cheer the hearts of the Jewish people by holding

— Knowest thou not what these be? [apellus observes that he said, not to uphold the dulness of the Prophet but to excite his attention. Abp. Newcome

6 — This is the word of the Lord unto Zerubbabel.] The purport of the answer is. This building shalt thou be able to raise and to fit for My service not by any wealth or power of your own for who sees not how poor and weak your nation is at this time? but by My Spirit, with the Lord of hosts by the virtue and courage that I shall infuse into you and the means and aids that I shall raise up for you, while your own poor abilities contribute as little to the finishing of so great a work, as you are to the supply of oil for those lamps, which are fed by olive trees raised up miraculously by Me, on purpose for that intent. Dr. Stokes

It may be observed that the Prophet's question, "What are these?" is answered not by descending to an explanation of particulars but by giving the general purport of the vision, the sign being not to gratify a partial curiosity, but to comfort and encourage an almost desponding people by the assurance that God could, not by those human means in which they were sufficiently sensible of their own deficiency, but by His own Spirit, under His Church triumphant over all opposition. Dr. Blayney

7 Who art thou, O great mountain? &c.] Removing mountains, and levelling them into plains, are proverbial expressions denote the overcoming of the greatest difficulties, and the removing of all obstructions. See Is. xl. 4, Matt. xxi. 21. W. Lenth

— and he shall bring forth the headstone thereof with shoutings, &c.] He shall put the top or finishing stone upon the walls of the temple which action the standards-by shall accompany with their wishes and prayers, that God's grace and favour may extend that holy place, so happily finished, and with such joyful clamours as they used at laying its foundations, see 1. 2. 3. 11. W. Lenth

10 For who hath despised the day of small things? &c.] Why do ye O ye faithless Jews look so discontentedly on the mean foundations of this temple, and weep to think of that goodly structure of Solomon's compared with this? There shall be no use of this disparagement. Ye shall rather find reason to rejoice in this noble work, which ye see Zerubbabel in hand to finish, &c. Bp. Hall

By the day of small things I suppose to be meant the time, when the resources of the Jewish nation appeared in the eyes of any, even well-wishers, so small and inadequate to the building the temple, against a powerful opposition, that they despaired

<sup>Before</sup> CHRIST THEN I turned, and lifted up mine eyes, and looked, and behold a flying roll

2 And he said unto me, What seest thou?

And I answered, I see a flying roll; the length thereof is twenty cubits, and the breadth thereof ten cubits

3 Then said he unto me, This is the curse that goeth forth over the face of the whole earth: for every one that stealeth shall be cut off as on this side according to it, and every one that sweareth shall be cut off as on this side according to it

4 I will bring it forth, saith the Lord of hosts, and it shall enter into the house of the thief, and into the house of him that sweareth falsely by my name: and it shall remain in the midst of his house, and shall consume it with the timber thereof and the stones thereof

5 ¶ Then the angel that talked with me went forth, and said unto me, Lift up now thine eyes, and see what is this that goeth forth

6 And I said, What is it? And he said, This is an ephah that goeth forth. He said moreover, This is their resemblance through all the earth

7 And, behold, there was lifted up a talent of lead, and this is a woman that sitteth in the midst of the ephah

8 And he said, This is wickedness. And he cast it into the midst of the ephah, and he cast the weight of lead upon the mouth thereof

9 Then lifted I up mine eyes, and looked, and, behold, there came out two women, and the wind was in their wings, for they had wings like the wings of a stork, and they lifted up the ephah between the earth and the heaven forth to them prospects of approaching prosperity. But lest they should grow presumptuous and careless of their conduct, it was thought proper to warn them of the conditions on which their happiness would depend, and to let them see, that however God was at present disposed to shew them favour, His judgments would speedily fall upon them with still greater weight than before, if they should again provoke Him by repeated wickedness. Accordingly in the first of these visions, which was the sixth in succession, the Prophet is shewn an immense roll of a book, like that which Ezekiel describes, chap. ii. 9, 10, filled with curses, and in the act of flying to denote the celerity and speed as well as the certainty with which the thief and false swearer who might otherwise flatter themselves with hopes of impunity, would be visited to their utter destruction. The next vision presents the appearance of an ephah or measure in which sat a woman representing a nation whose wickedness was arrived at such a height as required an immediate check. Accordingly a heavy cover is cast upon her, and she is carried into exile in a distant land there to abide the full time allotted for her punishment. Dr. Blayney

Ver. 2 — a flying roll ] The roll of a book, as it is expressed in xxxvi. 2. Ezek. ii. 9 the ancient way of writing being upon long scrolls of parchment. These scrolls were usually longer than they were broad, so this is represented as ten yards in length, and five in breadth. W. Lenth. The roll was very ample to shew what a number of curses should come upon the wicked. Abp. Newcome

3 — This is the curse that goeth forth over the face of the whole earth ] Or, rather of the whole land, meaning the land of Judaea. The roll contained the curses that is the judgments pronounced against the Jews who were guilty of the sins here specified. It was written on both sides, as the roll mentioned Ezek. ii. 10. On one side were contained the judgments against the king, on the other those against false swearing. W. Lenth.

4 — it shall enter into the house of the thief, &c. ] The curse denounced in this roll shall take hold of the man and his family, and shall never leave them till they are utterly consumed. It shall be like the leprosy that infects the house, and cannot be purged till the house itself be pulled down. See Lev. xiv. 45. W. Lenth.

5 — And he cast it into the midst of the ephah, &c. ] To signify that when a people have filled up the measure of their iniquity, they sink under the weight of their sins, and cannot escape the judgment of God. W. Lenth.

9 — And he cast it into the midst of the ephah, &c. ] These may probably signify the empires of Assyria and Babylon. Empires and kingdoms are sometimes described as having wings, to denote the swiftness of their conquests. See Deut. xxxiii. 49, Jer. xlix. 2, Hos. vii. 1. W. Lenth. Or the circumstances may indicate nothing more particular, than that Providence would make use of quick and forcible means to effect its purpose. The stork like other birds of passage, is provided with strong wings. Dr. Blayney sweater, says Capellus are put for every kind of transgressor. Abp. Newcome. Among the Jews an oath was tendered to him that was suspected of theft. See Lev. vi. 2. For this reason the thief and the perjured person are here put together. Abp. Lathrop

5 — Then the angel — went forth ] Or “went on.” W. Lenth. Or advanced onward to see the object which presented itself at a distance. Abp. Newcome

— what is this that goeth forth ] That is now represented unto thee is passing forth before thee. Bp. Hall

6 — This is an ephah ] The vessel here mentioned resembled the common ephah which was about the size of our bushel, not in size but in figure. Dr. Wells. The extraordinary measure of the vessel corresponds with the iniquities that prevailed in the land. Dr. Blayney

— This is their resemblance through all the earth ] Or through all the land. By this you may make an estimate of their unjust dealings all the land over, compare ver. 3 & 4. An ephah, being the dry measure among the Jews denotes their unjust dealings in buying and selling. See Amos viii. 5. W. Lenth.

7 — And behold there was lifted up a talent of lead, &c. ] And behold there was also represented unto me a laden weight, and withal a woman sitting in the midst of the ephah. Bp. Hall. The margin correctly gives the sense, “a weighty piece of lead — and this is a woman that sitteth in the midst of the ephah.”

Or, “And, behold, there was a woman sitting in the midst of the ephah.” Dr. Wells. Or these words may be the angel’s explanation of the vision, What thou seest besides is a woman in the midst of or with in the ephah. W. Lenth.

8 — And he said This is wickedness ] The woman represented the wicked Jews of whom the angel said. These are so wicked that they are as wickedness itself. Bp. Hall

— And he cast it into the midst of the ephah, &c. ] To signify that when a people have filled up the measure of their iniquity, they sink under the weight of their sins, and cannot escape the judgment of God. W. Lenth.

9 — And he cast it into the midst of the ephah, &c. ] These may probably signify the empires of Assyria and Babylon. Empires and kingdoms are sometimes described as having wings, to denote the swiftness of their conquests. See Deut. xxxiii. 49, Jer. xlix. 2, Hos. vii. 1. W. Lenth. Or the circumstances may indicate nothing more particular, than that Providence would make use of quick and forcible means to effect its purpose. ### CHAP VI

1 The vision of the four chariots. 9 By the crowns of Joshua is shown the temple and kingdom of Christ the Branch.

AND I turned, and lifted up mine eyes, and looked, and, behold, there came four chariots out from between two mountains, and the mountains were mountains of brass.

2 In the first chariot were red horses, and in the second chariot black horses, the remainder of the Jews and made an entire riddance of the people of the land. H. Lenth

11 And he said unto me, To build it on house in the land of Shinar, &c. [On 1 To build her, that is the woman, in house, &c.] The design of the vision is to instruct the Jews that as their fathers were carried into a seventy year captivity to Babylon, if their posterity should not take warning, by their punishment, worse captivity should befall them, one of so long continuance, should make them despair of ever returning home, and resolve to settle themselves in those countries where they were dispersed. This is expressed by removing them to Babylon, which was a proverbial expression for utter ruin and desolation. H. Lenth

The meaning of the vision seems to be that the Babylonian captivity had happened on account of the wickedness committed by the Jews, and that a like dispersion would befall them if they relapsed into the like crimes. Thus the whole chapter will be an awful admonition that multiplied curses, and particularly dispersion and captivity would be the punishment of national guilt. H. Lenth

Chap VI. The main design and purport of the sixth and last vision contained in the former part of this chapter was to confirm the Jews in their faith and dependence upon God, by shewing them that weak and defenceless as they seemed to be, they had nothing to fear from the greatest earthly powers, whilst they remained under the Divine protection, since all those powers originally proceeded from the counsels of the Almighty, were the instrument of His providence, and could not subvert nor act but under His permission. Four chariots drawn by horses of different colours represent the four great empires of the world in succession, the Assyrian or Babylonian, the Persian, Grecian, and Roman, distinguished both by their order and by their attributes. The first is only enumerated, and nothing more said of it, having already run its career. The second is characterized by going forth against the land of the north. The third by going forth against the posterity of the preceding. And the fourth whose horses were spotted and strong by their conquest in the south. The cars are also said to be ambitious, soliciting and obtaining permission to extend their dominion far and wide. They could not also send to have already executed God's judgments upon the land of the north.

After this the Prophet is favoured with another revelation respecting a kingdom different from all the preceding. By God's command in the presence of witnesses, and for a memorial to them, he places a crown or crown upon the head of Joshua the high priest, thereby constituting him a type of Christ, the Branch, whom he proclaims about to come to build the spiritual temple of Jehovah, and to preside over it both as King and Priest for the great purpose of peace. The reason of our bringing in to assist in building the temple is to shew and give it as a proof of the Prophet's divine mission. Dr Blayney

3 And in the third chariot white horses, and in the fourth chariot grided and bay horses.

4 Then I answered and said unto the angel that talked with me, What are these, my lord?

5 And the angel answered and said unto me, These are the four spirits of the heaven, which go forth from standing before the Lord of all the earth.

6 The black horse, which goeth forth into the north country, and the white go forth after them, and the grided go forth toward the south country.

7 And the bay went forth, and sought to go that they might walk to and fro through

Ver 1. — four chariots.] A chariot is in the night vision of government, but a chariot of war very quickly presents a conquering nation ruling furiously over and over the world. It is such were the four formidable empires here named. Dr Blayney

The two barren mountains move to God's throne and in a table deities by which He governs the earth. H. Lenth
2. — red horses, &c.] The red horses may signify the bloody cruelties of the Babylonian empire, especially toward the Jews, the black the sad and mournful state of the Jews under the Persian successors of Cyrus, the white the victories of Alexander (white horses being used by conquerors in days of triumph) and his kindness towards the Jews, and the grided the various forms of the Roman government. H. Lenth
3. — probably the colours of the horses design no more than the diversity of the people, of whom the four empires respectively consisted, not any characteristic quality belonging to them. Dr Blayney

4. — bay horses.] On strong horses, as the Latin Vulgate renders the word H. Lenth. This sense is preferable because the Roman empire here designed is characterized by Daniel chap vii 7, 19, 23 as more strong and powerful than any of the preceding. Dr Blayney

5. — These are the four spirits of the heavens, &c.] Pathos, it is in the margin, agreeably to the Greek and Latin version.

four winds. Compare Dan vii 2. Like strong winds the chariots rushed violently on, and produced great agitations and commotions in the earth, the effect of strong winds both by land and by sea. And these winds are said to go forth from attending upon the Lord of the whole earth, that is they waited His pleasure and went forth like ministers fulfilling His word, Ps cxlviii 8. Dr Blayney

6. The black horses — go forth into the north country.] Denoting the conquests of the Persians over the Babylonians, often expressed by the north in the Prophets. The angel says nothing of the red horses, because the Babylonian empire was at an end. H. Lenth

— the white go forth after them.] Alexander and his successors go forth to conquer the Persians. H. Lenth

— the grided go forth toward the south country.] Thus probably denoting the Roman conquests in Egypt frequently called the south country in Scripture. This was the last country subdued by the Romans under Augustus, whereby they became masters of the greatest part of the then known world. H. Lenth

7. And the bay went forth, and sought to go, &c.] The ambition of the Romans is here described, who under the Divine permission extended their conquests to every quarter of the globe. In the preceding verse it is said of the black horses, in the present case that they go forth, where is the picture used of the white and the grided in the one and the other do not that the bay went forth. To account for this difference.

pass in our time, but the former words were spoken by the angel who explains what was passing at the instant. But the latter is the Prophet's relation of what appeared to him afterwards.

 8 - Behold these that go toward the north country have quieted my spirit, &c.] The Persians by conquering the Babylonians, have appeased My wrath by executing upon them that vengeance which they have deserved for their cruelty towards My people. W. Lenth

The foregoing exposition is given according to the prevailing sense of our commentators. Poole who recites several interpretations appears to incline to that which understands the four spirit of the heavens, ver 5 to signify angels, who have as ministers of Divine Providence a great share in the management of affairs both of church and state, and which considers the vision in general as a representation of these servants of the Lord acting then part in the revolutions and changes of things, be these of what temper, over they may till the Gospel be preached by the Messiah and His Apostles. His remark upon the whole of the vision is judicious, and well worthy of attention. The appearance or emblem is plain enough, we can easily conceive that but the things signified hereby are most difficultly found out, and perhaps not found when we think they are here then at any where, all are bound to write modestly, and all are bound to read carefully, and to judge candidly. F. del

10 Take of them of the captivity, &c.] The exiles who remained in Babylon showed their regard for the temple then building, by sending their gifts and oblations to Jerusalem for carrying on the work, and adorning the temple after it was built. These offerings they sent by the persons here named, as they did the words by Ezra and his companions, see Ezra vii 16, viii 16. W. Lenth

11 Take silver and gold, and make crowns, &c.] Rather than take the silver and the gold, &c. A plate or crown of gold was once placed upon the mitre of the high priest, Lev. xvi 8, xix 6, Lev. xvi 9. Two such crowns were ordered to be made, and to be placed upon the head of the high priest, and the Messiah. The BRANCH spoken of in this vision, of whom both were a type, should be both a King, and Priest, and should have a right to wear the crown, be it by the law, or by the promise. W. Lenth

12 And speak unto him, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, saying, Behold the man whose name is The BRANCH. See in the person of the high priest the type or representation of the Man who is the Christ that shall be revealed in the latter days, and in the person of the high priest the type or representation of the Man who is the Christ that shall be revealed in the latter days, and in the person of the high priest the type or representation of the Man who is the Christ that shall be revealed in the latter days. W. Lenth his head. The passage will not answer to any other but to Him who was at once both King and Priest, and by uniting both characters in Himself was completely qualified to bring about the counsel of peace or reconciliation between God and man. Dr. Blayney

— he shall build the temple of the Lord.] The Church of Christ is expressly called the temple of God, 1 Cor. iii 16, 2 Cor. vi 16, a spiritual house, 1 Pet. ii 5, &c. Dr. Blayney

13 Even he shall build the temple of the Lord.] This clause is highly emphatical, implying that even He the selfsame Person who should build the temple of Jehovah, even He should have the honour of governing and presiding in it, as both King and Priest in both capacities advancing the peace and prosperity of His people. Dr. Blayney

— and he shall bear the glory.] That is the honour and authority belonging to a sovereign or chief ruler. So when Moses was directed to give up his command and authority to Joshua, it is said, And thou shalt put some of thine honour upon him, Numb. xxi 10. And in this sense Christ was to receive glory, see Ps. xxi. Dan. vii 14, Acts iii 13, v 31, Phil. ii 9—11, Heb. i 9. He was to be exalted to the right hand of God there to sit upon His throne as a King governing His Church, and as a Priest making intercession continually for it. It is impossible not to see that this prophecy was completed in Christ, so as it never could be in any other person. Dr. Blayney

— and the counsel of peace shall be between them both.] The kingdom and priesthood being united in the same Person, there shall be no clashing of jurisdiction between the two offices. W. Lenth

14 And the crowns shall be to Helem, &c.] And those crowns shall be kept and hung up in the temple of the Lord, a memorial and monument of the liberal offering made by Helem and Tobijah, &c. (Bp. Hall) and of the use, for which they had been made. W. Lenth Dr. Well. If the crowns after having been placed on the head of Joshua were deposited in a conspicuous part of the temple, they would continually remind the person present of the prediction which they would of course communicate to others. Dr. Blayney

Helem was probably the same person as Heldai, and Hen is Josiah, such variety of names belonging to the same person may be often observed in the books of Kings and Chronicles. W. Lenth

15 And they that are far off shall come, &c.] This is a plain prediction of the coming in of the Gentiles, whom St. Paul expressly calls those who were far off, Eph. ii 13, to build, or constitute a part of the Christian Church. Dr. Blayney

— And they shall come to pass, &c.] And ye of the Jews

Chap VII. In this chapter is contained a third and distinct revelation made to Zechariah about two years after the former of which the occasion and matter are as follows. A considerable progress having by this time been made in the rebuilding of the temple and affairs going on pretty smoothly the hope of the Jewish nation began to revive, and a deputation was sent to enquire of the priests and the Prophets whether it was God's will that they should still continue to observe the fast which had been instituted on account of the city and the temple. As may be seen by what the Children of Israel thus the Prophet directed to reply that the Lord and another fast of the like kind being of their own appointment regarded them only and not God: that what He required of them was the practice of moral righteousness which He had enjoined it to their fathers who disregarding His injunction, had brought upon themselves and upon their country all the evil which they had recently experienced.

Having thus accounted for God's past severity the Prophet in the following chapter goes on to inform them that the anger of Jehovah was now appeased and He was again disposed to be gracious unto His people and to restore Jerusalem. He exhorts them therefore to proceed vigorously with the building of the temple, and assures them that they would from that time experience a happy revolution in their affairs. He renews his exhortation unto the practice of moral goodness and promises them on that condition their fasts should be turned into joyful feasts and they should be so distinguished by the Divine favour that many nations would be eager to embrace their religion and sue for their alliance. Dr Blayney

— When ye fasted &c ] When ye fasted and mourned both in the fifth month for the temple and in the seventh for the murder of Gedaliah 2 Kings xxv 25 and ye do this even all these seventy years, out of any charge of Mine or did ye it out of any true remorse for those sins of yours which drew down the judgments upon you, and not rather out of a sense of your own misery and sorrow? And, on the contrary when on your other solemn festivals ye did eat and drink and make merry was it out of my spiritual joy which ye had in Me and My service and not rather for your own pleasure and jollity? Bp Hall The sense of these two verses is much the same with that of St Paul 1 Cor viii 5 namely, that eating or abstaining from meat is in its own nature indifferent: nor is it acceptable to God any further than it is subservient to the true ends of religion.

The Prophet first reproveth the hypocrisy of their fasts before he gives them a direct answer to the question proposed. This he does chap viii 10. W. Lenth

7 Should ye not hear the words &c ] Oh are not these the words I in the margin He puts them in mind of the exhortations given to them by the Prophets before the captivity. *W. Did not the former Prophets make the like declarations concerning the inefficacy of your external observances? cc lxxviii 1 &c It may also refer to the ninth verse. And did not the former Prophets insist on the superior excellence of moral duties? see Amos v 21 Micah vi 8 &c Ibp Newcome

<sup>1</sup> The restoration of Jerusalem. <sup>9</sup> They are encouraged to it by God's favour to them. <sup>16</sup> Comfort is given to them. <sup>18</sup> Joy and edification are promised.

<sup>3</sup> Thus saith the LORD, I am returned unto Zion, and will dwell in the midst of Jerusalem: and Jerusalem shall be called a city of truth, and the mountain of the LORD of hosts the holy mountain.

<sup>5</sup> And the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof.

<sup>6</sup> Thus saith the LORD of hosts, It is marvellous in the eyes of the remnant of this people in these days, should it also be marvellous in mine eyes? saith the LORD of hosts.

<sup>7</sup> Thus saith the LORD of hosts, Behold, I will save my people from the east country, and from the west country;

<sup>8</sup> And I will bring them, and they shall <sup>Before CHRIST 16</sup> dwell in the midst of Jerusalem: and they shall be my people, and I will be their God, in truth and in righteousness.

<sup>9</sup> ¶ Thus saith the LORD of hosts, Let your hands be strong, ye that hear in these days these words by the mouth of the prophets, which were in the day that the foundation of the house of the LORD of hosts was laid: that the temple might be built.

<sup>10</sup> For before these days there was no law for man, nor any law for beast, neither was there any peace to him that went out or came in because of the affliction: for I set all men every one against his neighbour.

<sup>11</sup> But now I will not be unto the residue of this people as in the former days, saith the LORD of hosts.

<sup>12</sup> For the seed shall be plentiful, the vine shall give her fruit, and the fig and the olive shall give her increase, and the heavens shall give their dew, and I will cause the remnant of this people to possess all these things.

<sup>13</sup> And it shall come to pass, that as ye were a curse among the heathen, O house of Judah, and house of Israel, so will I save you, and ye shall be a blessing: for ye are not, but let your hands be strong.

<sup>14</sup> For thus saith the LORD of hosts, I thought to punish you when you fathers provoked me to wrath, saith the LORD of hosts, and I repented not.

<sup>15</sup> So again have I thought in these days to do well unto Jerusalem, and to the house of Judah: fear ye not.

<sup>8</sup> — in truth and in righteousness ] These words apply equally to God and His people: and imply that they shall on both sides truly and faithfully perform the conditions of the covenant once more renewed between them. Dr. Blayney

<sup>9</sup> — ye that hear in these days &c ] The day stand opposed to the day that the foundation of the house of the LORD of hosts was laid: which was two years before. And the people are exhorted to proceed vigorously with the building, inasmuch as they now heard repeated by the mouth of the Prophet the same thing which had prevailed on them at first to engage in it. Dr. Blayney

<sup>10</sup> — there was no law for man ] Rather, there was no reward for man &c. The fruits of the earth would not pay the labour of those who sowed it. See Hag. i. 9—11. ii. 16. Dr. Blayney

— neither was there any peace &c ] The adversaries of the Jews ceased not to molest them from without. Ezek. ix. 1, &c. and civil dissension at times prevailed within. Dr. Blayney

<sup>11</sup> — O house of Judah and house of Israel ] The mention both of Judah and of Israel, which had been so long separated, shows that both the curse and the blessing here spoken of in the ultimate sense of the prophecy, belong to the whole body of the Jews. Dr. Blayney

<sup>16</sup> — These are the things that ye shall do &c ] The promises here made to the Jews are conditional, and the performance of them is made to depend upon their observing the rules of justice

[ Chap. VIII ver. — a city of truth ] Jerusalem shall be again the seat of truth and justice, her magistrates being restored to exercise their authority. Dr. Blayney Rather, 'the city of truth' the truth by way of eminence, or the true religion. Dr. Blayney Jerusalem was to be celebrated in future as the city in which the true religion particularly was professed, as the mountain of the LORD of hosts, meaning the mountain of the temple, as to be for the residence of the Most Holy One. Dr. Blayney

<sup>6</sup> — It is marvellous in the eyes of the remnant of this people in these days, should it also be marvellous in mine eyes? saith the LORD of hosts. ] And do not stultify it, saith the LORD, that, for though the thing seem strange and wonderful, it is not so, for the remnant of this poor remnant of the people, who have returned out of the land of their captivity, yet it is not so, for it is impossible to Me, saith the LORD of hosts. Dr. Blayney

<sup>7</sup> — Behold, I will save my people &c ] This denotes the general restoration of the Jewish nation from their captivity, and the restoration of the people to the land of their fathers. Dr. Blayney

The words 'I will save my people' are particularly related to the present dispersion, and the restoration of them to the land of their fathers. Dr. Blayney The words 'Behold, I will save my people' are particularly related to the present dispersion, and the restoration of them to the land of their fathers. Dr. Blayney do, 'Speak ye every man the truth to his neighbour: I execute the judgment of truth and peace in your gates.

17 And let none of you imagine evil in your hearts against his neighbour, and love no false oath: for all these are things that I hate, saith the Lord.

18 And the word of the Lord of hosts came unto me, saying,

19 Thus saith the Lord of hosts, The fast of the fourth month, and the fast of the fifth, and the fast of the seventh, and the fast of the tenth, shall be to the house of Judah joy and gladness, and cheerful feasts; therefore love the truth and peace.

20 Thus saith the Lord of hosts, It shall yet come to pass, that there shall come people, and the inhabitants of many cities.

21 And the inhabitants of one city shall go to another saying, Let us go, let speedily to pray before the Lord, and to seek the Lord of hosts: I will go also.

22 Yet, in my people and strong nations shall come to seek the Lord of hosts in Jerusalem, and to pray before the Lord.

23 Thus saith the Lord of hosts, In those days it shall come to pass, that ten men shall take hold out of all languages of the nations, even shall take hold of the skirt of him that is a Jew saying, We will go with you: for we have heard that God is with you.

and righteousness which God commanded their fathers by the prophet: and the weightier matters of the law, and now again enjoined upon them. See chap. vi. 9, 10. W. Louth

19. — The fast of the fourth month &c.] Beside the two fasts mentioned chap. vii. 3, the Jews observed two others: that of the fourth month, when Jerusalem was taken Jer. li. 6, 7, and that of the tenth month, when the Babylonians began the siege Jer. li. 4. In answer to the question proposed chap. vi. the prophet here tells them that they may now disuse these fasts, and lay aside the mournful circumstances with which they were solemnized: into the judgment, which occasioned them, were changed. W. Louth

— Therefore love the truth and peace.] God's value in upright order is more than the exact observance of outward performances. See ver. 16. and the note on chap. vii. 9. The instruction, repeated men's minds for receiving the Gospel: the laws of which chiefly commend purity of heart and life. See Jer. xxxi. 1. W. Louth

21. — And two or three of one city shall go &c.] These expressions allude to the Jews going up in companies to Jerusalem at their solemn feasts. Compare Isa. ii. 2, 3. Micah. ii. 13. W. Louth

23. — Ten men.] A certain number for an army. See the note on Mic. v. 4. W. Louth

— shall take hold of the skirt.] Mr. Harmer, having observed that it was customary in the East to kiss the hem of the garment of a person of rank, and especially when a favour was asked, or granted, adds that ten men taking hold of the skirt or gown, is to be understood as an application of the most submissive kind, to be taken under his protection or received among his dependents. That it was a mode of humble oblation, is evident from 1 Sam. xv. 27, and like that of embracing the knee, and laying hold on the feet, it was the natural posture of an importunate suitor, who would seem to say thereby, I will not let thee go except thou blest me. Dr. Playm.

Thus and the three foregoing verses refer to some measure to the great accession of converts, which the Jewish church received between the captivity and the coming of Christ: but principally to the number of Christian disciples, which the Jewish priests made, and perhaps to the future conversion of which the restoration of the Jews will be an eminent cause. H. p. Newcome

Chap. IX. This chapter begins with a nouncing the fate of the Syrians, Sidonians, and Philistines, contrasted with the better prospects of the Jewish nation. It foretells the coming of the Messiah to Jerusalem, and the peace of His kingdom. The restoration of Israel, and Judah, afterwards predicted, together with a crisis of glorious victory, and great prosperity, which are forth at large in this and the next chapter. Dr. Playm.

Ver. 1. The burden of the word of the Lord in the land of Hadrach.] The burden of the word of the Lord is a burden, or prophecy threatening ruin and destruction. See Jer. xxi. 4. Nahum. i. 1. Hadrach is not elsewhere mentioned, is the name of a country: the context shews it to be some part of Syria. W. Louth — and Damascus shall be the rest thereof.] God in verses on those whom He punishes. Ezek. xvi. 56. xxvi. 1. And His rod upon Him rest upon His enemies. P. xxxv.

Is. xxx. 32. Abp. Newcome. The land of Hadrach and Damascus is here said to be the place on which the burden of calamity was to rest, or settle: that is, the land would still continue to be visited by the like calamities as it had before undergone, or under English power, as prophesied by Isaiah, cxi. 11, and Amos, chap. i. 3-5, and again under Syrian violence. Jer. xli. 3. Dr. Playm.

— when the eyes of men, as of all the tribes of Israel, shall be toward the Lord.] This plainly implies that a time would come when men, and the tribe of Israel, particularly, would turn their eyes toward Jehovah, and look up to Him, as their source of deriving some blessing from Him, or in a attitude of respect received. But the scope of the prophecy goes to shew that even at that time, though devoted to Him, had no proper, or owing, the burden would still rest or settle upon them. Dr. Playm.

2. — And Hamath also shall border there: by Tyre, and Zidon, though it be very wise.] Hamath, though it be very wise, shall be free therefrom: not Tyre, and Zidon, though they be crafty and subtle enough to use all human art, yet and with their own acts and evil, and though Tyre have built her hold, for her defence, she have heaped up great treasure of wealth. B. p. Hall

3. — And Tyre shall be as the land of the East &c.] Tyre was the most celebrated place in the world for trade and commerce, the most of nations conveyed the commodities of the East to the West, and of the West to the East. B. p. Newcome

4 Behold the Lord will cast her out &c ] Ezekiel had likewise foretold that the city should be consumed by fire, chap xxviii 18. And accordingly Alexander besieged and took and set the city on fire. The ruins of old Tyre contributed much to the taking of the new city for with the stones and timber and rubbish of the old city Alexander built a bank or causeway from the continent to the island thereby literally fulfilling the words of Ezekiel they shall lay thy stones and thy timber and thy dust in the midst of the water chap xxxi 12. Bp Newton

5 Ashkelon shall see it &c ] The cities of the Philistines, Ashkelon, Gaza, and Ekron shall be very much terrified at the news of Tyre's destruction whence they hoped for succours against the enemy. W Lenth

— the king shall perish from Gaza ] By the title of “king” my chief ruler may be designed, so that the plain purport of the passage is that Gaza should cease to enjoy the benefit of civil government. Accordingly Gaza, having suffered severely on being taken by Alexander the Great was at length totally ruined and destroyed by Alexander Jannæus, one of the Asmonean kings of Judea so that we find it spoken of in Acts viii 26, by the name of Gaza which is desert. Dr Blayney

— Ashdod shall not be inhabited ] Ashkelon and the other cities of the Philistines having been subjugated by Nebuchadnezzar as foretold by Jeremiah chap xlviii, never recovered their former independency but falling under the dominion of the great empires in succession were almost continually involved in their wars and suffered considerably till by degrees they dwindled away, and at last sunk to nothing. Zephaniah's prophecy, chap ii 1—7, extends to this. Dr Blayney

6 And a bastard shall dwell in Ashdod, &c ] The word, rendered bastard, does not here imply an illegitimate offspring but simply one of foreign extraction. So that it is meant, that the city should be peopled with strangers, not descended from its present possessors. Ashdod, or Azotus, was burned and destroyed by Jonathan, brother of Judas Maccabeus, and eight thousand of its men burned or slain 1 Mac x 84 85. These were probably what was meant by the pride of the Philistine the prime or excellency of the ancient inhabitants, in whose room the strangers were introduced. Dr Blayney

7 And I will take away his blood out of his mouth, &c ] This idolatrous and abominable practice of the Philistines shall cease. The metaphor is taken from beasts of prey, who gorge themselves with blood. Bp Vencom

At what time or whence the new colony was brought to dwell in Ashdod we are not informed. But some years after in the reign of Alexander Jannæus Azotus is enumerated by Josephus among the cities of the Phenicians which the Jews had been some time possessed of and it is well known that that people excelled of all that were in their dominion in conformity to a certain degree at least to their religious rites and usages. This will serve to explain what is here meant by “taking his blood out of his mouth” and his abominations from between his teeth. The stranger was required to abstain from eating blood and from such things as were held in abomination by the Jewish law. Dr Blayney

— but he that remaineth even he, shall be for our God, &c ] Those that remain of them shall be conscientiously devoted to God and shall become friends and patrons of My people within My Church yea even those of Ekron shall so have a part in My Church is the Jebusite hath in the material and outward Jerusalem. Bp Hall

To be as a governor in Judah means to be regarded and honoured. The Jebusites were inhabitants of Jerusalem, Judges i 21. Josephus informs us that many of the Philistines became proselytes to Judaism, and particularly the cities of Gaza and Ashdod. Bp Vencom

8 And I will encamp about mine house &c ] Amid the foregoing revolutions and alterations of affairs in the world God here promises to preserve His temple while so many castles and strongholds about Jerusalem were overturned so many cities swept of their inhabitants by the besom of destruction. Bp Horne

— for now have I seen with mine eyes ] Mine eye has perceived future events and I have thus determined. Bp Vencom Or I have looked on the condition of My people with an eye of pity and compassion. W Lenth

9 Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion &c ] From the promises contained in the foregoing verse of God protecting His Church and temple the Prophet in a sudden transition takes occasion to break forth into a joyful representation of the coming of the Messiah. W Lenth With reference to this event the passage is cited in two places of the New Testament Matt xxi 9 John xii 15 so that we can have no doubt of the application. Dr Blayney

Beautiful and striking is the manner, in which this prophecy is introduced. The Prophet does not coldly inform Jerusalem that her King should come to her, and that when He did come she ought to rejoice. He speaks of future times he seems to have been present at the glorious scene. Standing upon mount Olivet he hears the hosannas of the disciples and beholds the procession approach towards the gates of Jerusalem he turns himself to the city and breaks forth in transport, Rejoice greatly O daughter of Zion, shout O daughter of Jerusalem. Bp Horne

— behold thy king cometh unto thee ] These words assign the reason, why Jerusalem was called on to rejoice namely the approach of her King. “behold thy king cometh unto thee.” A person was to visit Jerusalem who should deserve to be emphatically styled her “king.” The nations had then kings and conquerors, their Nebuchadnezzars and Cyruses, their Alexanders and Cæsars these appeared in their turns upon the stage, contending for the empire of the world. Each performed the part assigned him by an all-directing Providence, and then vanished away. Zion beheld all these changes, and still survived the commotions occasioned by them. The Prophets had promised her a king, who should overcome her enemies, and triumph gloriously, who should erect, in the time of the fourth great monarchy, an universal and everlasting kingdom, and give laws to the world, nay, who should govern all things in heaven and earth. Bp Horne

He, that is so often described in the Prophets as King of Israel, (see Ps ii 6, Jer xxiii 5,) was known by that name among the

— he is just and having salvation lowly &c ] Righteousness salvation and humility, were to distinguish the person and reign of the Messiah. Righteousness leads the way. 'He is just & righteous.' St Stephen affirms the Prophets to have foretold the coming of Jesus under the title of 'the Just One,' Acts vii 2. See Ps xlv 1 Jer xxiii 6 and compare Matt xxvii 1 10, Luke xxiii 1 17. Salvation is the next sign or token of the King of Zion. He is just, and having salvation. He was to execute his part of the legal office which consisted in rescuing a people from their oppressors. The history of Israel contains in account many savours raised up at unquiet times for this purpose.
Moses, Josiah, Balaak, Gideon, Sampson and many more in the ages after them. But the deliverances effected by any of these were not to be mentioned, unless as shadows and faint resemblances of that grand and complete salvation, which the promised Saviour should accomplish. See Luke ii 11, Matt i 21.
The Messiah was to be distinguished from all other kings and conquerors by His appearance likewise and demeanour. He was to visit His people in great humility, 'lowly, and riding upon in a s. Though God He was to become man. see Is vii 11 Matt i 23. He was to be 'a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief.' see Is lii 14 and the whole of the fifty third chapter, specially ver 3. He was to keep the law and to die for sin, see Ps xl 7, Heb x 7. From all which passages it is plain, that Messiah was to be an humble and suffering character. The types and the prophecies are as plain for His humiliation as they are for His exaltation. nor could any one person accomplish them all without being equally remarkable for lowliness and meekness, glory and honour. Bp Horne — riding upon an ass and upon a colt &c ] Or 'even upon a colt &c.' See John xii 11 Luke xix 30. A proof of lowliness, and that He did not affect the pomp of the world but came with the same primitive simplicity as the patriarchs and judges used of old. See Gen xxi, Judges v 10, x 1 W Louth, Bp

The character given of the Messiah that He should ride on an ass was in opposition to the pride of the warlike kings of Israel who by their great strength in chariots and horses had ruined themselves and their people. And herein He was to resemble those who had indeed been deliverers of their country. kings, who feared God and therefore feared no enemy, who though pointed on asses and colts the foals of asses, were able to resist the thousands and ten thousands of chariots and forces that came against them. Bp Sherlock

The ancient Jew explained this prophecy of the Messiah and it is plain from the Gospels, that the Jew in Christ's time understood it so. Matt xxi 8, 9, Luke xix 37 38 Mark xi 10 Bp

10 And I will cut off the chariot from Ephraim, &c.] Ephraim and Judah shall not engage in war to pierce the Messiah's kingdom, but their spiritual king shall peaceably convert Gentiles and shall extend His dominion every where. Abp Newcomb

In the state of meekness and lowliness, before described Christ was to gain a complete victory over the enemies of man's salvation.
The warfare was new, and it is no wonder that the weapons employed in it should be uncommon. Other warlike weapons were then horses and then chariots then bows then pikes and then shields. But Messiah disarms His followers in order that they may overcome. No plainer declaration could have been made that the conquests of Messiah were not to be of a secular nature that His kingdom was not of this world. See John xviii 36 Ep Horne

— and he shall speak peace unto the heathen ] As well as to His own people the Jews. Accordingly when the Prince of Peace came to make His abode amongst us the angel declared and sent to sing 'Peace on earth, peace with God by the pardon of sin peace with ourselves, by the answer of a clear conscience peace with one another by mutual charity. And who would not wish to see, who would not labour to promote the full accomplishment of the last clause of the prophecy in the extension of this kingdom and dominion of Christ from sea even to sea and from the river even to the end of the earth that all the nations of the world might remember themselves and turn to the Lord Jesus, as many did at the first preaching of His Gospel.
Bp Horne

This prophecy, together with those of Hosea chap ii 18
Micah v 5, 10, Haggai ii 22, as they foretell the outward peacefulness of Christ's Church or kingdom, relate to the flourishing state of it in the latter times of the world. The word which denote the extent of that kingdom, 'His dominion shall be from sea &c,' are taken from Ps lxxii 8, where David describes the extent of Solomon's kingdom, from the Red sea to the Mediterranean, and from the river Euphrates to the border of Egypt compare Exod xxiii 31 1 Kings iv 21 Deut x 9.
This is appears from several expressions in that Psalm was a figurative description of Christ's kingdom, which should be extended towards the four quarters of the world. W Louth

4 Thus saith the Lord my God, Feed the flock of the slaughter,

The flock, meaning God's people, were under the guidance of corrupt and unprincipled pastors, who sacrificed them to their lucrative and ambitious views The Prophet by God's command assumes for a while the direction of them, therein becoming a type of Christ, the good Shepherd but is soon obliged to resign his charge, with mutual dissatisfaction on both sides He receives thirty pieces of silver, as the reward for his services, and casts them by Divine direction to the potter After this the Prophet is held forth as the type of a worthless shepherd, or a succession of evil governors, who, heedless of the flock, or seeking only to oppress it, at once ruin the flock, and bring destruction on themselves Dr Blayney

Ver 1 Open thy doors, O Lebanon,] By Lebanon most interpreters understand the temple, whose stately buildings resembled the tall cedars of the forest The words may likewise denote the destruction of Jerusalem, elsewhere called by the name of a forest (compare Jer xxi 14, xx 7, 13 Ezek xl 46) W Lowth

2 the mighty] That is, trees The original word is applied to cedars and vines, Ezek xvii 8, 23 Under these images the fall of mighty men and the subversion of the Jewish polity are represented Abp Newcome

the forest of the vintage] Probably Carmel, (see the note on 2 Kings xix 23,) which being in the north west of Judea, and here joined with Bashan in the south east, may denote that the calamity should be general Bashan was famous for its stately oaks, see Is ii 13 Or, instead of "the forest of the vintage," we may read, as in the margin the defenced forest, which gives a good representation of Jerusalem with its fortifications W Lowth

3 shepherds — glory] By shepherds are to be understood the rulers of the people, and "their glory" denotes their stately habitations Dr Blayney

the pride of Jordan] By "the pride of Jordan" those woods and thickets are primarily intended, which rise proudly above the banks of that river, and greatly decorate the scene but here, in a secondary and metaphorical sense, they are put for the residences of those princes and grandees, who too often like lions devour and oppress the people under them Dr Blayney

4 Feed the flock of the slaughter] The actions of the Prophets are sometimes typical that is they represent in themselves

<sup>2</sup> Behold, I will make Jerusalem a cup of || trembling unto all the people round about, || when they shall be in the siege both against Judah and against Jerusalem

1 — Take unto thee yet the instruments of a foolish shepherd ] The Prophet, having hitherto represented the good shepherd is now directed to assume the dress and equipage of one of a contrary character. In Scripture language "foolish" and "wicked" are synonymous for wickedness is folly in the extreme. The instruments of such a shepherd must be suitable to his character, such as a crook made to push and hurt the flock, not to protect or defend them. Dr Blayney W Louth

16 — a shepherd ] A shepherd in the singular number denotes a succession of such governors as are described in the following words. W Louth

— tear their claws in pieces ] The foolish shepherd instead of being tender and gentle with his flock, is supposed to dig up them about with his iron crook, or to overdrive them in rough and stony ground, so as to break their hoofs. Dr Blayney

17 Woe to the idol shepherd ] Who take no care of the flock. Such a shepherd is no better than an idol that is profitable for nothing. Isa xlv 10. W Louth

— the sword shall be upon his arm &c ] The purport of the passage is, that since through the misapplication of his power and his understanding, signified by his arm and his right eye the flock are subjected to desolation or the sword therefore as of strict justice he shall be punished with a deprivation at least of those faculties, which he so fatally misused. Dr Blayney W Louth

• Chap XII This and the two following chapters contain prophecies, which relate entirely to the circumstances of the Christ in dispensation. They begin with the assistance of some final victories to be obtained over the enemies of Jerusalem (xv 1—9) compared with Ezek xxxviii, xxxix and lcv x 9 they describe the restoration of the Jews then conversion and bitter compunction for having pierced the Messiah, ver 10 then of mission by baptism to the privileges of the Gospel (ver 11 chap xii 1) and their deliverance from the delusions of false prophet. The Prophet then reverts to foretell the dispersion of Christ

The Jews themselves have applied this text to the Messiah David betwixt described His sufferings under the figure of "piercing His hands and His feet." Ps xvi 16 and Isaiah foretold He should be "wounded for our transgressions," chap lvi 5. Rp Lowth

— they shall look upon me whom they have pierced,] St John plainly quotes these words chap xix 37 and applies them to our blessed Saviour of whom alone they can be understood, for none could speak them but One who was both God and Man. That He was God is plain from the former part of the verse, "I will pour upon the house of David — the spirit of grace and of supplications: for the spirit of grace is not at the disposal of any creature, and it is only in the power of God to bestow it." That He was Man appears from the following words "Me whom they have pierced" for if He had not been Man, He would not have been capable of being pierced by them. These words therefore were spoken by Christ, the only Person in the world that ever was or pretended to be both God and Man. Rp Beveridge

By the wonderful preservation of this one and only people distinct from all others for so many ages Providence hath left room for the reason here foretold when, by "looking on Him whom they have pierced, and mourning," they shall rise again, and be as life from the dead, Rom xi 15. Abp Secker

— they shall mourn for him.] The Jews sinned in killing the Messiah for which reason God removed them out of their land. He will not requite them in it, till they shall have repented of their sin. They have been in their present dispersion above 1700 years. Their sins have not been greater in this dispersion than before and under the Babylonian. They are he by the sin of idolatry. Yet then on a repentance superficial enough after seventy years God restored them to their land. Now though they fast and mourn and shew all the external tokens of sincere repentance God will not be propitiated. Both not God's inexorable severity how clearly some sin is still unpunished? What can it be so big with evil so extensive in its consequences? They cannot say, but Zechariah saith it for them. It is the piercing, the death of Him whom God favoured: and this sin and the punishment will not be removed without an antecedent general, and deep repentance. By Chandler

11 — the mourning of Hadadrimmon.] Mos probably the general mourning for the death of the good king Josiah, who was slain in the valley of Megiddo, 2 Kings xxiii 29; 2 Chr. xxxv 22—24. Hadadrimmon is said by St Jerome to be a place near Jerzeel. The mourning for Josiah became a proverb for a public and solemn lamentation. Such a national humiliation, it is here said, shall the Jews observe for having crucified the Messiah. Dr Blayney, W Lowth

12 And the land shall mourn, every family apart, &c.] The whole land shall mourn in the most solemn manner: the inhabitants secluding themselves from all social and domestic intercourse, as in a time of general humiliation. See 1 Cor vii 5. W Lowth, Dr Blayney

13 — the family of Shimei apart,] Or "of Simeon, according to the reading in the Greek translation of the Seventy. As David, Nathan, Simeon, and Levi, are all reckoned among the progenitors of Christ, Luke iii 29—31, their families may be mentioned by name, as more particularly concerned in the guilt to be lamented. "I or neither did His brethren believe in Him." John vii 5. Dr Blayney Or these different families may be intended to denote the different orders of men among the Jews: "the house of David, or the royal line," "the house of Nathan the Prophet, and other descendants of the other Prophets," "the house of Levi, both high priest, priests, and other Levites," "the house of Shimei, the scribes and Pharisees, and their descendants," agreeably to an opinion that this family was noted for breeding up persons eminent in the knowledge of the law. The Prophet, having mentioned the tribes and families of chief note in his time, comprises the rest under the general expression in the fourteenth verse. Dr Wells, W Lowth

The Jews perform to this day the office, to which they were at first appointed of bearing witness to true religion being preserved a distinct people, though dispersed through the world, for so long a time as no one besides from the creation ever was under like circumstances: and demonstrating all the while the uncorruptness of those books, in which both they and we believe, and from which in a great measure, we prove the truth of our religion against them as well as against other unbelievers in Christ. Nor is this the whole service of the same kind, to which they are destined. For in God's good time they shall give a new and illustrious (and who knows how reasonable?) attestation to Christianity by their conversion, and the "receiving of them" again into the Church shall be as "life from the dead." For so their own Prophets have foretold, that God "will pour upon them the spirit of grace and of supplications: and they shall look upon Him whom they have pierced, and shall mourn, and in that day shall be a fountain opened to them for sin and for uncleanness, they shall call on His name, and He will hear them, He will say, It is My people, and they shall say, The Lord is my God." Abp Secker

MALACHI was the last of those Prophets who flourished before the Gospel dispensation

Malachi is represented by some traditionary accounts to have been of the tribe of Zebulun, and a native of Sapha to have died young, and to have been buried with his ancestors at Sapha after having assisted as a member of the great synagogue in the reestablishment of order and prosperity in his country. Abp Usher conceives him to have flourished about the year of the world 3834 which is about twenty years later than the period assigned to him by Blair but as it appears from the consent of all Jewish and Christian antiquity that the light of prophecy expired in Malachi, we may suppose that the termination of his ministry coincided with the accomplishment of the first seven weeks of Daniel's prophecy, which was the period allotted for sealing up the vision and prophecy. This according to Prideaux's account must be assigned to the year of the world 3895 but according to the calculations of Bp Lloyd to the year of the world 3607, twelve years later whichever reckoning we may prefer Malachi must be admitted to have completed the canon of the Old Testament, about 400 years before the birth of Christ when the great designs of Providence were completed in the termination of the prophetick ministry, and when a scheme of prophecy was unfolded which in its entire contexture was to be accommodated to, and to characterize, the Messiah

Malachi evidently prophesied some time after Haggai and Zechariah for in his time the temple was rebuilt and the worship reestablished chap i 7, 10, 12, in 10 his ministry coincided with or succeeded that of Nehemiah

This Prophet seals the volume of prophecy in the description of that Personage at whose appearance the Evangelists begin the Gospel history, Mark i 1, 2, and he who terminated the illustrious succession of the Prophets, and predicted the coming of the Baptist who in an especial degree entitled to a share of our Saviour's testimony who declared in terms which defined the period and extent of prophecy that "all the Prophets prophesied until John Matt xi 13, Luke xvi 16 Malachi is likewise frequently cited as a Prophet by the writers of the New Testament, Matt xi 10, xvi 10-12 Mark i 9 ix 11 12 Luke i 1 vii 7 Rom ix 13 Dr Gray

yet I loved Jacob,

Chap I ver 1 The burden of the word of the Lord to Israel
The word burden may be taken here in its larger sense as the message or import of the word of the Lord The name Israel which was at first common to the twelve tribes and afterwards became peculiar to the ten is distinguished from the kingdom of Judah is here given to the two tribe of Judah and Benjamin and to all of the other who joined themselves to Judah on their return from Babylon These having lately had experience of God's great favour in turning their captivity and restoring them to their own land should have been very careful in reforming their ways, and sincere in their obedience But it was otherwise Many enmities contrary to God's law were found amongst them for which God sends this Prophet to reprove them and exhort them to repentance and at the same time for the comfort of the people among them to assure them of the coming of the promised Messiah in His due time Dr Pocock

2 I have loved you, saith the Lord &c I have all along shown a particular kindness for Jacob and his family above that of Esau though they were both the son of Isaac and I have lately given a signal proof of it, in having restored you to your own country again after your captivity whereas I have scattered the Edomites ful people cursed for the sins of its inhabitants, &c Dr Pocock

They were subdued by Judas Maccabeus, 1 Mac v 65, and finally by John Hyrcanus as Josephus relates: and the name of Edom was utterly extinguished. Abp Newcome, W Lenth

5 And your eyes shall see &c. And behold, your very eyes shall be witness both of these My favours to you, and of this My severity to the sons of Israel, and ye shall be forced to say, The LORD hath well deserved to be praised and magnified from all the coasts of Israel. Bp Hall

6 A son honoureth his father, &c. God had all along shewn such fatherly affection and care to Israel, above all other nations, that they could not but acknowledge Him their Father by a peculiar right: and He had by His special protection and government of them so shewn Himself their Lord and Master, that they could not deny His peculiar claim to that appellation. Upon this their outward profession He founds His appeal reprimanding them for withholding from Him that honour and reverence which not then duty, only, but ordinary custom required them to pay. Dr Pocock

— if I be a master, where is my fear? One branch of a servant's reverence is fear to offend his master. This fear is a disposition well becoming a servant: and therefore God is our Master: and by that name of Master challengeth it of us. Fear and reverence are often joined together: and so jointly required of the LORD's servants. Ps ii 11. Heb xii 28. Bp Sanderson — And ye say. Or Yet ye say. Bp Lenth. From this verse to chap ii ver 9 the Prophet reproves the priests and the people for suffering the refuse of beasts, which according to the law ought to have been rejected: and denounces punishment upon the priests for not teaching the people their duty in this respect. Abp Newcome

7 — mine altar — The table of the LORD. These names may be indifferently used for signifying either the altar or the table of bread: and by polluted bread may be understood either bread improperly offered, or else the flesh of the sacrifices: so that what thou understand by this variety of words the same or different thing, namely the shewbread by some, and the sacrifices by others: the scope will be the same, that is to declare the contempt of the Lord of God service: and that not in one particular. Bp Pocock

— In that ye say The table of the LORD is contemptible. They said in effect that the altar of Jehovah was vile and contemptible, by offering on it torn blind lame and sick victims. Abp Newcome

8 — offer it now to thy governor. It is the custom of the East for poor people especially those that live in the country, to or accept thy person? saith the LORD of hosts.

9 And now, I pray you, beseech God that he will be gracious unto us: this hath been by your means: will he regard your persons? saith the LORD of hosts

10 Who is there even among you that would shut the doors for nought? neither do ye kindle fire on mine altar for nought. I have no pleasure in you, saith the LORD of hosts, neither will I accept an offering at your hand

11 For from the rising of the sun even unto the going down of the same my name shall be great among the Gentiles, and in every place incense shall be offered unto my name, and pure offering for my name shall be great among the heathen, saith the LORD of hosts

12 ¶ But ye have profaned it, in that ye make presents to their lords of lambs and sheep. Presents to men, like offerings to God, expiate offences. Sir J Chardin

— will he be pleased with thee? Certainly, not: he would look on it as a great disrespect of his person, and disregard of his honour. How much more shall the Lord, the great Governour of the world? Such conduct was directly contrary to God's command, Lev xii 22, Deut xv 21. Dr Pocock

Though things of very little value are sometimes offered as presents in the East, those, to whom presents are made, do not think themselves always obliged graciously to accept every thing that is brought. It appears from Bp Pococke, Norden, and other travellers that if a present is not somewhat proportionate to the quality of the person applied to the circumstances of him that offers it: and the value of the favour asked, it is rejected. Harmer

9 And now, I pray you, beseech God &c. Therefore now I pray you to repent, and thereon to beseech God that He will be gracious unto us, not punishing the former sins, as they require. Thus you, the priests, are especially concerned to do, because the wickedness before mentioned has been by your means chiefly occasioned. Will He, that is, God, regard your persons though ye be His priests, unless ye repent, saith the LORD of hosts? Dr Wells

10 Who is there even among you that would shut the doors for nought? &c. Or, that doth shut &c. Dr Pocock. I have not dealt thus with you: but have abundantly recompensed your service. Which of you is there, among all the Levites of the temple, that hath shut the doors of My temple unrevoked? which of you is there that hath so much as kindled a fire on Mine altar for nought? yet ye have had no regard to Me again. I will be affected to you accordingly: behold, I have no pleasure in you. Bp Hall. Having shown the great fault of the priests in their neglect of His service: here He seems to aggravate it in that they receive abundant wages for what they ought to do, even for their least services. Did He require their services for nought, as justly He might then they might have some pretence for their negligence, but being plentifully rewarded, they ought, if not in love yet in justice, to be careful. Dr Pocock

Dr Pocock. The conversion of the Gentiles is here prophesied: is usual, under Jewish images, see Zeel xiv 16. Abp Newcome

He sharply reproveth the priests for neglecting their covenant, 11 and the people for idolatry, 14 for adultery, 17 and for infidelity

AND now, O ye priests, this commandment is for you

Deut 28

2<sup>a</sup> If ye will not hear, and if ye will not lay it to heart, to give glory unto my name, saith the LORD of hosts, I will even send a curse and abused My name in that ye have entertained base conceits of My sacrifices, and have held the oblations offered unto Me, as meat vile and contemptible, and unworthy of any other respects than scorn Bp Hall

The word "figur" is applied to sacrifice, see Is lvii 19 where "the fruit of the lips" is explained of "the sacrifice of praise and thanksgiving, Heb viii 15 W Lowth Or it means that portion of the offering which was allotted to the priests for their provision, and which they esteemed of little value Dr Pocock

13 — ye have snuffed at it,] See Hag i 9 Ye say, that attendance on the altar and partaking of its sacrifices are a burdensome task, and ye turn from them with disgust Abp Newcome

14 But cursed be the deceiver, &c.] The former reproaches related only to the priests, here the Prophet reproves the people, that would offer to deceive Almighty God by putting Him off with the worst they had Dr Pocock thinks the words are to be understood of such offerings as of their own accord they vowed to God, which were to be males I cv xxii 19 And if they would not perform their vows in such a manner as God directed it were better for them not to vow at all see Deut xxiii 21 B Tenth

— my name is dreadful among the heathen.] How much more then ought it to be so among you, whom I have loved and chosen for My peculiar people? This assertion of God that His name is dreadful among the heathen, though spoken as of the time then present and though it was then and is always true (for His name is often made conspicuous to them by His judgments) yet because they had not then generally clear knowledge of Him and His name, it is by some not improperly considered as a prophecy of what should come to pass by the making of His name more clearly known to all nations by the preaching of the Gospel Dr Pocock

Chap. II ver 2 — I will curse your blessings.] I will turn your blessings into curses compare Deut xxiii 5 or rather remove your blessings — and curses and calamities in their stead Or it may mean the benedictions wherewith the priests blessed or prayed for themselves or the people B Tenth, Dr Pocock

As God can evidently dispose of every thing so a may best answer His wise purposes of mercy or correction it is likewise evidently worthy of Him to do it for the highest of His title is curse upon you, and I will curse your blessings — yea, I have cursed them already, because ye do not lay it to heart

3 Behold, I will corrupt your seed, and I will spread dung upon your faces, even the dung of your solemn feasts, and one shall take you away with it

4 And ye shall know that I have sent this commandment unto you that my covenant might be with Levi, such the LORD of hosts

5 My covenant was with him of life and peace, and I gave them to him for the fear wherewith he feared me, and was afraid before my name

6 The law of truth was in his mouth, and iniquity was not found in his lips: he walked with me in peace and equity, and did turn many away from iniquity

7 For the priest's lips should keep knowledge, and they should seek the law at his mouth: for he is the messenger of the LORD of hosts

8 But ye are departed out of the way, ye have caused many to stumble at the

that of the moral Governour of the universe and therefore ye may firmly believe the Scripture assuring us that He doth it in fact that He makes all things work together for good to them that love Him Rom viii 28, and can be the very blessings of those who love Him not Abp Secker

3 — I will corrupt your seed.] I will destroy the fruits of the earth so as to produce dearth and scarcity or I will cut off your posterity Dr Pocock

— and spread dung upon your faces even the dung of your solemn feasts.] Your holiest sacrifices shall be as loathsome in My sight as dung, and I will reject you with as much contempt as if I threw the very dung of your sacrifices in your faces Dr Pocock

— and one shall take you away with it.] You shall be esteemed as a nuisance, only fit to be removed out of sight as dung is B Tenth You shall be destroyed and cast on a dunghill Abp Newcome

4 And ye shall know that I have sent this commandment unto you, &c.] That is, the message or instruction now delivered to them by the Prophet to reprove them for the breach of God's law and to call on them to reform their misbehaviour in His service, to a due and better observance of which they were bound by virtue of His covenant made with Levi Dr Pocock

5 My covenant was with him of life and peace.] The Prophet speaks of the succession of the ancient priests such as Aaron, Eleazar, Phineas and their successors as of one single person under the name of Levi (compare Zeck vi 16) and says I gave him My covenant of happiness and security or I promised him a secure enjoyment of his office of the priesthood The words allude to Numb xxi 12 13 B Tenth

7 For the priest's lips should keep knowledge, &c.] Preserve it store it up so as to distribute it Abp Newcome As it is the priest's duty to understand the meaning of the law so the people ought to resort to them for instruction in any difficulty that arises concerning the sense of it see Lev x 11 Deut xii 10 For God has appointed the priest His ordinary messengers to declare His will unto the people as the Prophets are His extraordinary messengers The word "messenger" in it a usual sense is equivalent to prophet see I xli 19 xlv 26 Hag i 13 It signifies the same as "an interpreter" of the Divine will Job xxxiii 23 B Tenth law ye have corrupted the covenant of Levi, saith the Lord of hosts

9 Therefore have I also made you contemptible and base before all the people, according as ye have not kept my ways, but ye have been partial in the law

10 Have we not all one father? hath not one God created us? why do we deal treacherously every man against his brother, by profaning the covenant of our fathers?

11 ¶ Judah hath dealt treacherously, and an abomination is committed in Israel and in Jerusalem, for Judah hath profaned the holiness of the Lord which he loved, and hath married the daughter of a strange god

12 The Lord will cut off the man that doeth this, both the master and the scholar, out of the tabernacles of Jacob, and him

9 — [ye have been partial in the law] Not delivering the truth but writing the law with a pen, in declaring it, meaning or in determining on, thing according to it, from respect to the person, in who were they were to pronounce judgment — see Lev xix 15 Deut i 17 xvi 19 This is to be put in the law the margin says it literally according to the Hebrew, ye have accepted bribes — it is usually elsewhere rendered 'to respect person' These three expressions all mean the same thing Dr Poole

10 Have we not all one father &c] From this to the 16th verse inclusive the Prophet censure intermarriages of Israelites with women of mother country which Moses had forbidden Deut xxi 10 and also divorces which seem to have been multiplied for the purpose of contracting these prohibited marriages Abp Newcome This grew much into practice in the time of Ezra and Nehemiah who express great detestation of it Ezra ix 1 Neh xiii 23 B Tenth

11 — [for Judah hath profaned the holiness of the Lord which he loved] His holy institution of matrimony among them not so much in general as it was a holy institution first made in paradise but is so limited and restrained among this peculiar people as God is to preserve them a holy nation unto Him Dr Poole

12 — [the daughter of a strange god] That is, the worshipper of a different god from Jehovah see Deut xxxii 19 Abp Newcome As those that acknowledged, worship and serve the true God are called His sons and daughters so they that worshipped any other god, by like reason here called the daughters of that god — Hence the Jews say He that marryeth a heathen woman is as if he made him self son in law to an idol Dr Poole

12 — [the master and the scholar] Him that persuade or instruct other that such marriages are lawful and him that follow such advice The express ion seem to comprehend both the priest and the people The Hebrew read as in the margin him that teacheth and him that misleadeth it seems to be a proverbial speech denoting a master and scholar, as our translators render it — in instructer is described as one that weakeneth the law the disciple i 11 B Tenth That some of the priests married strange wives see Nehem xiii 26—30 Abp Newcome

— [and ye have been partial in the law &c] Though he should think to pay by the terms, yet God will not accept them or pardon him Ep Tenth

13 And ye have added unto your other iniquity ye have dealt so cruelly and unjustly with your wife that ye have caused them to walk the altar of God with the tears of their weeping and compassions so that

13 And this have ye done again, covering the altar of the Lord with tears, with weeping, and with crying out, insomuch that he regardeth not the offering any more, or receiveth it with good will at your hand.

14 ¶ Yet ye say, Wherefore? Because the Lord hath been witness between thee and the wife of thy youth, against whom thou hast dealt treacherously yet is she thy companion, and the wife of thy covenant

15 And did not he make one? Yet had he the residue of the spirit And wherefore one? That he might seek a godly seed Therefore take heed to your spirit, and let none deal treacherously against the wife of his youth <sup>Of</sup> <sup>excellence</sup> <sup>of</sup> <sup>God</sup> <sup>or</sup> <sup>un</sup> <sup>faithfully</sup>

God, who hateth all iniquity, regards not your offering, &c Bp Hall

14 — [Because the Lord hath been witness between thee and the wife of thy youth, &c] "Because the Lord hath been witness of the contract or matrimonial promises, made according to His law and with solemn invocation of His name, 'between thee and the wife of thy youth, that is, her whom thou tookest in thy youth but with whom thou now dealest treacherously, though she were thy companion, made so according to the institution of God Gen ii 24 Matt xix 5, 'and the wife of thy covenant by mutual consent espoused to thee The conditions of this covenant, God, being witness to it, regards as necessarily binding on both parties, and requires the due performance of it from both Dr Poole

If conjugal infidelity on the men's part hath not all the same aggravation which it hath on the women's, it hath very great ones in then stead They are almost constantly the tempters they often carry on their wicked designs for a long time together they too commonly use the vilest means to accomplish them And as they claim the strictest fidelity it is ungenerous as well as unjust to fail of paying it All men must feel how bitter it would be to them to be injured in this respect, let them think then what it is to be injurious in it and since the crime is the same when committed by them, as when committed against them, let them own that it deserves the same condemnation from the Judge of the world The Lord hath been witness saith the Prophet 'between thee and the wife of thy youth &c Abp Seeke

15 And did not he make one? &c] Among various interpretations of the word this seems most probable That the Prophet put the Jews in mind of the first institution of marriage in paradise (Christ did afterwards upon a like occasion, (Matt xix 5) and tells them that God made but one man at first and made the woman out of him when He could have created more women if He had pleased since He had the residue of the spirit, or was the Father of spirits and so could at His will have created more spirits or souls but He acted as He did in order to instruct men that this was the true pattern of marriage, ordained for true love and undivided affection and best serving the chief end of matrimony namely the religious education of children whereas in polygamy the children are brought up with more or less care in proportion to the affection men bear to their several wives This seems in every way very probable interpretation, and is confirmed by our Saviour's way of arguing against divorce and consequently polygamy Matt xix 4 5 6 B Tenth, Dr Poole

— [Therefore take heed to your spirit] Do not give way to irregular and inordinate passion B Tenth

God having declared that He would "make His name great among the Gentiles, for that He was "grieved with the impiety of Israel, now proceeds to proclaim in an awful manner by the mouth of His Prophet, that the Lord whom they sought should suddenly come to His temple, preceded by that messenger, who like a harbinger should prepare His way that the Lord, when He should appear, should purify the sons of Levi from their unrighteousness and refine them as metal from the dross, chap iii 1 — that then "the offering of Judah," the spiritual sacrifice of the heart should be "pleasing unto the Lord," as was that of the patriarchs or their uncorrupted ancestors, chap iii 14, and that the Lord would quickly exterminate the corruptions and adulteries that prevailed He proceeds with an exhortation to repentance promising high rewards and remembrance to the righteous in that last day, when the Lord should select unto Himself a peculiar treasure, and finally discern between the righteous and the wicked chap iii 16—18 He concludes with another assurance of approaching salvation to those who feared God's name from that "Sun of righteousness" which should arise with healing in His wings, and render them triumphant enjoying till that day an observance of the law of Moses till the advent of Elijah, the Prophet, who before the coming of that great and dreadful day or the Lord should turn the heart of the fathers to the children and the heart of the children to their fathers and produce a thorough amendment in the mind of the people chap iv 1—6 Dr Gray With this solemn promise of the Saviour the Test inspired teacher of the Jewish Church closes the word of prophecy till a greater Prophet should arise again to open it Bp Horsley

CHAP III

1 Of the messenger, majesty and nature of Christ 2 Of the rebellion, 8 saith 15 and infidelity of the people 16 The promise of blessing to them that fear God

BEHOLD, * I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me and the Lord, whom ye seek, shall

This is an answer to the blasphemous question of the perverse scoffers of that time who from the prosperity of the wicked took occasion to question God's justice God assures them that a time should come when He would by executing His just judgment on the wicked shew that He took due notice of all their deeds The words, as a Jewish expositor observes are a most illustrious prophecy of Christ, in which this last of Prophet before Christ coming reassures the Jews of His coming and warns them to expect it Dr Pocock

— my messenger] The messenger whose office it is to "prepare the way before the Lord" who is said here to be coming suddenly after this His forerunner is described by Isaiah as "preparing the way of the Lord" who is spoken of as coming, and "His glory as just ready to be revealed" chap xl A comparison of the passages prove that the prophecy is justly applied by all the Evangelists to John the Baptist who is described under the person of Elijah in the following chapter (ver 7) whom all the Jews both ancient and modern expected as a forerunner of the Messiah see the note there The messenger or prophet (see the note on chap ii 7) here foretold to be the Lord's harbinger was to be as much inferior to the Lord Himself as events are to a great person of whose arrival they give notice, This John the Baptist often confessed Matt iii 11 John i 26 iii 28 and the same appears from the following words B Louth Bp Chandler

— he shall prepare the way] Like pioneers on the march of an Eastern monarch see Bp Louth note on Is xl 2 Abp Newcome He was to usher in the Lord that was to follow him and supply the place of harbinger, who was wont to be sent before a great prince, to give notice at the place of the prince's coming, and to dispose matters for his reception according to his dignity Bp Chandler John the Baptist fully made good this promise by preaching repentance, Matt iii 2 by baptizing unto repentance ver 11 by being witness to Christ and pointing Him out to the people that they might believe on Him, John i 9, &c Dr Pocock

— and the Lord — shall — come to his temple] There is hardly a Jew ancient or modern that does not expound the Lord in this text, of the Messiah Bp Chandler And who by this "Lord" meant is agreed on all hands by Christian interpreters namely that it is Christ whom God hath made both Lord and Christ Acts ii 36 and who is Lord of all chap vi 6 by whom all things were made John i 3 by whom all things are sustained and governed who is as the rock of the world support the basis and foundation not of my private family tribe or kingdom but of all by whom are all things and we by Him 1 Cor viii 6 and who we are to obey by right of redemption and so He is Lord of lords and King of kings Rev xvii 14 and xix 16 and deservedly entitled the Lord Dr Pocock

Of the characters under which the Person whose coming is foretold is described the first that He is the Lord The Lord shall come to His temple The temple in the writings of a Jewish Prophet cannot be understood otherwise according to the natural meaning than of the temple at Jerusalem Of the temple therefore the Person to come here expressly called the Lord The Lord of my temple in the language of all venter and in the natural meaning of the phrase is the divinity to whose worship it is consecrated To no other divinity the temple of Jerusalem was consecrated than the true and ever true God the suddenly come to his temple, even the messenger of the covenant, whom ye delight in: behold, he shall come, saith the LORD of hosts

2 But who may abide the day of his coming? and who shall stand when he appear-eth? for he is like a refiner's fire, and like fuller's sope

3 And he shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver: and he shall purify the sons of Levi, and purge them as gold and silver,

Lord Jehovah the Maker of heaven and earth. Here then we have the express testimony of Malachi that the Christ, the Deliverer who coming he announce, was no other than the JEHOVAH of the Old Testament. Jehovah by His angel had delivered the Israelites from the Egyptian bondage: and the same Jehovah was to come in person to His temple to effect the greater and more general deliverance of which the former was but an imperfect type. Bp Horsley

— so will suddenly come to his temple ] The time of His coming is said to be suddenly, namely after the messenger, that was to prepare the way: and is implied to be under that temple, which they despised and profaned, but of which He should be the glory. Bp Chandler

Agreeably to this the temple was the theatre of our Lord's public ministry at Jerusalem: there He daily taught the people, there He held frequent disputations with the unbelieving Scribes and Pharisees. But there are three particular passages of His life in which this prophecy appears to have been more remarkably fulfilled: the first is related in John ii 13—16, the second in John vii 27—40, the third in Matt xxi 1—13. In one, or in all, but chiefly in the last of these three remarkable passages of His life, did Jesus of Nazareth display in His own Person, and in His conduct, the first and greatest character of the Messiah, foretold and described by all the preceding Jewish Prophets, as well as by Malachi here, the Lord coming to His temple. Bp Horsley

— even the messenger of the covenant ] As Jesus of Nazareth was the Lord of the Jewish temple, so also was He the Messenger of the covenant which had been foretold by Jeremiah and Ezekiel. That covenant was to be different from the Mosaic, general for all nations, everlasting for all ages, a law written in the hearts of the faithful. The covenant, which Jesus as God's Messenger propounded, is altogether different from the Mosaic: it is propounded generally to all nations, and in the terms of it is fitted to be everlasting, for all ages: it is a law written in the heart. Assuredly then, Jesus of Nazareth was the Messenger of the covenant foretold by the Prophets Jeremiah and Ezekiel. Bp Horsley

— whom ye seek — whom ye delight in ] This is commonly understood as alluding to the general expectation of the Messiah, and the delight and consolation which the devout part of the Jewish nation derived from the hope and prospect of His coming. Bp Horsley

2 — for he is like a refiner's fire, &c ] In this and in the 3d and 4th verse we see the Messiah's business described in various branches which are reducible however to these: the final judgment when the wicked shall be destroyed: a previous trial or preparation of the different tempers and dispositions of men, in order to that judgment: and something to be done for their improvement and improvement. The trial is signified under the metaphor of a refiner's separation of the nobler metals from the dross with which they are blended in the ore: the means used for the improvement and improvement of mankind by the Messiah's atonement for our sin: by the preaching of the Gospel: and by the internal influence of the Holy Spirit: all the means employed under the Messiah's covenant for the reformation of men are expressed under the metaphor of fuller's sope which restores soiled garment to its original purity. One particular effect of that they may offer unto the LORD an offering in righteousness.

4 Then shall the offering of Judah and Jerusalem be pleasant unto the LORD, as in the days of old, and as in former years. Or

5 And I will come near to you to judge; and I will be a swift witness against the sorcerers, and against the adulterers, and against false swearers, and against those that oppress the hireling in his wages, the widow, and the fatherless, and this purification is to be, that "the sons of Levi" will be purified. The worship of God shall be purged of all hypocrisy and superstition, and reduced to a few simple rites, the natural expression of true devotion. And "then shall this offering of Judah and Jerusalem," that is, of the true members of God's true Church, "be pleasant unto the Lord." These then are the particulars of the business, on which the Messiah, according to this prophecy, was to come. Bp Horsley

8 And he shall sit as a refiner &c ] The third character, that of the Judge, who shall execute God's final vengeance on the wicked, is a character, which Jesus of Nazareth hath not yet assumed, otherwise than by declaring that hereafter He will assume it. His first coming was not to judge the world, but that the world through Him might be saved. Nevertheless "the Father hath committed all judgment unto the Son," who "in the last day shall come again in His glorious majesty, to judge both the quick and dead." In the mean time the particulars of the business upon which Messiah was to come appear no less evidently in the performances of Jesus than the personal characters in His Person. The Messiah was to try the tempers and dispositions of mankind. This Jesus does, by the duties, to which He calls us, and the doctrine, which He has left with us, duties, in which faith alone can engage us to persist: a doctrine, which the pure in heart ever will receive, and the children of this world ever will misinterpret and despise. Thus "many shall be purified and made white, and tried: but the wicked shall do wickedly." Messiah was to purify the sons of Levi. The doctrine of Jesus has in many nations reformed the public worship of God, and we trust that the reformation will gradually become general. Us of the Gentiles He has reclaimed from the abominations of idolatry, and hath taught us to loathe and execrate the rites, whereby our forefathers sought the favour of their devils: for they were not gods, the impure rites of human sacrifice and public prostitution, things, which it were unfit to mention or remember, but that we may the better understand from what a depth of corruption the mercy of God hath raised us. Blindness it must be confessed, is at present upon Israel: but the time shall come when they shall turn to the Lord, and when we shall unite with them in the pure worship of God, and in the just praises of the Lamb. "Then shall the offering of Judah and Jerusalem be pleasant unto the Lord: then shall the Lord Jesus come again to execute what remains of the Messiah's office, to absolve and to condemn." God grant that we may be enabled to abide the day of His coming and to stand when He appeareth. Bp Horsley

It is not possible to find any other Person, to whom the words of this prophecy will apply. From Malachi to the destruction of the temple no one can be named, except the Lord Jesus, who is able to make any pretension to the express characters in this prediction. St Mark therefore had good reason to introduce his Gospel with this unexceptionable text of Malachi, in order to shew the connexion between the Old and New Testament and that one began where the other ended. There was no Jew at that time, who did not agree to the application of this prophecy to the Messiah according to the letter. No Christian since hath been so wild as to fancy any other sense of it. Even the learned Grotius, so willing and so capable as he appears to be at other times, to invent doubtful meanings, yield up this prophecy to Christ, as concerning Him only, and no other person. Bp Chandler

1 God's judgment on the wicked, 2 and his blessing on the good. 3 He exhorteth to the study of his law, and telleth of Elijah's coming and office.

FOR, behold, the day cometh, that shall burn as an oven, and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be

6 — therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed] Because I am the same yesterday to day, and for ever, as My name Jehovah imports, and am true to My former promises, (see Exod vi 3 & b) therefore you still continue a people, and are not consumed as your iniquities deserve. And I will still preserve a remnant of you to make good to them the promises I made to your fathers. See Rom ix 29. W Lenth

7 Even from the days of your fathers &c] From this verse to the end of the 12th, the people are reprehended for withholding the legal tithes and oblations, and are assured that they are under a curse for this breach of the law, and that the opposite conduct will derive on them a blessing. Abp Newcome

11 — the devourer] Locusts, and such like devouring insects, compare Amos iv 9) blighting winds &c. W Lenth

13 Your words have been stout against me, &c] From this verse to the end of the 3d verse of the next chapter the Prophet expostulates with the wicked for their hard speeches, and declares that God will make a fearful distinction between them and the righteous. Abp Newcome

16 Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another] Or “spake one to another,” the word often is not in the Hebrew. By their pious discourses they confirmed each other in goodness, and armed themselves against the impressions which the foregoing wicked suggestions might make upon their minds. W Lenth

— and a book of remembrance was written before him &c] God took especial notice of what these pious persons did and said, it was as safely laid up in His memory, as if it had been entered into a register, in order to be produced at the day of judgment to their praise and honour. Compare Ps lvi 8. Is lxx 6. Dan vii 10, Rev xx 12. W Lenth The “book of remembrance”

is a beautiful allusion to the records kept by king. See 1sth vi 1. Abp Newcome

17 — in that day when I make up my jewels,] Or “special treasure as in the margin. The meaning is that although God suffer His “jewels” and “peculiar treasure” to lie for a while mingled with the rubbish and dross without distinction yet a day shall come when He will sever what is precious from what is vile, “the vessels of mercy” from “the vessels of wrath.” Rom ix 22, 23, the “vessels of honour” from the “vessels of dishonour,” 2 Tim ii 20 and then shall appear who are His, and who are otherwise. Dr Pocock

18 Then shall ye return, and discern &c] Then shall you change your minds and discern that God did always observe the actions of men. Dr Pocock Or “then shall ye again discern” that is, God shall give you a new proof that He put a difference between the good and the bad, and shall thereby fully answer your objections to His providence. W Lenth

Chap IV ver 1 Behold the day cometh &c] The connection of these words with the preceding is so apparent, that there seems no reason why they should have been separated, and made the beginning of a new chapter. The words themselves are an image or description of the final judgment on the Jews in their destruction, and in image or representation of the last general judgment on all mankind. The former was certainly then to come on the Jews if not prevented by their repentance, as it was not the latter is yet to come, but shall in God's appointed time, as certainly come, as if it were already present. Of both therefore it might then be said “Behold the day cometh” that is it shall certainly come, and the description is so full of terror that it may be well applied both to one and to the other. The primary intention however of the Prophet seems to have been to describe the judgment

— the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings ] The Messiah is called here the Sun of righteousness with healing in his wings to signify that His light clears up men's understandings and drives away the darkness of their minds and that His rays and kindly warmth will heal all the diseases of their souls. W Lenth Compare Isa lx 1—3 Rev xii 1

What the sun is to the world that Christ is to His Church. As the sun gives not only light to the world, but heat, motion, and activity to all things in it, and invigorates the earth and makes it fruitful, so does Christ, the Sun of righteousness, cause righteousness to spring up in His Church, and being long since risen, He shines continually upon it with healing in His wing, or gives even the wholesome benign influences of His Holy Spirit whereby He heals us of our unfruitfulness, and all our spiritual distempers. Bp Beveridge

— and ye shall go forth, and grow up &c ] This promise of deliverance was manifestly made good to the Christians, who were warned of God to go forth of Jerusalem before it was invaded by the Roman army by which means they were rescued from the common destruction that came upon the unbelievers and continued thriving and vigorous (compare Ps xcii 14) whilst the rest of the nation were consumed with divers kinds of death. Dr Pocock W Lenth

3 And ye shall tread down the wicked &c ] The righteous shall triumph in the destruction of the ungodly, is conquerors to trample on the carcasses of those that are slain in battle. Compare 2 Sam xxii 45 Mic vii 10 Zech x 5 W Lenth

4 Remember ye the law of Moses &c ] Ye are not to expect any Prophets for the time to come, till the forerunner of the Messiah appears: so your chief care must be to attend to the instruction which Moses has given in his law, the most solemn part of which was delivered to him in an audible manner upon mount Horeb. Exod xix 9 Deut iv 10 This your lawgiver plainly speaks of the Messiah and instructs you to expect His coming and to obey His command. Deut xviii 15 W Lenth

5 Behold I will send you Elijah the prophet ] The same person who is called the messenger or forerunner of the Messiah, chap

4 ¶ Remember ye the law of Moses my servant, which I commanded unto him in Horeb for all Israel, with the statutes and judgments

5 ¶ Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the LORD

6 And he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse in 1. It was the unanimous sense of the Jews, that 'I ha should first come and restore all things, Mark ix 12 John i 91 This they understood of the coming of Elias in person, see Eccles xlviii 10 Our Saviour has interpreted this Elias to be John the Baptist, Matt xi 14, xvii 12, 13 W Lenth

6 And he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children &c ] The passage may be translated, "He shall turn the heart of the fathers with the children, &c," that is, he shall do his part to cause a national reformation to convert fathers and children, all together, from their evil practices, and restore a true sense of religion, which was then dwindled into form, and so remove "the curse, the utter excision, denounced upon this land, namely, Judea. In Scripture he is said to do a thing, who does every thing proper and likely to effect it, though the effect be not produced. The real Elijah in A.D. 68 days did no more: nor were his endeavours followed with success. Bp Chandler
